RAPPERSCHWYL.—Lucerne to Knonau, 10 English miles; Knonau to St. Wolfgang, 6½ miles. A good road to Zug, the Righi, St. Wolfgang, Gisliker-brucke, Brucke, Dierikon, and Ebikon; whence passing the monument of the Swiss guards, we enter

—From Lucerne the tourist may proceed per steamer to FLUELEN, distance about twenty-four English miles; the voyage is made in about three hours: see list of steamers, page 232. The fare varies from 1 franc to 4 francs, and the boat touches at Vitznau, etc. The lake is very interesting in its natural proportions, is also singularly so by its historical recollections. Its shores witnessed the memorable events that guaranteed freedom to Switzerland.

Leaving Lucerne—starting place near to the Hof Brücke—we soon hail Meggenhorn, and sail along through undulating hills, rich in verdure, and studded with picturesque villas and cottages—a scene beautiful in itself, but shadowed into a dark grandeur by Mount Pilatus. Further up, near the Bay of Kussnacht, to the right, is the Castle of Neu Habsburg. At the other side of the bay appears the stupendous mass of the Rigi, whose sides are studded with forests, at the base of which lie fields, gardens, and cottages.

4. ASCENT OF THE RIGI.—Now done easily by rail from Vitznau, where the steamer disembarks passengers (see p. 240 and 503). But the pedestrian, if inclined to dispense with the rail, may make an ascent from Weggis. A boy, for 2 francs may be obtained to carry a knapsack or carpet bag to the top. If a horse is taken, the man who leads the horse acts as guide. The path takes the direction of Helligra Kreutz; after which we next come to the Cold Baths, where we find a wooden inn, a small Chapel of the Virgin, and the Spring of the Sisters' Fountain. The first crucifix on the Kussnacht side is met at Leeboden and a walk or ride through a succession of rich pasturage, brings the tourist to the Rigi Staffel see page 503. Half-an-hour's walk further on brings him to Kulm, the most celebrated summit see page 503. From the Kulm is the best view. Another path branches off from Leeboden towards the right, in sight of the following interesting objects. From the north side very good views are obtainable of the Lake of Zug and of the town of Arth. On the west Lucerne can be distinctly seen; whilst on the south the objects seen are the Lakes of Alpnach and Sarnen, the Stanserhorn and Buochserhorn mountains; behind which rise the mountain ranges of Berne, Unterwalden, and Uri—an unbroken reef—with their glaciers, embracing the Engelberger Rothstock, and the Titlistock. On the east are the snowy peaks of Glarus and Appenzell.

Resuming our journey towards Fluelen, the steamer proceeds through the Nosses, immediately after passing which, we find ourselves shut in by high mountains. After running through the oval basin called the Gulf of Buochs, it touches at Beckenreid and at GERSAU, a very picturesque little village, and a delightful spot to stay for a while (en Pension Müller), and make a few excursions on the Lake, which is here very picturesque. The Rigi-Scheideck (Hotel and Pension under the same proprietary as the Rigi-Kulm and Rigi-First, see p. 503), can also be reached from here; ascent 2½ hours; tariff for horse 7 fr., with a beautiful prospect, gradually widening from the Lake at the foot to the snowy Alps of the Bernese Oberland. We then reach Brunnen, opposite which we change our entire course and sail along the Bay of Uri for Grutli, a short mile or two from which is Tell's Chapel. At the head of the lake is

5. FLUELEN—described at page 493.—From Fluelen, the road proceeds to Andermatt, via Altdorf, and the PASS OF ST. GOTHARD; Bürglen, birthplace of William Tell; Amsteg, where there are good inns; and WASEN, a village on the left bank of the Reuss. Thence to

THE DEVIL'S BRIDGE.—The stern and savage grandeur of this portion of the Pass far excels that of all the rest. Just above the bridge, the road passes through a tunnel cut through the rock, called Urnerloch, into the beautiful valley of Urseren. About one mile further brings us to ANDERMATT.—A small village with about 700 inhabitants, and the chief place of the valley, 4750 feet above the level of the sea. Honey, cheese, and splendid trout can be had here. Behind Andermatt a bridle-path leads over the Oberalp, and by its lake to Disentis, in the Grisons.

Taking the direct road from Andermatt, we arrive (3 m.) at Hospenthal, under the St. Gothard Pass, 4800 ft. above sea where the Furca Road comes in. HOTEL MEYERHOF, where Church service (S. P. G.) is held in the Season. Bysleeping here an hour is gained in the morning for an early arrival at the Grimsel to ensure a bed—late comers are often obliged to sleep on the floor. After passing Realp, where there is a small Inn, we enter a monotonous valley, which terminates at the Furca. After a brief repose, we descend by a steep and rugged road, to the Glacier of the Rhone. The road skirts the glacier to the lower extremity, where a dirty stream issues forth—this is the source of the rapid Rhône. A wooden bridge conducts the traveller to a small Inn, the only habitation between the Furca and the Grimsel, where a few beds may be had. Ascending the road to Grimsel, look down on the glacier, which here seen to more advantage than from below. On the top of the Mayenwand is the small gloomy Lake of the Dead. A line of poles marks the road from the Hospice of St. Gothard, situated lower down in the valley. On arriving at Grimsel, lose no time in securing a bed. Table d'hôte in the evening, 1856. A splendid panoramic view of the Grimsel, and of the adjacent peaks and glaciers, can be enjoyed from the summit of the Sidelhorn, on the right of the path to the Furca.

6. FROM GRIMSEL TO GRINDELWALD, via MEYRINGEN—Distance forty-one English miles.—Leave Grimsel early in the morning, and if the weather be fine, the descent to Meyringen will afford a day of pleasure without fatigue. At first, not a plant or shrub is visible, gradually vegetation begins, and soon the road is bounded by fine pine forests. At Handeck is a little wooden house close to the FALLS OF THE AAR, one of the noblest cataracts in Switzerland. It is best seen from the bridge above. There are several fine points of view during the descent. One hour and a half beyond Handeck is Guttanen, and an hour beyond is Imhof, where there is a carriage road to Meiringen. From Meiringen p. 500) to Grindelwald the distance is about 21 English miles; and the journey is accomplished in about eight hours.

From Grindelwald to the Wengern Alp, on the way to Lauterbrunnen, is a journey of 3½ hours. On the summit of the Pass are several inns, (whose resources are, during the travelling season, generally taxed to the uttermost.) The houses are all wooden, and widely scattered over the banks of the torrent. It is 2450 feet above the level of the sea, and buried, as it were, among precipices. The Staubbach fall of water is less than a mile from the inn, and is one of the loftiest in Switzerland. Visitors should not leave here without exploring the upper valley of Lauterbrunnen, or ascending to Mürren, a village commanding one of the most glorious views of the Jungfrau, etc., in the Bernese Alps, finer than that from the Wengern Alp. The ascent may be accomplished on horseback. Pedestrians may proceed to the top of the Schilthorn, some way further; a still more magnificent prospect. There are good Inns at MURREN (p. 501), but it is easy to return to Lauterbrunnen in the day. Invalids may reach Mürren in a Chaise-à-porteur. Very little of interest is to be met with on the route to INTERLAKEN—described at page 496. At Zweylutschinen there is a very good little hotel.

8. INTERLAKEN TO THUN.—There is an excellent road to Thun each side of the lake. The journey by water is preferable. A rail conveys the tourists to Neuhaus, where the steamer takes them up for Thun. On the voyage up the lake is the village of Merligen, at the rear of which is the Justis Thal. Nearly opposite the Nase is the Castle of Spiets, founded, it is said, by Attila. An Hotel has been recently built near the top of the Niesen commanding a superb view. The access is from Thun or Frütigen. As we get into Thun, on the south side, is the beautiful château of Schadau, in the midst of a charming garden.

9. THUN—described at page 506.—The distance from Thun to Berne is about 17 English miles, and the journey is made by railway down the Valley of the Aar. The road on a clear day commands a very fine view of the Alps, and passes Munsingen, where the oligarchical rule was overturned, in 1849, and a new constitution adopted. The Stockhorn and Niesen mountains on the left are also passed

10. BERNE—described at page 491. The road leaves Berne by the Gate of Morat, and proceeds as far as Neueneck, where the stream separating the two cantons, Berne and Freiburg, is crossed. Freiburg is one of the most picturesque places in Switzerland. Beyond, is seen the Suspension Bridge, over which the carriage road enters Freiburg. The rail now finished, taking another line reaches

11. FREIBURG—described at page 493: and thence goes on to Lausanne and Vevey, past Romont; a branch is now open from Romont, to

Digitized by Google

Bulle, the capital of the Gruyères. This Railway opens up a beautiful tract of country for tourists. Bulle lies at the foot of the Moleson, a mountain the view from which is said to equal if not excel the Rigi. By the Bulle-Romont Railway tourists can now go by a much shorter route from Lausanne and Geneva to Thun and Interlaken by the beautiful valley of the Simmenthal.

12. Vevey—on the Lake of Geneva, described at page 506.—From Vevey to Martigny, by Monthreux, Villeneuve, Aigle, and Bex. Leaving Vevey, the first object of interest met with is the Tour de Peilz—a fortified castle, about 1 mile from Vevey and 2½ from Clarens, described by Rousseau in the Nouvelle Heloise, and referred to in Childe Harold. From this place a splendid view of the Lake and valley of the Rhone, and of the opposite shore, can be had. Here jutting rocks, towering ruggedly from the banks of the lake, succeed to the gorgeous scenery of hills and vine-clad undulations that adorn the banks of the lake all the way from Geneva.

At Montreux there are many good hotels and pensions, see p. 501. Two miles beyond Montreux is the celebrated Castle of Chillon, open to visitors. It communicates with the road by a wooden bridge, stands solitary and alone, and is a building of the thirteenth century, which owes its origin to Amadeus IV. of Savoy. Byron has immortalized it in his "Prisoner of Chillon."

Beyond is

Villeneuve.—(See p. 507.) On the eastern extremity of the Lake of Geneva. Here the road leaves the borders of the lake, and enters the valley of the Rhone. The railway is continued by Roche, Aigle, and St. Triphon to

Bex.—On the road to the Simplon: see p. 491.

At Monthey, on the Ligne d'Italie line from Bouveret to St. Maurice; distance 15 miles. There you diverge to the delightful valley of Viège, leading to Champéry. Itinerary—Trois Torrents; Val d'Illiez (Hotel du Repos and pension, 4fr 50c. per day); Champery, 3 hours, hotel and pension, see p. 492. Ascents from Champéry: Dent de Bonnavaux six hours, splendid view; Dent du Midi, 9 hours up (guide, 13 fr.); View of Northern and Southern Chains, Berne and Valais, and Lake of Geneva; the Val d'Illiez is a favourite and delightful resort, communicating with Sixt by several passes. Of these, one deserves to be especially noticed, i.e., that by the Col de Coux et de Golize, 8 hours, fine views; thence to Samoens, near Sixt.

Bridge of St. Maurice.—This bridge connects the cantons of Vaud and Vallais. Immediately beyond it, on the left bank of the Rhone, is the old town itself, embedded among mountains.

St. Maurice (See p. 505), and the traveller should make it a point to see the Abbey, a building of the fourth century. Its objects of attraction are the Museum of Ancient Art—a vase of Saracen execution, presented by Charlemagne—a golden crosier of a spirelike form, exquisitely carved—and a second one, presented by Bertha, Queen of Burgundy.

A little past St. Maurice, on the other side of the river, is the Bath-house of Lavey, over a sulphurous spring. Rising far above the road is the Hermitage of our Lady of the Rock. Seven miles further is the celebrated waterfall of the Pissevache, the fall of which is about 120 feet. The road crosses the Trient, as it descends from the Tête Noire.

13. Martigny—described at page 500.—The distance from Martigny to Chamounix is about 23 or 24 miles, and may be accomplished by mule or on foot, or by coach, or the new carriage road. The road commands a very good view of Mont Blanc. The path from Martigny leads over the Forclaz. The hamlet of Trient lies to the left, deep in the valley. After climbing up a fatiguing ascent, the traveller enters on the pasturages and farm-houses of Herbagères. From the top there is a most magnificent view of Mont Blanc, and the Aiguilles of La Tour, l'Argentière, Verte, de Dru, Charmoz, Midi, and Vosa. To the right are the Aiguilles Rouges, whilst beyond them, enclosing the valley, stretches the Brévent, to the rear of which is seen the Mortine, supporting the snow-capped summit of the Buët.

On the descent the pastures of Charamillian are crossed to the village of La Tour, a little below which the path meets the road to Chamounix by the Tête Noire. To reach Chamounix by the Tête Noire Pass, one of the most strikingly beautiful in Switzerland, the preceding route is left at the village of Trient. At the distance of one league is the mountain inn, de la Tête Noire, on the angle of a precipice 1200 feet above the meeting of the waters Trient and Eau Noir. On the opposite side of the ravine is Finshauts, watered by five or six cataracts, which in the distance look like silver cords. Beyond the hotel is a short tunnel, and after passing it, the deep gorge of the Eau Noir. A few miles further is the La Pert Chaeltard—all that now remains of the ancient fortress, built to defend this frontier pass. Soon after is the cascade de la Barberine, 200 feet high from Mont Tannevergues; near the cascade is another excellent mountain inn. Beyond it is the village of Valorsine, the Aiguille de l'Orient and Mont Buët. The route joins that of the Col de Balme at the village of Argentierres.

14. Chamounix—described at page 492.—The distance from here to Geneva is about 82 English miles, and the journey is performed by mule or voiture to St. Martin, thence by diligence to Geneva, and the time occupied is nine or ten hours.

Sallenches—A small town about 26 or 27 miles from Geneva, containing 2000 inhabitants. From the bridge is one of the best Alpine views of Mount Blanc. On coming within a short distance of Maglin, the road nears Nant d'Arpine, one of the highest waterfalls in Savoy. The next village is Cluses—containing about 1590 inhabitants, and famous for its watchmaking trade. It was burnt down in 1843, but has since been rebuilt.

From Annemasse, we obtain a distant view of Mont Blanc. It is six miles thence to

15. Geneva.—See page 494.—The journey to Geneva to Lausanne can be made by steamer daily, as well as by railway. Beyond Coppet, an inconsiderable village, is inhabitants, and possessing a château, once the residence of Madame de Staël.

Coppet.—A small town containing about

Morges.—A small town, with 2000 inhabitants. Adjoining its Port is the venerable old Castle of Wufflens, said to have been built by Queen Bertha.

Before entering Lausanne, the view of the town is very beautiful indeed. At the entrance of the suburbs is the village of Ouchy, with an inn; see page 502.

16. Lausanne.—See page 497.—Lausanne to Basle, by Yverdun, Neufchatel, and Berne; or by Fribourg and Berne. Both journeys are made by railway.

17. Yverdun.—See page 507.—From here there is both rail and steamer to Neuchatel, passing Grandson, a small town on the lake, three miles from Yverdun.

18. Neuchatel.—described at p. 505.—Thence by railway or steamer, on to 19 Bienne.—See page 491.

20. To Basle.—Conveyance by railway; also by diligence, through the valley by the left bank of the Suze.

ROUTE 12.

Martigny to Milan, by Sion, Brieg, Domo d'Ossola, and the Passage of the Simplon.

(Distance 179 English miles.)

An International Railway is projected over the Simplon, chiefly under French patronage.

Conveyance.—Diligences run daily to Milan, in 58 or 60 hours, making Brieg a sleeping-place. Reached by rail. See page 246.

After quitting Martigny, the road lies between sterile rocks and mountains, which, on passing Riddes, change to luxuriant pasturages, rich vineyards, picturesque villages with churches, and the ruins of ancient castles.

Sion.—It stands on the declivities of three hills, with a castle on each. One was the bishop's residence; the second is Valeria; the third called Tourbillon, contained portraits of the bishops of Sion from the year 300, is now in ruins. Here are several Roman antiquities, including a half-effaced inscription to the memory of Augustus, near the door of the cathedral.

Leaving Sion, the route lies through a beautiful country, irrigated by the Rhone.

At Pfyn is the boundary between the French and German languages.

Leuk, nine miles above which up the gorge of the Dala are the Baths of Leuk or Loueche; see p. 498. Travellers in carriages usually turn off here to visit the Baths, and ascend the lofty Gemmi Pass.

Tourtemagne.—See p. 506. Behind the fine cascade is a view of the entire Alpine chain, connecting the Simplon and St. Gothard.

Visp.—Is seated at the junction of the Rhône and the Visp—a river as large as the Rhone. It was once the residence of many noble families, whose palaces are now in ruins; and is now a miserable village, having been fearfully shattered by the earthquake in 1855. From Visp to Zermatt (p. 507), 30 miles, mule path, to the right. See Tour of Monte Rosa, in next route. From Visp 7 m. to Giva; and a mile further Brieg, where the ascent of the Simplon begins.

Viesch (see p. 507) is on the upper valley of the Rhône, beyond Brieg on the route to the Grimsel. The ascent of the Æggischhorn is made from Viesch in 3½ hours, and from whence there is one of the grandest panoramas in the Alps. There is a good Inn at Viesch, and another on the Æggischhorn; see p. 487.

From Brieg to the left is the road to the Rhône Glacier with the footpath to the Hospital on the St. Gothard-road, and to Meyringen, by the Grimsel pass. The Simplon Railway ends here, and the Diligence goes to Arona in 15 hours.

Brieg.—A small town (pop. 800) and the usual resting-place for travellers crossing the Simplon. The only buildings worth notice are the Château and the Jesuits' College. At this town the Simplon road leaves the valley of the Rhône. The distance from Brieg to Domo d'Ossola is about fourteen leagues or forty-two English miles. It takes seven hours to reach the Simplon, and three or four to Domo d'Ossola. Ascent of the Simplon, see page 585 Domo d'Ossola.—It is nine miles from hence to Vogogna.—A small village, with the valley of Anzasca, leading up to Monte Rosa, opening up before it; a scene worthy of special notice.

Ornavasso.—Near this are the white marble quarries, from which stone for the Milan Cathedral was procured. At Gravellona the road crosses a large bridge, and following the road leading up its left bank, arrives in one hour, at Omegna on the Lake of Orta, (see p. 560), one of the most beautiful on the Italian border. Lago Maggiore, (see p. 558) and Isola Madre—the most northern of the Borromean Islands—here burst on the vision. Not far beyond this place will be found the rose granite quarries; the colour produced, it is said, by the felspar in it, which mineral abounds here in elegant flesh-coloured crystals.

Baveno.—(See p. 512.) Close to Lago Maggiore, and immediately in front of the Borromean Islands. Diligences from here to Arona in 2 hours; rail to Milan; see p. 254.

Boats.—To the Borromean Islands.

Asses may also be hired here at 4 frs. each, to ascend Monte Motterone, towering in the rear of the village, and commanding a magnificent panoramic view of the Alps. The top is 4,350 feet above the level of the sea. The descent may be made by the opposite side to Orta, in three hours, and from thence to Omegna in about two hours' walk. Steamers call for passengers off Isola Bella, on their upward and downward courses daily.

Pallanza.—The steamer calls here for passengers every morning at about half past 8 o'clock, and a boat plies between here and Baveno.

Lago Maggiore.—Was anciently called Lacus Verbanus. (For further description, see page 558.) The Palace on Isola Bella is worth seeing, and contains many very excellent paintings. There is also a very good Inn on the island. Isola Madre will repay a visit.

Below Baveno is Stresa, where there is an excellent hotel and pension. From Baveno and Stresa paths lead across Monte Motterone to Orta. One mile before reaching Arona is the great bronze statue of St. Charles Borromeo, by Zonelli, and measuring, with pedestal, 106 ft. in height. It stands on a hill overlooking

Digitized by Google

ARONA.—See page 511. Ferry-boat over the Ticino to

SESTO CALENDE.—The town is built on the left bank of the Ticino, shortly below the place it leaves the lake, and contains only one structure worthy of notice, the church of St. Donato, a building of the middle ages. Near Sesto Calende are interesting remains of ancient pile habitations. The route thence to Milan lies through the great Lombardo plain, a level route made between gardens and fruit trees. For Railway, see page 254. Passing

GALLERATE, whence there is a railroad to Varese, the Simplon road enters Milan through the Arco del Sempione, a structure begun by Napoleon, and finished in 1839 by the Austrians.

MILAN.—Described at page 520.

From the Æggischhorn and Viesch, by the Tosa Falls and Val Formazza, to Lago Maggiore; to Airolo on the St. Gothard Pass; and the Monte Rosa District.

From VIESCH, proceed either direct, or follow Rhine valley to Munster and Ulrichen; good quarters at Ulrichen. Hence you ascend the Eginenthal, and from it you go up a tremendous steep slope to the Gries glacier, which you cross—a spot haunted by the lammergeier, and where chamois are often seen. Horses often cross the glacier, and ladies have passed over; but it is prudent to dismount. Scene at top very wild and solitary. Geological formation of district interesting; much true granite.

Descent brings you to first village ANDERMATTEN Upper part of valley inhabited by a vigorous, industrious German race. Inn at Andermatten—Albergo del Caval Bianco. Next place, small chapel of San Lorenzo, just above Falls of Tosa or Toccia, whose waters fall over a succession of cataracts of 500 feet, forming in some respects (combined height and volume) the most remarkable waterfall in the Alps.

Val Formazza, below the Falls, is exquisitely beautiful all the way to Domo d'Ossola. At Fopiano you meet the first Italian-speaking village. By the Falls you can strike off, and rise by the chapel of San Giacomo, near the Nufenen Pass; summit covered with rhododendrons, and commanding a splendid view of Finsteraarhorn. Reaching All'Acqua, 5266 feet above the sea (dirty inn) passing under a beautiful azure-coloured glacier, you come to the beautiful Val Vedretto, and Airolo on the St. Gothard Pass, 3609 feet above the sea, with an inn. This Pass is easily passed by horses.

The road down from the Tosa Falls to Crevola and Domo d'Ossola, is through scenes of perfect beauty, passing the defile of Fopiano, with chestnuts, vines, &c., and garnets in the schist, to Premia (Hotel de l'Ange)

The lower part of the valley of the Tosa is called Val Antigoria, filled with smiling villages, Cravegna, Crodo, &c., picturesque in campaniles, glancing streams, and emerald meadows.—Distance from Obergesteien to Premia, 10½ leagues (31½ miles). From Tosa falls to Premia, 4½ leagues (13½ miles.) From Tosa falls to Pommat, 1½ league (4½ miles); to Andermatten, 1½ league.

The passage over the Gries, down Val Formazza, brings the traveller to DOMO D'OSSOLA: and, continuing down the Tosa valley, towards Baveno and Lago Maggiore, he reaches VOGOGNA, at the entrance of VAL ANZASCA leading up to the finest scenery in the Alps. Vogogna, 2½ leagues or nearly 9 miles from Domo d'Ossola, has an inn, the Corona, and a posting station.

Scenery up Val Anzasca to Macugnaga is perfectly lovely, with Monte Rosa towering above luxuriant southern vegetation, and azure transparent trout streams. Distance to Macugnaga, 8½ leagues (25½ miles). Best points—Ponte Grande, 1½ leagues (4½ miles); with a fair inn, and Ceppo Morelli, 2 leagues (6 miles), farther up. MACUGNAGA, a centre of splendid excursions. Hotels du Monte Rosa and of Monte Moro. Various passes lead from Macugnaga to the other favoured Italian valleys south of Monte Rosa.

Three routes have been classified into High Passes, Intermediate Passes, and Lower Passes.

1. Beginning with the Lower Passes, Macugnaga communicates with Orta by two delightful routes, both of which strike off from Ponte Grande. 1. By Val Strona. Footpaths lead from Ponte Grande by Col de Campello (about 6400 ft.), 5 hours. Campello village has a poor inn. Val Strona presents some of the most charming sylvan scenery in North Italy. The botany and geology of the whole district are full of interest. Cataracts of emerald streams, fern-clad rocks, and every scenic beauty, topped by the snows of Rosa, complete the attractions of this lovely valley. At Omegna, where there is a poor and dear inn, you reach the Lake of Orta, (see p. 560), a paradise of beauty. It is the best plan to proceed to Orta by boat, 2 hours 10 minutes; excellent quarters at Orta.

2. Another route from Ponte Grande to Orta is by Val Mastalone, 55 to 60 kiloms. (36 miles). Almost too much for one day; best plan to sleep at Varallo (532). From Ponte Grande you proceed by Val d'Olocchia, through magnificent ancient woods of chestnuts and other timber, to Col Barranca (3780 feet), over swelling pasture ground, to Fobello, in a charming, striking situation. The female peasantry are noted for physical beauty, and their graceful costume. Descending to RIMELLO, where there is a small inn, with a church having curious frescoes, in the midst of a delightful panorama of rocks, woods, and mountains, you arrive at a defile defying description, and combining all the elements of grandeur. Pont della Guia particularly striking. At length you reach VARALLO, from which Orta is reached by the Colma (6 hours), the road passing through vast forests, and among immense granite blocks. View from Colma very grand over Pennine chain.

Digitized by Google

Varallo is in the Val Sesia, from which a succession of Lower passes lead to Aosta. From Orta there is a delightful path over Monte Motterone, with one of the finest panoramic views in the Alps, to Baveno and Stresa, each with a good hotel on Lago Maggiore. See p. 558.

From Varallo a route leads by the Val Sesia to ALAGNA, 42 kilom. (26 miles), 7 to 8 hours' carriage road to Piode. Car route on to Mollia, and mule path thence to Alagna. (Hotel Monte Rosa; clean, but dear). Excursions to Pile Alpe, Cima delle Pisse, &c. From Alagna a lower pass leads by Col d'Ollen, and to that delightful centre of the Italian valleys, Gressonay (p. 519), near the beautiful Lys glacier. (Col d'Ollen, 9554 feet; distance, 6 to 7 hours' walk.)

From Gressonay, Col de Renzola, to Brussone in Val Challant. Fine view of Mont Blanc from Col. Homely inn. Proceed on, over Col de Jon to Chatillon, in Val d'Aosta. Five hours' mule path from Gressonay to Brussone; Col de Jon presents fine park scenery. Four and a half hours Brussone to Chatillon.

2. Intermediate Passes.—1. Turlo (9088 feet), from Macugnaga to Alagna. This is the nearest way, but fatiguing and stony, and with fewer fine views than most of these passes. 2. Alagna to Col d'Ollen, to Gressonay, and thence by Betta Furka (8204 feet) to St. Jacques d'Ayas, in Val Challant. Thence by Col de Portola, 7995 feet high, to Val Tournanche, one day's walk; or from Brussone to Chatillon by Col de Joux, 4 to 4½ hours. Mule path. Fine forests and pastures. View of Monte Rosa and Mont Cervin.

Other intermediate passes from Gressonay, which is an excellent centre of excursions, lead to Riva by the Col de Valdobbia, 6 to 7 hours (8250 feet). Fine view of Monte Rosa. Inn at Riva bad; but you can proceed, to sleep at Mollia.

2. Riva to Rimasco by Col de Moud, 7 hours (7467 feet). Splendid rhododendrons and fir forests.

3. Riva and Rimasco also communicate by two other passes (the Vals Sesia and Sermenza), 8 hrs. Carriage roads. Waters of Sermenza are beautifully ultramarine; and this is a capital district for trout-fishing, and affords the choicest scenery in the Alps.

3. The following are the higher passes of the Italian valleys:—

1. From Macugnaga to Pile Alpe, by the Col delle Loccie; 1 day. 14 or 15 hours. Hard day's work. Guides wanted (about 12,000 ft.). Crevasses, bergschrunds, &c., on the way. Pile Alpe, or Chalets de Boars, by Col delle Piscie (10,374 feet).

2. Gressonay St. Jean to Breuil, by Betta Furka (8200 feet), and Cimes Blanches (9918 feet), 9 to 10 hours. Guide wanted. There is a series of still higher passes, only attempted by Alpine Club-men and chamois-hunters. Among them we may notice the new Welesthor (passed by ladies), Macugnaga to Zermatt; see page 507.

2. Sesia Joch, Alagna and Zermatt.

3. Lys Joch, Gressonay to Zermatt, the highest pass in the Alps.

4. The Tour of Monte Rosa may be done in a round of 16 days, from Visp or Brieg, thus—To Saas, 1 day. The Fee Valley and to Mattmarksee, 1. Over M. Morol to Macugnaga, 1. To Belvedere and Glacier of Macugnaga Pedriolo etc, 1. Macugnaga to Ponte Grande, 1. Over Baranca Pass to Fobello, 1. Varallo, the Monte Sacro and M. di Tre Croci, 1. Varallo to Alagna, 1. Pile Alpe Val di Bors and Glacier, 1. Alagna by Col d'Ollen to Gressonay, 1. Gressonay to Lys Glacier, 1. Gressonay by Col di Renzola and Col de Jon to Châtillon, 1. Châtillon to Breuil, 1. Breuil by Col St. Théodule to Zermatt, 1. Up the Riffelberg and Gorner Grat, 1. Zermatt to Visp, etc., 1.

ROUTE 14.

A Fortnight's Tour in the Autumn, through South Germany.

[BY H. C.]

LONDON TO PARIS, via FOLKESTONE AND BOULOGNE, in 9¼ hours.

PARIS.—See page 379.

PARIS TO STRASSBURG (page 447) by Railway, in 10 to 16 hours.

STRASSBURG TO FREIBURG IN BREISGAU, by Railway in 3½ hours. See p. 439.

At Freiburg, travellers should ascend the Schlossberg, a little hill about a quarter of an hour's walk from the Neustadt, and which commands a beautiful view of the valley of the Treisam, having the hills of the Black Forest in the distance. The very beautiful Cathedral, with its magnificent modern wood carving, is especially worthy of notice.

FREIBURG TO SCHAFFHAUSEN, through the HOLLENTHAL and BLACK FOREST (51 miles). See page 581.

SCHAFFHAUSEN.—Described at page 504.

Steamers daily to Constance up the Rhine—a beautiful sail in 6 hours. Railway, pp. 132, 238, 245; Eilwagen daily, along the side of the river, in 4½ hrs.

The road to Constance is carried along the Swiss, i.e., south side of the Rhine, and presents many beautiful views of the river, whose banks are here and there richly wooded; also of the Unter See, or Lower Lake of Constance. At Constance, Baden is re-entered.

The Rhine is crossed by a curious, long, covered wooden bridge.

Lake Constance is navigated by steamers to the principal places upon its banks. The traffic has received a considerable impetus from the port of Friedrichshafen, the terminus of the Wurtemberg railway, and by the completion of the Bavarian railway to Lindau. The northern banks of the lake are flat, but the southern or Swiss side has the mountains of Appenzell and St. Gall, in the back-ground.

Rorschach (Pop. 3500; Hotels—Pension Zurkrone, Seehof, Hirsch) is in Canton St. Gall, on the Lake, 9 miles from St. Gall, 1½ hour from Lindau; with which it has a trade across the Lake. Excursion to the old castle of St. Anna and Marienberg Abbey, on the Rossbühel Hill, above the town, whence there is a fine view of the Lake, and of the Mountains; another, to the Meldegg, past Walzenhausen, a water-cure in Appensell. Rail to Heiden, Constance, Altstätten, Bregenz, &c (pp. 244, 245).

Digitized by Google

Lindau (3½ hrs. steam from Constance)—This Bavarian frontier town is built on an island in the north-eastern corner of the lake, and connected with the mainland by a long wooden bridge. It was a Roman station. Part of a wall, called the "Heidenmauer," is attributed to that people. It suffered greatly during the 30 Years' war, having been devastated by the Swedes. Population upwards of 5000.

A pleasant excursion of 6½ miles may be made from here to Bregenz. The road lies along the shores of the lake, and at Loschau crosses the Austrian frontier. Bregens is a good starting-point for an excursion into the Tyrol, as Innsbruck can be reached from here in about 2½ days' posting, or by a daily diligence through Feldkirch and Landeck. Travellers should not omit to ascend the "Gebhardsberg"—a hill behind Bregens—the summit of which may be reached in about twenty minutes, and commands a magnificent view of the Lake Constance, and the snow-capped mountains of Appenzell.

LINDAU to AUGSBURG. By railway, past the old imperial cities of Kempten and Kaufbauern.

AUGSBURG.—See page 433.

AUGSBURG to MUNICH, Railway (39 miles) in 2 hours.

The Bavarian railways having only one line of rails, and the trains having to wait at certain stations for others to pass, considerable delays frequently occur. The country is flat, and only enlivened by occasional distant glimpses of the Bavarian Highlands. Shortly before reaching Munich, the royal palace of Nymphenburg is passed.

MUNICH AND ITS ART COLLECTIONS— See page 444. The colossal Statue of Bavaria, by Schwanthaler, a female figure in bronze, of most beautiful proportions, advantageously placed on a slope.

Return to Augsburg. AUGSBURG to ULM. By railway.

The country is undulating, and in some parts richly wooded. From Gunzburg, the road is carried nearly parallel with, though not in sight of, the Danube, to Ulm, where it crosses that river, which here forms the boundary between Bavaria and Wurtemberg.

ULM is now strongly fortified to defend the valley of the Danube. [See page 448.] It was formerly an imperial city, and enjoyed an extensive commerce. Large quantities of snails are fattened in this neighbourhood, and exported to Austria, where they are considered a great delicacy, and much consumed during Lent. The emperor Maximilian I., in order to refute the accusation brought against him by the citizens of Ulm, that he had drank too much wine to be able to attend to public business, climbed to the top of the tower of the cathedral, (316 English feet high,) and there balanced himself on one foot, swinging the other round in the air, which foolhardy feat is recorded by an inscription.

ULM to STUTTGART. Railway, in 4 hours.

Passing through a picturesque country, under the Swabian Alps, and affording many beautiful views of the valleys of the Fils and Neckar; one of the most striking of which is at Geislingen, at the mouth of a deep defile, one side of which is richly clothed with foliage, while the other presents a series of gigantic rocks. The curves in the line of railway afford many different views of the gorges. Before reaching Goppingen, a town of 2500 inhabitants, on the Fils, the Hohenstaufenberg, a conical hill about 2 miles to the right of the line, should be noticed; on it stood the castle of the noble family of Hohenstaufen, which for upwards of a century (1140 to 1250) furnished emperors to Germany. The railway then passes Plochingen, at the junction of the Fils and Neckar; follows the valley of the latter by Esslingen (described at page 429) to CANNSTADT, an ancient Roman station, and now much frequented by the inhabitants of Stuttgart on account of its mineral waters; and thence to Stuttgart.

The Russian, or rather Greek, chapel, is erected on the spot where formerly stood the feudal castle of Wurtemberg, the cradle or Stammschloss of the ancestors of the present reigning family.

STUTTGART.—A pleasant, clean city. See p. 448. The railway station is in the Schloss Gasse, close to the Palace, and quite in the centre of the town. The Palace gardens, which extend upwards of two miles along the valley of the Nesen to the elegant Grecian villa of Rosenstein. The orange trees are remarkably fine.

STUTTGART to HEILBRONN. Railway, in 2 hours.

Chiefly along the banks of the Neckar and Esz, past Ludwigsburg, a city with 11,600 inhabitants, once intended for the capital of Wurtemberg; then winding round the base of Hohenasperg, an isolated hill with a fortress on its summit, now used as a prison, the line reaches Bietigheim station, from which a railway joins the Baden line at Bruchsal. Crossing the Enz by a curious lattice bridge, it reaches the valley of the Neckar, the course of which it follows very closely to Heilbronn.

Heilbronn contains upwards of 21,206 inhabitants, almost entirely Protestants. There is a covered wooden bridge across the Neckar, similar to those seen in Switzerland. Its chief architectural ornament is the church of St. Kilian, whose tower, upwards of 220 feet high, is very beautiful. The holy spring, "der Heilige Brunnen," from which the city derives its name, is near the church. About three miles east of Heilbronn are the ruins of Weinsberg, called "Weibers Treue," woman's fidelity, to commemorate an occurrence in the wars between the Guelphs and Ghibelines, when Conrad III., having taken the castle, and intending to put all the garrison to the sword, permitted the women to leave the place in safety, along with whatever they could carry; the women accordingly marched out of the castle, each bearing her husband or her lover on her shoulders.

HEILBRONN to HEIDELBERG. Steamer, in 6 hrs.—The Descent of the Neckar can be made in 6 hours, but the return requires nearly 12, the current being strong. Steamers ply twice a-day in summer. Refreshments can be had on board; but the cuisine is indifferent. The scenery is almost everywhere lovely; and many parts will bear comparison with the finest parts of the Rhine, though on a smaller scale.

The most remarkable places are the following:—Right bank—JAXFELD, visited on account of its brine baths, and with Kalensen salt-works in the neighbourhood. Left bank—WIMPFEN, beautifully situated on the top of the steep and richly wooded bank of the river; a very ancient town, with a beautiful Gothic church, whose three spires form very prominent objects. Left—HEISSHEIM, a village of Baden, prettily situated at the foot of the ruined castle of Ehrenberg, one of the most beautiful on the Neckar. Right—Gundelsheim, with the Castle of Horneck, formerly a stronghold of the Teutonic knights. Right—Ruins of Hornberg, picturesquely situated, and overgrown with ivy. Left—Obrigheim, where the river is crossed by a bridge of boats. Left—Meimeburg, an ancient castle in ruins, believed to have been destroyed during the Thirty Years' War. Right—Zwingenberg, formerly an extensive feudal fortress, defended by eight towers, five of which still remain: it belongs to the Margrave of Baden, who resides here a portion of every year. Right—EBERBACH, a very ancient village, and in the neighbourhood the Katzenbuckel, the highest mountain in the Odenwald. Right—Hirschhorn, with its walls and towers in ruins. Right—NECKARSTEINACH, the most charming of all the scenes on the banks of this picturesque stream—the four Castles of Vorderberg, Mittelberg, Hinterberg, and Schadeck, rising one above another, in close proximity, forming a tout ensemble not soon to be forgotten. They were formerly inhabited by the family of Landschaden The highest of them, called by the peasantry the "Swallow's Nest," is situated on the verge of a steep and inaccessible precipice, and presents a good specimen of a fastness of the robber knight of the middle ages. Left—Neckargemund, at the mouth of the Elsenz. Left—the Wolfsbrunnen, about two miles above Heidelberg, from which it is a pleasant walk along the banks of the river. In returning, a road, carried on the top of the high land, conducts to the castle of Heidelberg. Wolfsbrunnen is famous for its trout, which are preserved in reservoirs, and attain an enormous size. It is a favourite resort of the students from the university. Left—Heidelberg, see page 441.

HEIDELBERG to FRANKFORT, by Railway, in 3 hrs.
FRANKFORT to COLOGNE, by Railway and Rhine Steamer, in 9¼ hours.
COLOGNE to BRUSSELS, by Railway, in 7 hours.
BRUSSELS to LONDON, via CALAIS, in 10½ hours.

ROUTE 15.

Berne to Thun and Vevey, by the Simmenthal Saanen Chateaux d'Oex and Gruyeres, and Pass of the Dent de Jaman.

(Distance, 81 English miles.)

BERNE to Thun, see Route 11.—From Thun, a splendid road leads through the Simmenthal and a diligence runs in summer. The journey is rendered delightful by the beautiful and charming scenery with which it abounds. The entrance to the Simmenthal lies between the Stockhorn on the right and the Niesen on the left. It is approached from Thun by the road extending along the margin of the lake and by the banks of the Kander, to the spot where it meets the Simmen, a short distance from the castle of Wimmis, passed on the left.

ERLENBACH is a couple of miles further on, with the Stockhorn rising immediately behind it.

WEISSENBERG.—The Baths of Weissenberg are distant 2½ miles, winding along a romantic and picturesque defile. The Bath-house is constructed of wood: expense of baths and living, 9 or 10 fr. a day.

BOLTIGEN.—A small village built to the south of the castle of Simmeneck, 2725 feet above the level of the sea. Above are the ruins of the castle of Lanbeck.

ZWEISIMMEN—See p. 508. Here the road to Bulle and Vevey, verging towards the S.W., leaves the Simmenthal; and crossing the Saanen Moser, leads into SAANEN.—The principal village of the Valley of the Upper Sarine or Saane, all in pasture, and famous for the manufacture of cheese. From here is made the ascent of the Sonatsch Pass. The road, on leaving, is rugged and steep, and will take the traveller, in about 11 hours, to Sion, in the Valais. The Canton of Vaud is entered about a mile below Saanen.

ROUGEMONT—A small village of no note.

CHATEAU D'OEX.—A small village of 600 inhabitants, 3030 feet above the sea, rebuilt after a terrible conflagration. Crossing the Saanen we traverse the narrow pass of La Tine, amid mountains, rocks, and pines. The road, though rather narrow, is accessible to carriages; and 19½ hours will suffice to accomplish the journey from here to Vevey, with a carriage and pair of stout horses.

MONTBOVON.—A small but pretty village situated in the Canton of Freiburg. A horse-path over the Pass of Dent de Jaman, brings the traveller to Vevey in 6 hours. The views and scenery are perfect. The carriage road leading from Montbovon to Vevey, keeps to the valley of the Saanen. After making a long détour, it passes round the base of the Moleson, (6181 feet), and, winding under the hills, passes by GRUYERES—A quaint little town or village containing about 400 inhabitants. Its position is very picturesque, being built on the face of a hill, crowned with a castle, which is very remarkable, and an object worthy a visit. The district in which the town is situated is renowned for its cheeses. The old chapel of St. Théodule is also worth a visit. Within it is a monument and effigy of a Count of Gruyères, remarkable for their antiquity. Bulle to Vevey, see Route 11.

Several paths strike out from the Simmenthal, leading across the intervening molasse ridge to the head of the Lake of Geneva, and presenting some of the finest scenery in the Alps. Thus, if the traveller wish to proceed to Bex or Aigle, in the Canton de Vaud, on the railway from Vevey to Sion, he starts from Saanen. The road passes vestad on the Sarine, a village 3450 feet above the sea; then, crossing the Laubach, you cross the Sarine, and, passing the charming valley of Arnen, with its lovely mountain lake, surrounded by fir forests and pastures, you can reach the Col of Arnen and the Hotel of Diablerets, the centre of many excursions, and a good pension. This way, however, is steep and difficult.

The usual route proceeds from the foot of the Arnenthal to GSTEIG (Hotel, the Bear), 2½ hours from Saanen, situated in a deep ravine, under a great precipice that blocks out the sun for six weeks consecutively in winter. Passing a waterfall and crossing marshy ground, you reach the Col du Pillon, 1 hour 15 min. from Gsteig (4900 feet) in the midst of many cascades that swell the Dard, whose banks you follow to ORMONT Dessus, covered with pastures and chalets. Descending you cross the Grande Eau and reach the hamlet of Les Iles, in a delightful pastoral situation (1 hr. 10 min.), and ascending again you reach in 1 hour the Col de la Croix (8392 feet), with a fine view of the Ormont and Illiez valleys and of Dent du Midi.

Two paths descend from the Col to Bex, one 3½ hours, by Taveyannaz; the other, 3 hours, by the Grionne valley. To reach Aigle you descend from the Col du Pillon (1½ hour) to the Hotel du Diablerets and passing Vers l'Eglise, with the hamlet of the Cerf (pension 3 fr. 50 c.) you come, in 2½ hrs. by COMBALLEIZ. to Sepey. From SEPEY, which has many mountain pensions, you reach AIGLE in 2½ hours, by a good road. Other paths cross this delightful ridge from CHÂTEAU D'ŒX to VILLENEUVE, with charming lake views.

Lastly, from Montbovon you reach Vevey in 7 hours, and Montreux in 6, by the Col de Jaman, commanding views over the Lake of Geneva, beautiful as a dream.

ROUTE 16.

Martigny to Aosta, by the Pass of Great St. Bernard.

The distance from Martigny to the Hospice of St. Bernard is about 27 miles, which can be traversed in a walk of about eight or ten hours, and thence to Aosta in about seven or eight.

Chars take the travellers from Martigny (see Route 11,) to the Cantine, about two hours below the top, whence the ascent to the Hospice is accomplished on mules. The road passes through the Bourg Martigny, and crosses to the left bank of the Drance. From this point it follows the course of the river as far as the villages of Valette and Bouvernier. The road again crossing and recrossing the river, along the Valley of the Drance, proceeds to SEMBRANCHIER—a miserable village situated at the foot of Mount Catogne—where the two branches of the Drance unite. A little above this place, very beautiful views in the Val d'Entremont may be enjoyed.

LIDDES.—A char to Martigny costs 12 frs.; and mules to the Hospice, 6 frs.

ST. PIERRE.—A small and wretched village, venerable by its antiquity. Not far from here is a magnificent cascade, in the Val Orsey. Beyond St. Pierre the path passes through a larch forest, far below which, in the distance, can be seen the course of the Drance. Four miles beyond is the Cantine, a rough inn, where the carriage road stops. Above this plain is the Glacier of Menon, topped by the lofty peak of Mont Velan—the highest part of the Great St. Bernard. Shortly after, the Hôpital is reached, 8130 feet above the level of the sea, at the point of separation between the waters that flow into the Adriatic and those that flow to the Mediterranean.

The Hospice of Great St. Bernard has a world-wide fame for the hospitality of its inmates. It is a stone building, massive and strong, built on the loftiest point of the Pass, exposed in its north-east and south-west sides to every storm, but sheltered on the north-west by Mont Chenelletas and Mont Mort. The chief building has seventy or eighty beds for the use of travellers, and is capable of affording shelter to over 300. Some days 600 or 700 receive aid and succour. Independent of this building, there is on the other side of the way a house of refuge, called the Hotel de St. Louis, a building erected in case of fire, the Hospice having been once burned down in 1552: when all the documents likely to throw light on the circumstances of its foundation, were destroyed. On the ground floor are the stabling, store-rooms, &c. Above these are the sleeping-rooms, the church, and refectory. A flight of steps between the two corridors leads to the drawing room, where visitors are received by the brethren. The reception-room is chastely furnished, and ornamented with paintings, &c., presented by visitors in token of their gratitude to the brethren. The Library is interesting and attractive; it contains a number of the plants, insects, and minerals indigenous to the Alps. It also contains a great many relics of the Temple of Jupiter, which once stood on the Pass, not far from the Hospice (about 1¼ mile off, beyond the lake, on the Plain of Jupiter). The figures of bronze, arms, metals, and coins, will interest the antiquarian. Among the bronze relics is an extraordinary uplifted hand, carrying a snake and several toads—a horrible object, perhaps a counter-charm—there are said to be only three such in Europe.

The chapel is a very handsome one, and contains the grave, and a monument erected by Napoleon to the memory of General Desaix, slain at Marengo.

This monastery was founded in the tenth century by St. Bernard—a member of the noble family of Menthon, in Savoy—who was a canon and archdeacon of Aosta. He governed the convent for 40 years, and died in 1008. The monks of the community are regular canons of St. Augustine. Ten or twelve usually live at the convent. Their duty is to assist travellers in the dangers to which they are here continually exposed from the storm and the avalanche, in the discharge of which duty these devoted men often lose their lives. Scarcely a traveller ever passes without paying a visit to the Morgue—in which are deposited the bodies of the unclaimed dead who perish on the mountains. One of the Dogs, called "Barry," is reported to have saved fourteen persons. His skin is stuffed, and may be seen at the Museum of Berne.

A quarter of a mile beyond the Hospice, the descent to the Val d'Aosta commences. A very fine view may be had on looking out from the gorge on Mont Mort, towards the Vacherie. Five miles from the Hospice is the hamlet of St. Remy. From here to St. Oyen we pass no picturesque scenery. At this place the passports are rigidly examined; and unless perfectly correct, the traveller is not permitted to pass. The baggage is closely examined at Etroubles, where also is crossed the branch of the Buttier. From here the road goes down to the village of Gignod. Beautiful indeed, and rich in all the glories of picturesque grandeur, is the scenery of the country we now pass through. The Val d'Aosta, with its trellised vine and luxuriant vegetation and a back ground, filled with the beautiful forms reflected by the snowy tops of the mountains above the Val de Cogne, is interesting and delightful.

AOSTA.—See p. 511. It gave one primate to England—Anselm, Archbishop of Canterbury in the eleventh century, who was born here. From Aosta there is regular communication with the railway station at Ivrea, thence rail to Turin, &c.

ROUTE 17.

Thunn to Zermatt, Saas, and the Italian Valleys.

From Thun to Kandersteg, by diligence, or on foot. Thence over the Gemmi. Route 12, to Leukerbad and Leuk. From Leuk on to Visp, p 585. At VISP diverge from main road to Simplon, and follow up the valley by mule path to Stalden, where it forks. Distance from Visp, 2 leagues.

(a)—Take right hand valley, that of the Görner Visp. Traces of earthquake of 1855. At Stalden a good Inn, Zur Traube, 4 hours from Visp reach St. Nicholas or Mikaus. Hotels, Sun, Star, and Golden Cross. Fine view of Bernese Alps from near here. On through Mattsand to Randa, at foot of the Bies Glacier of the Weisshorn to the left, 14,804 feet. first ascended by Tyndall, and the Dom to the right, 14,935 feet; the highest Swiss mountain as Monte Rosa is the highest Italian. Hotel at RANDA, Dom. Täschhorn and Dom can be ascended from Randa; former 16 hours, latter 11. On through Täsch and Wilde to Zermatt 8½ leagues (from Visp.)

Itinerary from Visp: to Stalden, 2 leagues; Stalden to St. Nicholas, 2½ leagues; St. Nicholas to Randa, 2½ leagues; Randa to Täsch, ½ league; Täsch to Zermatt, 1½ league. Fares: a horse to Stalden 6 fr., to St. Nicholas 10 fr., to Zermatt, 22 fr. Hotels at ZERMATT—see p. 507. Excursions from Zermatt. Riffelberg, with hotel, 2½ hours from Zermatt. Centre for ascents of Monte Rosa, Cima de Jazzi, &c., and visits to Görner Grat, Görner Glacier, &c.

Continue journey from Zermatt to Col St. Théodule, Breuil, and Val Tournanche, in Piedmont. Journey takes 12 to 13 hours to San Giacomo d'Ayas. Itinerary: to the Col 5½ hours, 3½ hours, to the hotel of Giomen 7 hrs., Val Tournanche 9 hrs., Chatillon 12 to 13 hrs. Hotel du Mont Rosa at Val Tournanche This road, takes you five leagues over the ice and snow. From Breuil (Hotel du Mont Cervin) you can strike off by the Cimes Blanches and Val Challant to San Giacomo d'Ayas, 2½ leagues, and thence to the Italian Valleys, Lakes Orta and Maggiore, and by rail to Milan.

(b)—From Stalden take left hand fork, following Saaser Visp Valley. SAAS, or SAAS IM-GRUND, 3 leagues from Stalden. Hotels, Monte Rosa and Monte Moro. Excursions: Village and Glacier of Fee, half an hour; Anelin Glacier, one of the finest in the Alps. Adler Col to Zermatt 13 or 14 hours. Splendid views.

Pass over Monte Moro to Macugnaga and the Italian Valleys. This is a shorter and easier Pass than Col St. Théodule.

Saas to Mattmarksee, a mountain hotel with tarn. Thence to Macugnaga, 7 leagues. Height of Monte Moro, 9390 feet. Descent over snow fields, and near precipices, with a fine view, to Macugnaga. Hotel du Monte Rosa, Hotel du Monte Moro. The most lovely spot in the Alps. Centre of excursions. Thence down Val Anzasca, ½ league, to Borgo, ½ league, to Pestarena, 1 league, to Preguarters, ½ league; to Ceppo Morelli, 1½ league; to Borgone, ½ league; to San Carlo, 1 league; to Ponte Grande, with splendid view, and branch paths to Vals Mastalone and Strona (superb sylvan scenery), ½ league, to Pie di Mulera, 1 league, to Vogogna (Crown Inn) on high Simplon road to Baveno and Lake Maggiore.

From AOSTA (p. 511) a charming excursion may be made to the unfrequented district of the Grivola, where the bouquetin or steinbock, extinct in other parts of the Alps, is still to be met with.

Leaving Aosta you follow the left bank of the Dora, and after some miles strike off up a wild ravine, down which a torrent thunders along as it bears its waters to the larger stream.

Following the ravine by a mule path you reach a few houses called Vielle, where quarters may be found for the night. This village, as well as Silvenoire, or black forest, are in the romatic Vale of Cogne. A little further is Cretaz, and at length Cogne, a collection of wretched houses, charmingly situated in a mining district, among lofty peaks, with a dirty Inn. Dr. Argentier, an intelligent explorer of the district, lived here for some years. Best guides, the Royal Chasseurs or the pioneers of the king of Italy.

To ascend the Pic of the Grivola, or Corne de Cogne, which rise grandly above the valley, follow the latter a little way from the Inn: then strike to the left up a ravine; then leave the ravine by a foot path to the right. Ascent is here rapid and near precipices. On through fir forests to unoccupied chalets, and up a steep incline strewed with masses of debris. You can go thus far with mules. Three-quarters of an hour higher up is the Col of the Grivola, with splendid view of Grivola Pic beyond. It is not desirable for any but professed climbers to attempt the Pic. The summit has been several times attained, especially by M. Glavey and a man named Jeantet. View indescribably grand. Height 13,028 feet.

Another easier ascent can be made up Becca di Nona, opposite Aosta. Obtain Chanoin Carrel of Aosta's panorama of the view from Becca di Nona.

ROUTE 18.

Lyons to Pont de Beauvoisin, by Les Echelles, Chambery, and the Pass of Mont Cenis to Turin.

(Distance, about 180 English miles.)

LYONS TO PONT DE BEAUVOISIN.

CONVEYANCE by diligence or courier every day to PONT BEAUVOISIN.—Situated on the banks of the Guiers Vif, which is crossed by a bridge. The road from this place is at first flat, but becomes an ascent after a couple of miles are passed At the height of the ascent, splendid views open up. Soon after we enter the magnificent gorge of La Chaille. The road is constructed of solid masonry, extending along the edge of the precipice. Rugged cliffs, many hundred feet high, line the other side; whilst in the depths below rushes the impetuous torrent

LES ECHELLES.—A village situated on the Guiers, being the starting point of a road leading to the Grande Chartreuse. We next enter a valley, and pass through the great tunnel cut in the face of the mountain, 25 feet high and 1000 feet long. We follow our route through a rocky ravine.

ST. THIBAUD DE COUZ.—A waterfall not far from here has been written of by Rousseau as "Le plus belle que le vis de ma vie."

CHAMBERY—described at page 364. From here some very pleasant excursions can be made, particularly those to the baths of Aix and the Lac de Bourget.

Railway to Aix and St. Innocent, also to St. Michel. See page 54

THE DENT DE NIVOLET AND LES CHARMETTES.—Our road proceeds through the valleys of the Arc and Isère. On the right we see Mont Grenier, 6348 feet nigh. The Château Bayard stands on the left bank of the river, a few miles below.

MONTMELIAN.—Situated on the left bank of the Isère, where the four roads, of Mont Cenis, the Tarentaise, Little St. Bernard and Grenoble, meet. Several handsome country seats, forming a handsome suburb, are around here. At this point the valley of the Isère divides itself into two large plains. Crossing the river, we ascend a hill, and enjoy a magnificent view of the Arc and Isère. The hamlet of Maltaverne is the next place, commanding a very good view of the lofty mountain Cerim, at the opposite side of the Isère. The rivers Arque and Isère join between Maltaverne and AIGUEBELLE, situated at the foot of Mont Cenis. The country about is very unhealthy, the rivers forming marshes, which generate malaria, &c. Issuing from Aiguebelle, we pass under a triumphal arch, and reach

LA GRANDE MAISON.—A short distance beyond La Chambre, on the east, a large valley, called La Madeleine, opens a road to MOUSTIER, the chief place in the valley of the Tarentaise, situated on the high way from the Little St. Bernard to Italy. Crossing the bridge of the Hermillon, and following the base of the mountain of Rochenere, we reach

ST JEAN DE MAURIENNE.—It is the chief place in the valley, among the vineyards of St. Julien, which produce some good wines. Beyond the town we cross the Arvan, and a little further on, the Arc, after which we arrive at ST. MICHEL.—Hotel de la Samaritaine, kept by M. Berigandat, opposite the Railway Station.

A very picturesque little town, surrounded by orchards and meadows.

Here the Summit Railway, over Mont Cenis, began, and ran close to the road, past Modane, Lauslebourg, &c. Part of it, over the summit of the Pass, is superseded by the Great Tunnel. See pages 250 and 556.

MODANE, a town among hemp grounds, at the termination of Sterne's "Sentimental Journey." In this part of the valley the bed of the Arc is much confined, and has to flow through a narrow gorge. The road here has been cut for about a league through the mountain Beyond is Fort Lusseilon, closing the gorge of the Arc. The Peat du Diable is a very striking object.

SUSA.—A small town with about 3656 inhabitants, situated in a fine mountain spot, at the point where the roads over St. Genévre and Mont-Cenis meet. Outside the town is a triumphal Arch, erected in honour of Augustus 8 B. C. Passing Bruzzolo, St. Ambrogio, and Rivoli, we arrive at

A Three Weeks' Tour in Switzerland.

BY J. K., JUNR.

BASLE.—HOTELS &c., see page 468

BASLE TO ZURICH—By railway. But, for a party of three or four, in fine weather, it is much more pleasant to take a carriage from Basle to Baden: starting from one and a half to two hours sooner. On attaining the summit of the eminence, before descending to Brugg, on the Aar, the traveller gets the first view of the Alps of the Oberland.

ZURICH.—HOTELS, &c., see page 508.

ZURICH TO THE RIGI AND LUCERNE.—The steamer leaves Zurich early in the morning for Horgen, on the south shore of the lake. Passengers can book on board the steamer for the whole route, as far as Arth; fare, 5 frs. Omnibuses wait the arrival of the steamer at Horgen, to convey the passengers to Zug. A good table d'hôte is always ready at the hotel at Zug for the passengers. The steamer then conveys them across the beautifully green lake of Zug to ARTH, where the ascent of the Rigi commences, by rail (p. 739) or otherwise. The ascent from this side, and descent on the other side, is preferable to the opposite route; especially for pedestrians who take the winding horse path. It is well, if the weather be fine, with a probability of much company, to telegraph for your beds on the Rigi before you leave Zurich. The place whence the landslip from the Rossberg occurred that destroyed the former village of Goldau, is plainly seen.

After being roused by the Alpine horn, to see the sunrise from Rigi (p. 503), if so fortunate as to have fine weather, you descend to Lake

Digitized by Google

Lucerne, by the rail to Vitznau (p. 241), and take the steamer there, or you may walk from Rigi-Scheideck down to Gersau. This descent overlooks the view of the lake, at an immense depth below you, with Mount Pilatus beyond, and the mountains of the Oberland in the distance. To Lucerne by steamer, or row-boat if preferred.

Steamer several times a-day in summer from Lucerne to Fluelen and back, calling at Vitznau, Beggenreid, &c., p. 332, and passing the Field of Grütli and Tell's Chapel, in the Bay of Uri. Travellers going by Altorf and the St. Gothard Pass, leave the steamer at Fluelen. Lucerne may be reached from Basle by rail direct.

Tourists who intend passing the Sunday in Lucerne must bear in mind that in the season it is difficult to obtain a bed on Saturday, owing to the great rush of excursionists from the mountains. It is well to secure one on Friday by telegraph.

THE BRUNIG PASS.—To Bergenried by first boat in the morning, thence by diligence at about 10.30 a.m., or by a hired vehicle to Lungern; or by a row-boat to Alpnach: if there is a party, this mode is not only pleasanter, but cheaper. The charge is 1½ franc for the boat, 2 francs each to three rowers, and a trifle for trinkgeld. From Alpnach to Lungern by hired vehicles, passing through the vale of Sarnen and past the lake of that name, and the Lake of Lungern. Or, one may take a ticket at Lucerne by the postal Brünig route to Brienz, or Interlaken; leaving by 6.45 or 10.15 a.m. boat to Alpnach. Fares to Brienz; banquette, 11fr 50c.; to Interlaken, 13fr.: there is only one seat in the banquette, the conductor sits on the other; but for an extra charge of 2fr. they will give the second seat. 20 kilos. (44 lbs.) luggage, free, allowed by this route. There are printed tariffs of charges for vehicles, &c., in most parts of the Oberland.

There is an Inn at LUNGERN. Here the Pass of the Brunig commences, and can be done in carriages, during the summer, when diligences run from Alpnach to both Brienz and Meyringen, and vice versâ, in connection with the steamers on the lakes of Brienz and Lucerne. But horses can be hired at Lungern. If fine, it is a delightful walk, turning off the road by the footpath to the left, close above Lungern—the scenery grand, yet beautiful—the forests fine, and vegetation most luxuriant. On the top of the Pass the road diverges into the Vale of Meyringen. The right hand leads to Brienz and Interlaken, the left to Meyringen, either of which can be reached the same day easily. The view, on entering the valley, is extremely grand. Opposite to you rises the Faulhorn; to the left are seen the cascades of the Reichenbach; and looking up the valley of the Scheideck, at the bottom of the Pass, Rosenlaui. A good carriage road turns off to the left through the covered bridge to Meyringen.

MEIRINGEN.—See page 500.

From the hills behind Meiringen there are some cascades well worthy the traveller's attention. One, called the Alpbach, is frequently of immense volume, endangering the existence of the village.

THE PASS OF THE SCHEIDECK.—To be done on foot or horseback. An early start is desirable. This is one of the grandest excursions in the Oberland. The first part is a very steep ascent of about 2300 feet, passing close to the splendid cascades of the Reichenbach; afterwards along the upper valley, between most wild and magnificent crags, over one of which, on the right, falls the noted Seilbach, or Rope-fall, clothed at the base with splendid pine-forests; the lower parts of the valley are filled with most luxuriant vegetation. Before you is the Wetterhorn and the Glacier of Rosenlaui. After proceeding a few miles, you can (close to the Rosenlaui hotel), diverge from the path to the left, and by a sharp half-hour's climb reach the foot of the Glacier. After climbing a little way on to it, you may then pass into a cave inside, with semi-transparent ice for the roof.

Leaving the Glacier, the path is soon regained; and then, passing among the Alpine rhododendron and many other rare and beautiful plants, growing in great profusion, you pursue the main valley until you attain the châlet at the summit of the Pass, from which the view on both sides is very magnificent. Here a footpath to the left along the ridge leading off at once to the Faulhorn, is by far the best and easiest way of ascent of about three hours from the Scheideck summit.

While the horses are taking their rest here, the traveller may be also gratified by an avalanche from the Wetterhorn, which is towering immediately above.

The descent to Grindelwald is steep and toilsome. A visit paid to the Upper Glacier of Grindelwald in passing, will well repay trouble.

GRINDELWALD.—See page 496.

The view of the Lower Glacier of Grindelwald from the hotel is very fine. On the left of it stands the Mettenberg; on the right the Great Eiger, the Monch, and the Jungfrau. Behind you, to the north, is the Faulhorn; and to your right the carriage-road to Interlaken, through the Lütschenen Thal, one of the four lovely valleys of the Oberland.

THE WENGERN ALP.—This is another splendid excursion, but only to be done on foot or horseback, or by chaise-à-porteur. There is now an hotel on the very top of the pass.

Crossing the stream that flows from the Glacier, the traveller ascends the opposite side of the valley, leaving the road to Interlaken to his right; and traversing the precipitous base of the Great Eiger, and passing both it and the Monch, arrives at the summit. Every point of the ascent is very fine. The constantly changing views of the magnificent range of mountains are a source of excitement, that almost make the traveller forget the fatigue; and at the summit, the Jungfrau, in all its majesty, is suddenly brought before him. There are inns on the road, and a châlet inn on the top where good refreshment may be obtained. The fall of avalanches from the Jungfrau into the Trümeleten Thal, which is about two miles across, may give some correct idea of their size, from the noise caused by them, as it is echoed and re-echoed among the mountain peaks. The descent thence is pretty good, till arriving at the edge of the precipice above the Lauterbrunnen, when it becomes exceedingly steep. After viewing the Staubbach Falls, Interlaken may be reached the same evening.

INTERLAKEN.—HOTELS, &c., see page 496.

This is a good point for a few days' rest, after rough mountain-climbing. Pleasant excursions can be made, viz., to Grindelwald and back, to the Scheideck, to the top of the Faulhorn, up the vale of Lauterbrunnen, and to the Staubbach, to the village Mürren, to the Falls of Schmadribach, &c. &c. &c - all so well remembered by the admirers of Longfellow,—over the Wengern Alp, or along the Lake of Brienz, to the Giesbach Falls, and on up the valley of Meyringen and the Grimsel. For the last excursion, a steamer leaves Interlaken.

Beautiful wood-carving is to be purchased in great variety.

INTERLAKEN TO LEUKERBAD.—THE GEMMI PASS.—This may be done in one day; but is rather too hard work, unless the days be long, as daylight is absolutely needful for the last six hours.

A vehicle may be hired to Frutigen, or Kandersteg, and the horses there taken out, and ridden the rest of the journey. Travellers should start not later than 5 a.m. Or by steamer to Thun, and thence by vehicle to Frutigen. There is a diligence daily from Thun.

FRUTIGEN.

The Hotels at Frutigen are good; but it is better to rest all night at KANDERSTEG, near the commencement of the Pass. From it to Leukerbad is 6 to 7 hours. A vehicle may be hired from Frutigen to proceed to Kandersteg, or your own retained over night. At Kandersteg the carriage-road ends; the rest has to be done on foot or horseback, or chaise-à-porteur. The best plan is to engage your horses at Frutigen. On leaving Kandersteg, the steep ascent commences almost immediately; and after two and a half to three hours' climbing, you reach the small châlet, where refreshment is to be had. This Gemmi Pass is noted for its extreme wildness. For miles along the top, the track is through a district almost destitute of vegetation, over the lowest point of the range of the Blumlis Alp. The grandest part, however, is the descent down the face of precipitous cliffs, along which a horse-path has been ingeniously constructed.

The view, immediately prior to this steep descent, is very grand. At your feet lies the village of Leukerbad, at a depth of some 3000 feet, and yet so near that it would seem that you could throw a stone on to it. Looking down the valley of the Dala, and across the valley of the Rhone, the chain of mountains, of which Monte Rosa is the chief, stands before you in all its magnificence. Monte Rosa itself is not however visible, but the Matterhorn is very conspicuous.

This romantic spot is shut in on all sides but the south by mountains of the grandest kind, whose perpendicular sides appear to defy all attempts to climb them. It is a favourite resort for invalids, who come to take in the hot sulphur Baths. In a long room are four large tanks, fifteen or twenty feet square, filled with people in thick woollen gowns—men, women, and children, of all ages, mixed together in the same bath, sitting on floating seats up to their necks in the water, and amusing themselves with chess, draughts, books, work, &c., on floating tables, or with coffee, fruit, &c., before them. The usual allowance is a month's course, beginning gradually, but when the cure is in full operation, the allowance is four hours in the morning, and four hours in the afternoon. A visit to these baths should by no means be missed. Remember to take your hat off, as in a private room.

LEUKERBAD TO MARTIGNY.—By diligence daily from l'Hotel des Alpes, at 8 a.m., Sion at 3 p.m., and at Martigny at 7 p.m. The charge for a two-horse vehicle, with relays of horses, at Sierre, Sion, Riddes, and containing four persons including the driver, on the excellent road from Leukerbad to Leuk, is 60 francs—viz., to Sierre 22 francs; guide 3 francs, to Sion 10 francs, guide 2 francs; to Riddes 10 francs, guide 1½ franc; to Martigny 10 francs, guide 1½ franc—for one horse to Sierre, and two horses the rest: total, 54 francs: if one horse all through, 44 francs. From Leukerbad to Susten on the Simplon road, a carriage with two horses costs 20 francs.

Martigny may also be reached from Sion by railway, and there is a railway from Martigny to Bouveret on the Lake of Geneva; whence there are steamers twice daily to Vevey, Lausanne, and Geneva.

In ascending from Martigny to Leukerbad, it is considered best to take a mule at Sierre for the rest of the way, and so ascend the right bank of the Dala, passing along some wonderful terraces cut in the rock. The whole Pass up the Dala is one of extreme wildness and beauty. In descending the valley to Martigny, it is better to keep the regular road, from which the grandeur of the valley will be as well appreciated.

MARTIGNY.—See page 500.

At the foot of the valley of the Rhone, which here turns suddenly to the right, to join the Lake of Geneva.

MARTIGNY TO CHAMONIX—by the Tête Noire, or Col du Balme.

Mules may be had for either route: each mule, 12 francs; each guide, 12 francs: mules cannot be had without a guide or attendant; but one guide will do for any number of mules. A chaise-à-porteur and six men, cost 72 francs—with eight men 96 francs.

The ascent commences within one mile of the town, where four branches off to the right from the St. Bernard road, and is one continued steep unbroken ascent, till you attain the summit of the Forclaz. The paths for the Col de Balme diverge to the left, that to the Tête Noire to the right at the bottom of the descent, in the Val de Trient. The attraction to the Col de Balme consists in the splendid view, if fine, of the whole of the Mont Blanc range, the moment you attain that spot, after crossing the valley of Trient; but to any one going for the first time, especially if any doubt exists as to the clearness of Mont Blanc from clouds, we recommend the Tête Noire. You descend, in this case, down the vale of Trient, till you join the Val d'Orsine.

Be sure not to allow the mule-driver to stop

fine at the village in the vale of Trient, but to go on to the hotel at the Tête Noire, where, instead of passing an hour in a very tame hollow, you spend it in the most beautiful spot in Switzerland, and not half an hour's ride from the former place. This Pass is constructed round the face of the mountain, forming the angle between the two valleys, but at an immense precipitous height above the streams Having come down the Trient valley, you now ascend the Val d'Orsine, along this splendid gallery; continuing on, you arrive at a point where the path is again on a level, from which it gradually ascends to the highest part of the road, called the Montets. Before reaching this spot, if fine, the Col de Balme is seen towering before you, and then Mont Blanc itself, and the different Aiguilles forming the Mont Blanc range. The descent is through Argentières, passing the glaciers of Tour, Argentières, and de Bois, and so on into the valley of Chamouni.

CHAMONIX.—Several good Hotels.—See page 492.

FROM CHAMONIX TO GENEVA.—From Chamonix to Sallenches, along the new road, finished in 1869. The views of Mont Blanc are magnificent. (See Route 20.) From Sallenche to Geneva by diligence.

ROUTE 20.

Geneva to Chamouny or Chamounix, and Excursions thence.

GENEVA—See page 494.—(Distance, 50 English miles.) The journey is performed by diligence in se en to eight hours.

Charges for carriages uncertain—do not depend upon the voiturier, but ascertain the point from a respectable landlord, (experto crede) so also as to back fare, bonnemains, &c.

A light carriage for four can be had to go from Geneva to Sallenches or St. Martin; from whence a lighter carriage can be had to carry two or three persons to Chamounix; the former for about 30 frs. and 3 frs. to the driver, the latter 15 frs. and 2 frs to the driver.

Leave Geneva by the Grande Quai, and pass, for some miles of the journey, through a picturesque country studded with neat villas, &c., to

CHÊNE—A large village situated on the Seime. At this point the eye rests upon some magnificent views—the Voirons on the left, Mount Salève and the range of the Jura on the right. Departing hence, cross the stream which separates the Genevese Canton from the acquired territory of France, and arrive at

ANEMASSE. Beyond this place the road leads up the valley of the Arve; the Monog is crossed by a pretty and lofty bridge. The next station is

NANGY—close to which village, on the right, are some ruins of the Chateau of Faucigny, on a cliff to the left of the road. The road proceeds on close by the Mole, a fine hill surmounted by an obelisk. Passing through some beautiful scenery and an avenue of trees the road enters BONNEVILLE.—Inn: Couronne.

The chief place of the province of Faucigny, with 1600 inhabitants. It is an excellent mid-day halt. A column, ninety-five feet high, erected to honour the memory of Carlo Felice, at the end of the stone bridge, is surmounted by a statue of the king. After crossing this bridge, the road passes between the bases of the Mole and Mont Brezon, which on the right bounds the valley of the Arve. A new line of road extending from Bonneville to Chamouniz was undertaken by express command of Napoleon III., on his visit to Mont Blanc. The road continues immediately under the Brezon until it crosses the Arve on a stone bridge, and enters CLUSES.—Inns: Parfaite Union and Balances.

A very old town, nearly consumed in 1843, but now nearly rebuilt, near the mouth of the gorge. It has a population of 1590; a large number of these are celebrated as watch-makers, in which capacity very many of the inhabitants of this place have founded establishments in Strassburg, Lyons, Augsburg, &c.

Departing from Cluses, our road is carried through the defile and beneath grand Alpine precipices. In some places they seem to overhang the traveller. A very agreeable visit may be made to the Grotto of Balme, 800 feet above the valley, shortly before arriving at Maglan; at La Balme are mules for the ascent. The depth of the grotto is more than 1800 feet. The peaks of Mont Douron are seen on the other side of the valley.

MAGLAN.—On the right of the Arve, situated beneath lofty mountains, lies this straggling village of about 1800 inhabitants, who bear much the same migratory character as the people of Cluses, and are just as remarkable for their foreign establishments. Proceeding beyond this place the valley widens; and our road touches on the Nant d'Arpenaz, one of the highest waterfalls in Savoy. The stream is like a zig-zag cascade, and crossing the road beneath a bridge, falls into the Arve. Travellers en route from Geneva will be pestered with idle vagrants offering them minerals for sale, guides, &c., vending echoes by firing pistols, &c., whom they should discountenance.

The valley now loses much of its former narrowness; and from Sallenches up to the base of the Douron, lie before us rich and verdant fields. Direct above rise, 8000 feet above the sea, the peaks of the Varens, as we enter ST. MARTIN, and soon after find ourselves in the yard of the Hotel de Mont Blanc. Crossing the bridge, situated about 100 yards from the inn, our road leads on to Sallenches. From the bridge there is a delightful and magnificent view of Mont Blanc—so gratifying, that it is worth the entire journey from England. Forclaz, in its pine-clad armour and green helmet, is seen; and, towering above, are the Aiguille de Goûté, the Dome de Goûté, and the summit of the highest mountain in Western Europe, 12 miles distant, supported by the ridges of Aiguilles, the intersecting spaces being studded with glaciers.

SALLENCHES.—Inns: Hotel Chalet Suisse; Bellevue and Leman. A small town with a population of 2000; rebuilt on the ruins of the former town, entirely consumed on Good Friday in 1840. Here chars, mules, and guides can be hired for Chamounix: char, 12 francs; with two horses, 18 francs; and postilion, 2 francs.

The Journey occupies about five hours; the roads are steep and rough, and only accessible for light chars.

Persons who desire to visit Chamounix, and return by Geneva on foot, had better proceed from St. Martin to Chêde, Servoz, and Chamounix, by the right bank of the Arve, returning by the Col de Forclaz, and the Baths of St. Gervais, to Chêde.

An agreeable drive may be taken from Sallenches to the Baths of St. Gervais, about two miles off, in the gorge of the Bon Nant—a small stream descending from the Bon-homme. The baths are situated at the extremity of the glen, which cannot be left unless by returning to the entrance, where two roads branch off—one up a steep ascent to St. Gervais, a sweet village in the Val Montjoie, passing the hamlets of Bionnay and Tresse, as it leads to Contamines and the pass of the Bonhomme. The road leads to Chêde across the valley of the Arve by Passy.

Above St. Martin and Sallenches the valley of the Arve spreads itself out before us; and all along to Servoz, magnificent views greet the eye.

Close by Chêde there is a beautiful cascade on the left: and after attaining a considerable height, on the left the Lac du Chêde, now filled with mud and stones. Our road here makes a deep curve along the bed of a wild torrent, from which there is a path to SERVOZ, where refreshments can be had for man and horse, and guides hired for the Buet, one of the panorama-commanding ascents, from which a splendid view of Mont Blanc may be enjoyed. From its summit, 10,210 feet above the level of the sea, a vast extent of horizon stretches out bounded by the mountains of St. Gothard on the east, and by the ranges extending into Dauphiné on the west. The Buet can be ascended from the Servoz side; but no traveller should attempt its ascent without a good guide. See further details, in Bradshaw's "Handbook to Switzerland."

On leaving Servoz our road crosses the torrent of the Diosa, and follows close to the base of the Breven. Near the Pont de Pelissier, which the road crosses, are the ruins of the castle of St. Michel.

Les Montets, a steep and stony ascent, next interposes itself in our way, and we find ourselves on the upper story, as it were, of the valley of the Arve, in close proximity to the mountain monarch, though we cannot see his head, which is concealed by the stupendous Dome de Goûté.

We now proceed through some beautiful meadows to Les Ouches, the first village met with in the valley. Two miles above this place we meet the first of the white lines of glaciers, which begin to be seen from Les Montets, extending themselves into the valley. It is called Taconey, but is a mere nothing compared to those around it. As we proceed numerous torrents are passed, and the hamlet of Bossons is reached, near the glacier of the same name. The brilliancy of its ice, pinnacle, sixty or seventy feet high, renders it a beautiful object.

EXCURSIONS FROM CHAMOUNIX — MONT BLANC.

ASCENT OF MONT BLANC.— Who that has ever visited Chamounix has not felt the excitement and delight of foreign travel? He looks from his hotel window, and sees the bustle consequent on numerous arrivals and departures. Guides in one corner, and tourists speculating on their plans for the morrow in another, keep up a continual interest; and then above him are the vast walls and pinnacles of the Alps, the "Palaces of Nature."

The tour of Mont Blanc can be made with the greatest advantage from Chamounix over the Col de Bon Homme to Cormayeur in the Val d'Aosta, where Mont Blanc is seen in grander proportions and mightier lineaments than from the north side; and from thence by the Col de Ferret, or Great St. Bernard to Martigny, returning by the Tête Noire pass to Chamounix. The guide taken at Chamounix is not allowed to proceed further than Martigny, where a local guide must be engaged for the remainder of the journey. Should the journey be ended at Martigny, the guide returning to Chamounix can only demand one day's pay.

MONTANVERT.—A pleasant excursion can be made to this place. (Inn Pavilion.) The excursion is generally undertaken for the purpose of making a visit to the Mer de Glace; the stupendous series of glaciers ending in Glacier du Bois, and the source of the Arveyron, in the valley of Chamounix. The ascent is accomplished by a mule path in 2½ hours, and the descent in 2 hours.

We first cross the Meadows and the Arve by a path traversing the valley to the foot of the Montanvert. Here the path leads up a beautiful forest of pines, meeting at intervals very steep ascents. Large masses of rock, and uprooted trees, mark the direction of the avalanches that have fallen at different periods. About a league further on is a ravine, formed by avalanches. Mounting towards the top, we see, looking above the pine-tops, the Aiguille de Dru, a gigantic obelisk of granite. On the summit, at the MONTANVERT, we find an Inn, and good accommodation.

A short but steep descent leads to the Mer de Glace, or Icy Sea, so called from its resemblance to the waves of the sea after a storm. The path passes by the Rocher des Auglais, and several mountains environ the wonderful Mer de Glace. Across it are some of the most majestic of these mountains that form such a striking peculiarity in the scenery of Chamounix. On the north-east is the Aiguille de Dru, the nearest; on the south-west is the Aiguille de Charmoz; and on the left of the former is the Aiguille de Rochard—a forest of pinnacles, appearing to hold up the giant of them all—called the Aiguille Verte. Parties not proposing to cross the Mer de Glace should descend upon it and walk for 100 yards, as it is only by so doing they can clearly recognise its brilliancy of hue and deep pure colour of blue.

The Jardin.—A visit from the Mer de Glace to the Jardin, in the remote recesses of Mont Blanc, forms one of the finest excursions in the entire range of the Alps. Persons wishing to enjoy it thoroughly should make the Pavilion their resting place for the night, where they will find comfortable sleeping accommodation. No one should attempt the passage without a guide, who can carry provisions. Bread, cold meat, and wine, are the best to be taken.

We follow the south-west side of the Mer de Glace and after ascending either of the two passages called Les Ponts, we descend to the edge of the glacier, and continue for some time along its moraine. Here is a very pure fountain, issuing through a natural arch in the rock. The path at length reaches the point where the Glaciers de Tacul and de Lechaud unite. Near the latter, are four parallel and protracted heaps of rubbish on the Mer de Glace. After traversing the latter for two hours, we arrive at the foot of the Taléfre. The view of the Glacier de Taléfre is here very sublime and awful. To attain the summit, we must ascend the rock called the Couvercle, which shoots up into the inaccessible Aiguille de Talèfre. The necessity for here scrambling with both hands and feet, has gained for the passage the name of Egralets, or Petits Dégrès. It is, however, more difficult than dangerous. The plain of the Aiguille de Talèfre affords an agreeable resting-place. Amid the labyrinth of granite blocks at the foot of this glacier is a rock, called the Pierre de Bérenger, which affords shelter to those surprised by bad weather. In the midst of the ice and snow is a flat rock, which, at the close of August, is covered with a layer of greensward, diversified with a variety of beautiful Alpine plants. This is the Jardin of this palace of nature, and its beauty can only be exceeded by the splendid sublimity of the surrounding objects. The journey from Montanvert to the Jardin can be performed in twelve hours, including two or three hours to rest. Beyond the Jardin, is a place called Les Courtes, very difficult of access, where minerals, &c., are collected. In descending, we can avoid the Egralets by taking a direction across the glacier, a long and steep descent, which leads to the Glacier de Léchaud, abruptly terminated by the Aiguille de Léchaud and the Grand and Petit Jorasse. It requires five hours to walk from Montanvert to the Jardin, and six hours thence to Chamounix. The Flegère will also prove a delightful excursion.

Ladies will find this an exceedingly agreeable spot to view Mont Blanc from. The ascent can be accomplished by mules all the way up. In case the traveller has not much time to devote to the excursions about Chamounix, the two most worthy of visits are the Montanvert and Flegère.

The Brevent also forms a favourite excursion (8,230 feet high), and, though many ladies perform the ascent, yet it is fatiguing. Returning from it to Chamounix, the journey can be varied by taking the west side of the Brevent, above the valley of Dioza, close by the lake, and then descending by the Chalets of Calaveiran, towards the village of Chapeau, whence a path leads down to Les Ouches, in the valley of Chamounix.

Source of the Arveyron.—If we would avoid a separate excursion, we should immediately descend from the summit of Montanvert to the source of the Arveyron, which issues from the Glacier des Bois. The descent is along a hollow, wrought on avalanches, and called La Filia. It is very steep, but not dangerous, and may be undertaken on foot.

The Ascent of Mont Blanc.—Of late years the feat has become quite as common and fashionable as it was before rare and exceptional. The adventure requires the aid of half a dozen guides.

Mont Blanc, every schoolboy knows, is the highest mountain in Europe (15,780ft.) except the Elburz and Kasbek peaks in the Caucasus. It is situated between the valleys of Chamounix and Entrèves. It has three principal summits; the most westerly, called the Dome du Gouté, that in the middle the Bosse du Dromadaire, and the most easterly the Tacul. It requires two days for the excursion from Chamounix to the top of Mont Blanc—the first from the former place to that called Les Grands Mulets, where the shelter of a rock can be obtained: the second from this spot to the summit and back. Those who make the attempt from the mountain of La Côte, proceed from the Prieuré to the village of Bossons, turn aside on the right near the foot of the glacier, and proceed to the hamlet Du Mont. A little further begins the ascent, which follows the bank of the torrent that issues from the Glacier de Taconay. Mules can proceed to the distance of two miles from the Prieuré; but the remainder must be performed on foot.

Tour of Mont Blanc.—This may be done in a round of about 6 days, from Chamouny; viz, 3 days to Courmayeur, and 3 days to Chamouny again. The stopping places as follows—1st day, at Contamines; 2nd day, at Mostet; 3rd day, at Courmayeur; 4th day, near Col de Ferret, 6 hours; 5th day Martigny, 8 hours; 6th day Chamouny, 8 hours. The places passed in this circuit (proceeding westward) are Les Ouches: Pavilion de Belle Vue; Col de Noza, Bionnassay; La Villette; St. Nicholas: and Les Contamines (two Inns), under Mont Joli, with Mont Blanc to the Notre Dame de la Gorge (road ends, and bridle path begins); Nant Borant, under Aiguille Trelatête; La Balma (Inn); Plaine des Dames, under Pic du Bonhomme; Col de Bonhomme (view); Chapiu (two Inns), where a path to Bourg St. Maurice an the Little St. Bernard comes in; and Mostet (two Inns). Col de la Seigne (fine view), on the Italian border under the S. corner of Mont Blanc; Combal Lake in the Allée Blanche, under the Miage Glacier; Entrèves, under the Brenva Glacier; and Courmayeur (three Inns), on the road down to Aosta, under Mont de Save and Cramont;—(Courmayeur across Mont Blanc to Chamouny, 14 hours). Val de Ferret or Ferrox, under the Glaciers, to Col de Ferret (on the border of Switzerland) a fine point of view; Orsières; and Martigny. Col de Balme, and Tête Noire to Chamouny.

From Geneva to Sixt.

64 Kilometres (39⅞ miles). Diligence, carriage road.

The valley of Sixt is one of the most charming in the Alps; and from it a series of splendid passes lead to Chamounix and to Champéry, at the foot of Dent du Midi, Canton de Valais, (see Route 20) As far as Nangi you follow the high-road from Geneva to Chamouni, 15 kilometres (9¼ miles.) Two kilomes. from Nangi you turn off to St. Jeoire (Hotel, the Crown), 28 kiloms. (17¼ miles), on through Tanninges (Hotels, Balances & Lion d'Or).

Next important place Samoens (Hotels, Poste, Croix d'Or). Good guides, Gallet, Gurnie. On the banks of the Giffre, fine cascade (630 feet), Nant d'Au, 56 kiloms. (34¾ miles) from Geneva. Advancing, pass a fine defile of the Giffre, near la Balme, to the abbey of Sixt (Hotel and Pension, des Cascades), 1 hour, 20 mins. from Samoens. Luxurious growth of timber-trees, and centre of excursions. At ten minutes, cascade of the Dard, 1200 feet descent. The Fer à Cheval, surrounded by peaks and cascades. Beyond, the Vallée de Combes, with many cascades 2 hours 30 minutes, to the Lac de Gers, to Vaudru 8714 feet, with a view of Mont Blanc, Dauphiné, Lake of Geneva, &c Mont Buet, 6 hrs, 30 mins. to 7 hrs. up. Road by forests and cascades, Rouget, and Joux Bas. You can descend from the Buet to Chamouni, 6 hours, by the Pierre à Berard. Passes from Sixt to Champery, see Route 1.

Down the Rhine, from Bingen and Mayence to Bonn,

(INCLUDING ITS FINEST SCENERY).

For the ascent, see p. 421.

Kreuznach to Bingen (Bingerbrücke Junc.) 1 German mile, 4⅔ English.

At Bingerbrücke is the great Junction for the Rhine railway down to Coblentz and up to Mayence, and for the Wiesbaden and Frankfort line.

From Bingerbrücke you can proceed along the Rhine by rail or steamboat; but the boat is preferable, if the object be to view the scenery.

Bingen.—(See p. 429). BINGERBRUCKE Junction is the great central knot of railroads—west to Paris, south to Mayence, Heidelberg, Strassburg, and Bâle; east to Wiesbaden, Frankfort, Homburg, and the Brunnen of Nassau; north to Coblentz, Cologne, and Belgium.

By Rail to

Mayence or Mainz, Mentz, 18 m. from Bingerbrücke.—(See p. 431). Distance to Frankfort 18 m. up the Main.

Frankfort (Prussia).—See p. 457.

Baths near Frankfort. 1. Wiesbaden (Prussia).—Distance (22½ m. (See p. 466).

Homburg.—Distance 12 m. (See p. 441).

From Wiesbaden you reach Schlangenbad, 2 German m. by rail.

SCHLANGENBAD in Prussia, see p. 465. In 1 hour the diligence takes you on from Schlangenbad to SCHWALBACH. (See p. 465.

To return to Bingen.

Bingerbrücke to Coblenz by steamer or rail; the former preferable to see the scenery; 4 h. 45 m. descent; ascent 7 h. Descending you pass the most remarkable Points on the Rhine:—viz., Mausethurm in the river with a legend; castles of Rheinstein, Sonneck, Wisperthal, Bacharach, Strahleck, the Pfalz, another picturesque castle in the river, Caub, Oberwesel, St. Goar, the Rheinfels, the Lurley Rocks, the Cat and Mouse towers, Boppard, Liebeneck, Lahnstein, and Stolzenfels, the palace of the King of Prussia. (See Rhine section.)

Coblenz, in Prussia.—(See p. 427.)

Fortress of Ehrenbreitstein, opposite, is the Prussian Gibraltar. View of Rhine and Moselle superb; fee, 50 pfennings.

COBLENTZ to EMS, 10m. up the Lahn. See p. 456.

Descent of the Rhine from Coblentz to Cologne by Bonn. To Bonn 33 m.; rail or boat. Time by boat 4h. 30 m.; going up 7h. 30 m.

Pass Andernach, a very ancient town. Rolandseck, Drachenfels, the noted Siebengebirge hills, and come to

Bonn.—(See p. 425.)

TOURS IN FRANCE.

In the preceding pages of this Special Edition the leading Routes through Switzerland, Italy, Germany, &c., are given. We now subjoin some useful Routes through France.

ROUTE 23.

London to Paris, via Dover & Calais.

For description of route from London to Dover, and thence to Calais, passport information, management of baggage, &c. see page 351.

Calais.—See p. 362.—Quitting this station, the railway almost makes the circuit of the town, and passes through a low and flat country.

Ardres.—A small fortified place, memorable as being close to the spot where in 1520, the famous meeting took place between Henry VIII. of England and Francis I. of France, called the Field of the Cloth of Gold, situated to the west, midway between this station and Guisnes. The next stations arrived at are places of no importance.

St. Omer.—See page 390.

Departing hence, we pass Eblinghem station, and reach

Hazebrouck, whence there is a branch line to Dunkirk, see page 366. Our journey is continued via Bethune, unmarked by any particularity of character.

Arras—See page 385.

Nothing of interest occurs in passing Boileux, Achiet, Albert, and Corbie stations, till we arrive at Amiens—See page 388. Trains run from here to Abbeville and Boulogne. Refreshments can be had; the time allowed is about twenty minutes; coffee, tea, bread and butter, 1 fr.; chop, a glass of wine, and bread, 1 fr.

Conveyance to Beauvais through Noiremont: 10 English miles. Pass the stations of Boves, where remains of a castle upon a hill are in sight from the rail, Ailly, and Breteuil, whence diligences go to Beauvais and St. Quentin, St. Just, and Clermont, and arrive at Clermont-sur-Oise.—Inn: Croissant.

A small town on the slope of a hill, whose summit is crowned by a Castle, now used for a female penitentiary. It was the birth-place of the astronomer Cassini.

Liancourt Station is passed before arriving at Creil.—The railway, which previously traversed the chalky high lands of Picardy, now descends into the valley of the Oise, wends amid agreeable scenery to the stations of St. Leu, (whence there are diligences to Senlis), Boran, BEAUMONT-SUR-OISE, (a small town hemmed in by a round tower and old Castle, with a population of 2100), Ile-Adam and Auvers, and reaches

Chantilly—See page 365

St. Denis.—See page 390.

Paris—See page 379.

Since the opening of the Railway from Calais to Boulogne direct, the mails are carried via Calais, Boulogne, and Amiens. See page 18 for Special Tidal and Mail Trains and Steamers.

ROUTE 24.

London to Paris, via Boulogne.

This route is an agreeable one. The journey from London to Folkestone is performed through a beautiful country; the sea passage across is expeditious, and the steamboats are excellent.

A steam-boat communication exists between London and Boulogne direct.

For information as to the course to be pursued on landing, in reference to luggage, &c., see p. xliii.

The Railway station is opposite the harbour; and the passenger receives two tickets, one for his fare (which he should always have ready to show), the other for his luggage. At the sound of the bell he should leave the waiting-room and proceed to the carriage. Boulogne to Paris, 157½ miles.

From Boulogne the railway turns a little to the west of the post road, and makes a lengthened détour, going close to the river Liane, the high grounds overhanging which form a very pretty prospect, until its arrival at Pont-de-Brique, close to a village of the same name which we do not see. To the right we see the De Clocheville château, in which Napoleon once lodged. The next station is NEUCHÂTEL, 8½ m. from Boulogne, after passing through the Forest of Hardelot. Close by Condette, famous for game and for its large rabbit burrow. Hence for 8½ miles to

The road proceeds by a viaduct 900 feet long, and takes in a good view of the sea and sand banks, as it approaches MONTREUIL-VERTON, 24 mls. from Boulogne, situated on a hill, and remarkable for a lofty flamboyant Church, with a magnificent west door under the towers. From the line we see Herdin, amid gardens, meadow-land, and water ponds, and shortly after arrive at

Rue—34 m. from Boulogne—having the church of Saint Esprit, which will well repay a visit. Not far from here is Crecy, on the field of which Edward III. fought his battle in 1346, and hence called "the battle of Crécy:" Agincourt, where Henry gained the victory of 1415, is 16 miles from Crécy. Pass Noyelle to

Pont Remy—54 English miles—A small village on the right bank of the Somme, remarkable for its old castle. Six miles further on is Longpré. Before reaching Hangest, we see at a distance the Camp l'Etole, an old Roman fort, oval-shaped.

Hangest—64 miles from Boulogne; hence to Picquigny—4 miles from Hangest—A village of 1600 inhabitants, where Louis XI. and Edward IV. met to sign the Treaty called after that place. The distrust of both monarchs was so great, that a barrier of strong wooden palisades was placed between them, and room enough only left them to shake hands. Close to the church is the ruined Castle, noticed in Madame de Sévigné's letters.

Amiens—76 miles from Boulogne, 81¼ from Paris. See preceding route 23.

London to Paris, via Newhaven and Dieppe.

This is the "shortest and cheapest" route to Paris, in connection with the Express Trains of the Brighton & South Coast Line and its daily tidal steamers between Newhaven and Dieppe. The sea passage of 64 miles, is done in 5 hours; the total distance is only 240 miles. From Dieppe, the Rail may be taken direct to Paris, via Pontoise, 105 m.; or to Rouen on the Western of France, 125 m. (See Route below). For particulars, consult the Company's Monthly Time Bills, or p. 683 of Bradshaw's Continental Guide.

London to Paris, by Southampton and Havre.

Havre.—See page 371.—The Railway departing from Havre terminus, situated close to the Boulevard de Strasbourg, passes through a street of gardens, villas, and guinguettes, as far as GRAVILLE, to the right a little above the road, and interesting for its Norman Church, dating from the eleventh century. From here the railway proceeds in view of the Seine, until our arrival at

Harfleur—A small town of no importance. Its church, a building of the fifteenth century, is surmounted by a tower and spire, and ornamented by a fringed portal. From the Chateau of Orcher, on the heights above the town, a splendid view of the river can be enjoyed.

St. Romain and Beuzeville are next arrived at. At the latter the railway ascends, and near Thirville it passes over a viaduct of 48 brick arches, the highest 106 feet above the ground, and requires an extra engine.

Bolbec and Noiniot—Bolbec is a manufacturing town, on the right bank of the river Bolbec, in one of the little valleys intersecting the Pays de Caux. It has a large number of cotton mills and printworks, bleaching-grounds, &c. LILLEBONNE a venerable old town, five miles from here, deserves a visit, to enable the tourist to view its Roman theatre. Five miles from the last station we come to Alvimare, whence the railroad proceeds through the centre of the Pays de Caux, a high, fertile table land, intersected by watercourses, and arrive at

Yvetot—An industrious town, nearly composed of timber houses, and carrying on some manufacture in cotton, otherwise noticeable for the "Roi d'Yvetot" mentioned in Béranger's song. Its population is 9,920. Motteville and Pavilly are next passed. The railway then descends from the table land of the Pays de Caux into the basin in which Rouen is situated, and arrives at Barentin—A small town with 3,070 inhabitants, and the seat of some cotton mills. Coming to this station, the road is carried over a curved viaduct of twenty-seven arches, each sixty feet span. From here the railway crosses the valley of Barentin, is carried over the high grounds, and passes through the heights of Poville by a tunnel one mile and three furlongs long, sweeps over an embankment and viaduct of eight arches, and arrives at Malaunay (here is the junction line to Dieppe). Thence it passes on to Maromme, and proceeds through a country full of mills and factories to Rouen, before reaching which station, in the Rue Verte, it has to pass through three tunnels and over a viaduct. It penetrates beneath the suburbs of Cauaine, Beauvoisine, and St. Hilaire, near which it passes a second tunnel 1,530 yards long, takes a sweep and enters the third tunnel, 1,135 yards long, under the hill of St. Catherine, describing a radius of nearly half a mile.

Rouen Station (described at page 389) lies in a hole, and is shut in by escarpments of stone, excluding all view of the town. There is also a station on the left bank. Steamers run during the summer months to Havre, and throughout the year as far as Bouille; see alphabetical list of sailings.

Leaving the Rouen Station, the railway passes along the right bank of the Seine, through St. Etienne de Rouvray and Sotteville, to Oissel Junction, or Tourville—Where passengers get out for Elbœuf.

[ELBŒUF.—An exclusively manufacturing town, the Leeds of France—having a population of 25,700, and about 20,000 weavers in the adjoining communes.] From Tourville, the road passes by a short tunnel through the hill of Tourville, to

Pont de l'Arche—A small town with a Gothic church, containing some curiously painted glass. A bridge of 22 arches crosses the Seine here. The railway leaves by the left bank of the Seine, and again crosses the river, before arriving at

St. Pierre de Vauvray.—[Five miles west is LOUVIERS—a manufacturing town, with thirty cloth manufactories and a number of spinning mills.] The road is carried through two tunnels, near Le Grand Villiers, before reaching Gaillon—Whence omnibuses go to Autteuil and Andelys. Here is a large penitentiary; and in the distance, five miles north of the road, rises the Château Gaillard—a magnificent ruin, a lofty rock, at whose base the Seine flows. This was the favourite castle of Richard Cœur de Lion.

Vernon.—Inns:—Du Lion d'Or.

An old town giving name to an English family, beautifully situated, and having a population of 7,400. Its houses are generally timber-framed, and its streets narrow, which renders its tout ensemble rather picturesque. Its church and tower are objects of interest. Leaving Vernon, the railway runs close by the river at the base of the high ground, to Bonnières, at a short distance from which it goes through a tunnel 2,480 yards long, driven through a hard, chalky and flinty bed, and skirts Rosny Forest—felled at one time by Sully of its timber, to the value of 100,000 francs, in order to pay his royal master's debts. Sully's old Château, where he was born, is here. Ivry, where Henry defeated the League, 1590, is 22 miles from Rosny.

Mantes—Inns:—Grand Cerf; Des Postillons.

A very handsome town, on the left bank of the Seine. Its chief objects of interest are the Cathedral of Nôtre Dame, an elegant Gothic building, built for Blanche of Castile and her son St. Louis; with its triple portal, tall square towers, and richly carved choir; the Gothic Tower only a remnant of St. Maclou; and the Hôtel de Ville, also Gothic. It was here that William the Conqueror received the injury which terminated in his death a few days afterwards, at Rouen. The railway now enters a cutting, and proceeds through a beautiful country to Epone, where we see a fine church of the twelfth century. Meulan and Triel are next passed—the former, a town on the right bank of the Seine, containing several manufactories and corn mills; and the latter, a place famous for its plaster quarries.

Poissy is a small town, situated at one of the extreme points of the forest of St. Germains, on the left bank of the Seine. A cattle market is held here every Thursday, for the supply of meat to Paris. It was the birthplace of St. Louis, who was baptized in the parish church, in a font yet preserved there, and shown to visitors. Here the conference was held in 1561, for the purpose of adjusting the differences between the Calvinistic and Romish churches. Its first meeting was attended by Catherine de Medicis, and her son Charles IX. Beza, with several doctors, represented the one church; and Cardinal Ippoloto d'Este, as Papal legate, the other.

Maisons.—Inns:—Hotel Chasse Imperiale, Soleil d'Or.

It is situated in a neighbourhood bristling with villas, &c.; and it was here that Voltaire wrote "Zaire"

The railway crosses the Seine at Bézons by a timber bridge of nine arches, each 100 feet, resting on stone piers. Immediately after, on our left, we come to the junction of the St. Germains line: and at Asnières the Versailles line branches off to the right. The Seine is again crossed by a bridge of five arches, and the village of Clichy passed on the left; after which the railway enters Paris by Les Batignolles, passing through two tunnels under the Place de l'Europe, and crossing under the Rue de Stockholm, it arrives at the Paris terminus, Rue d'Amsterdam.

Paris.—See page 379.

Paris to Strassburg.

The railway from Paris to Strassburg is about 312 miles in length, besides having several important branches. It traverses provinces differing in their produce, manners, and the character of their inhabitants, and the last section of the line is now German territory. Between the rising and the setting of the sun, a traveller may quit the banks of the Seine and reach the banks of the Rhine; he may contemplate the towers of Nôtre Dame in the morning, and admire the spire of the Cathedral of Strassburg in the afternoon. The railway, on quitting the large terminus at the Rue Neuve de Chabrol, takes a northern direction between the Faubourgs St. Denis and St. Martin passes by Bondy, Villemomble, and Gagny, joins the valley of the Marne at Chelles, touches Lagny on the right bank of the Marne, crosses that river twice at Chalifert and at Isle, proceeds between Villency and the Marne to skirt the Faubourg St. Remy at Meaux.

Meaux—See page 375.

The railway joins Armentières after having crossed the canal of the Ourcq and the Marne above Trilport. On quitting the tunnel it proceeds by the side of the Marne to the south-west of the village, touches at Ussy, to the north of La Ferte-sous-Jouarre, a very pretty town with a large number of promenades surrounding it; passes the river a second time at Saussay, a third time at the south of Courcelles, traverses Nanteuil with a tunnel crosses the Marne a fourth time, following the left bank, touches at Nogent l'Artaud and Chezy l'Abbaye, and cuts through a corner with a tunnel. The beauty of the Marne will strike the traveller.

Chateau-Thierry—Inns: Sirène, d'Angleterre—A sweet little town, beautifully situated on the Marne, in the department of Aisne, with a population of 5930, and remarkable as being the birth place of La Fontaine.

Diligences to Soissons, Mery, and Varennes.

Dormans—Inn: Lion d'Or—A small town in the department of Marne, with a population of 2250. Magnificent park. The line crosses the Marne an eighth time between Chateau-Thierry and Vitry-le-Français; follows the left bank constantly, touches at Dormans, Port-à-Binson, Damery, and arrives at Epernay (Junction for Reims), see page 369. On the left bank of the Marne and famous for its champagne wines.

Chalons-sur-Marne.—See page 364.—Leaving here, the road passes Vitry-la-Ville, Loisy, and arrives at Vitry-le-Francois—Inn: La Cloche—A modern town, built on the Marne, with 7620 inhabitants. It has a very pretty Gothic church.

The railway leaves Vitry by the south-east, turns off to the left into the valley of the Saulx, passing Blesmes, Pargny Sermaize and Revigny stations, following the course of the river, and then skirts the valley of the Ornain to gain.

Bar-le-Duc.—(See p. 357). The railway continues through the valley of the Ornain to Loxeville, and Lérouville stations. It passes

Commercy; then crosses the valley of the Meuse at Ville-Yssey, over a bridge of ninety yards; then passes near Pagny-sur-Meuse, under a fort, by a tunnel 570 yards long, and reaches Toul by the valley of the l'Ingressin, which it enters by a tunnel 1120 yards long.

Toul, see page 392. From here the railway runs along the left bank of the Moselle, while approaching the canal of the Marne, to the Rhine. It follows the valley of the Moselle on the right bank, crosses that river at Fontenoy over a bridge of seven arches, of 16 yards span each, turns the picturesque fort of Liverdun, and crosses the Moselle twice, on bridges raised sufficiently high to allow vessels to pass underneath. These bridges are formed of five arches, of 24 yards diameter. The traveller should look out for the Cathedral, which may be finely seen from the rail near the station, although at some distance. The road then proceeds to Frouard, its point of junction with the branch to Metz, which is distant thirty miles. From Frouard the road runs to Nancy, by the village of Champigneulle. It crosses the canal there by a bridge; it reaches Nancy, to the south of which the terminus, situated between the Faubourgs Stanislas and St. Jean, has been constructed on a lake, where it is recorded that Charles the Bold was killed

Nancy—See page 377.

After having passed Nancy, the railway joins the canal from the Marne to the Rhine, alongside of which it runs as far as Varangeville. A single bridge, that of St. Plin, 19 yards wide, serves both for the railway and the canal to cross the Meurthe. The line follows the valley of the Meurthe as far as Luneville. There it passes the various arms of the river over bridges of a peculiar construction, thence from Lunéville—a town where was signed the treaty between France and Austria in 1801, ceding the Rhine as the French boundary on that side—the railway turns to the valley of the Verruse, near Marrainvillers. It ascends the stream of the Amiscuta, the hill which separates the waters of the Savon from the Sarre, above Richecourt, crosses the new German frontier, and arrives at Sarreburg; and proceeds towards Hommarting. It was at this point that it became necessary to cross the chain of the Vosges. From Hommarting to Strassburg the line is Thirty-eight miles long. The section between Hommarting and the limits of the department of the Bas-Rhin comprises the difficult labour of the passage of the Vosges, which is accomplished by a tunnel of 2678 yards in length. On the side of Lorraine this tunnel is placed at the left of, and on the same level as, the tunnel of the canal of the Marne to the Rhine; but, in place of remaining on that level, it descends into the mountain, becoming thus excavated under the canal, so that it reappears on the side of Alsace on the right of the canal, and 39 feet below it. Beyond that great tunnel five others of less dimensions are met—respectively, 245, 432, 395, 500, and 308 yards in length. The last, the entrance of which presents the appearance of a feudal fortress, is immediately followed by a great viaduct which crosses the canal and the Zorne, and terminates in a cutting almost perpendicularly in the rock, and of which the form resembles that of a fort. Nothing can be more picturesque than the country in which these works of art are to be found. The ruins of the Castle of Lutzlebourg are also to be seen above the tunnel of 450 yards, and the two Castles of Haut-Barr and Geroldseck show themselves on the mountains at this side of Saverne. The railway, on quitting Saverne, continues in the valley of the Zorne as far as Brumath. After passing Vendenheim station we arrive at Strassburg. The Paris railway joins that of Basle on the glacis of Strassburg, and it proceeds into the town by four lines of rails.

Strassburg.—Now the German capital of Alsace or Elsass. See page 447.

ROUTE 27.

Paris to Marseilles, by Lyons and Avignon.

The railway, after leaving Paris, in Terminus Boulevard Mazas, on the right bank of the Seine, close to the Bridge of Austerlitz, follows the bank of that river, passing Villeneuve St. George's, Montgeron, and several other unimportant stations, before its arrival at Melun.

Bois-le-Roi—There is a fine viaduct of thirty arches, upwards of 70 feet high.

Fontainebleau—See page 370.

Moret St. Mammes—A venerable and picturesque old town, surrounded by walls, and having an old church and castle.

Montereau—An industrious town, at the junction of the Sonne and Yonne, with a population of 6220. The train stops a few minutes, and passengers can get some refreshment. A branch railway to Troyes diverges at this point. There are two porcelain manufactories here. Steamers ply between this and Paris.

Pont-sur-Yonne—Is beautifully situated surrounded by verdant banks and sheltered by lofty poplars. Châteaux of the noblesse are crowded together in large numbers.

Sens—See page 391. Departing, the railway passes Villeneuve le Roi, or Sur Yonne (in this neighbourhood and town the lover of sketching will find ample food for study), and St. Julien du Sault stations, to Joigny—Inn: Duc de Bourgogne.

A town of 6800 inhabitants, beautifully situated on the Yonne, which is promenaded from one side to the other by a fine quay. There are three Gothic churches worth a visit. Coaches daily to Auxerre, Vermenton, Chemaix, and Nevers.

La Roche—From here the branch line separates for Auxerre.

Brienon is next arrived at, a small town, carrying on an extensive trade in linen, coals, and corn.

St. Florentin—A neat town, having a Gothic church, museum, baths, and theatre, and manufactories of cotton, silk, and velvet. Coaches to Auxerre, Vermanton, Vezelay, Clamar, La Charite and Nevers.

About fourteen miles off is the Abbey of Pontigny, the retreat of Thomas à Becket.

Flogny—The railway is carried through the valley of the Armançon, and follows the course of the Canal de Bourgogne.

Tonnerre—Inns: Lion d'Or, Des Couriers. Pop. 4,800.

An old town, built on the slope of a hill, and having some implement works. On the summit is the church of St. Pierre, commanding a magnificent view. In it is a marble effigy of Marguerite of Bourgogne, Queen of Sicily and wife of Charles I. of Anjou. She founded the richly endowed hospital in the town. The Trains stop here for refreshment.

Tanlay—128 miles.—Here is one of the finest châteaux in Burgundy, built by Admiral Coligny, the leader of the Protestants, and first victim of the massacre of St. Bartholomew.

Ancy-le-Franc—136¾—English miles.—Another magnificent château, surrounded by very pretty grounds.

Nuits-Sous-Ravier—140¾ miles—A small town in the midst of the vineyards Romana Richelbourg, La Tache, &c. Passing the station at Aisy, we proceed through a famous vineyard country, entering the department of Côte d'Or.

Montbard—151¼ miles.—Inn:—l'Ecu.

A small town, remarkable as the birthplace of the celebrated naturalist Buffon, who lived in the Château. The railway here passes through cuttings and embankments, winding round hills and mountains.

Coaches to Autun, Sémur, Saulieu, Châtillon, and Langres.

Les Laumes and Verrey are passed before we arrive at Blaisy station, at the Tunnel which cost more than £90,000, and is 2¼ miles long.

Dijon—See page 367. From hence the railroad takes us on by Gevrey and Vougeot stations, through vineyards famous for their wines and the richness of the land. There is a branch Railway to Dole, and Besançon.

Nuits, where a fight took place in the war of 1870. Thence

A prosperous town, in department Côte-d'Or, and the chief seat of the wine trade in Burgundy.

Twelve miles S. W., at Cussy la Colonne, is a Roman monument in the shape of a pillar, bearing bas-reliefs, and said to have been erected to commemorate a victory of Julius Cæsar over the Helvetians. Its access is very inconvenient, from the cross-roads met with at every turn of the journey.

Rail to Autun. From here the railway proceeds through a beautiful wine country, and arrives by Meursault station, at Chagny—A town full of objects worthy the sketcher's notice. The tower of the church is striking. Here terminates the range of the Côte-d'Or.

Chalons-sur-Saone—See page 364.

DESCENT OF THE SAONE—CHALONS TO LYONS,—From Chalons the tourist can proceed on to Lyons by railway, (page 48), by steamer or by diligence, travelling by the post road, which is good, and interestingly picturesque. From here to Lyons, by steamer, in about 6 hours, returning in about 8 hours. The voyage is preferable to the land journey, though it follows the classical Senonis, a stream still as in Cæsar's time "incredibili lenitate."

Leaving Chalons, the banks at first rather uninteresting, brighten up as we approach Lyons Passing opposite the mouth of the Canal du Centre, we sail into a canal which saves the boat a long round, and see, on the right

Tournus—Inns:—De la Gare, Sauvage, and De l'Europe.

A town of 5610 inhabitants. It has a church. Greuz, the painter, who died at Paris in 1805, was born here. At Fleurville, on the left, there is a bridge over the Saône under which the boat passes, and gets into a larger expanse of water. To the left we see St. Albin, with its early pointed Gothic church. Here the scenery is delightful; the slopes are all covered with vineyards—22½ miles from Chalons.

Railway to Amberieu and Geneva, see page 54.

Right—At St. Romain (36½ miles from Chalons) is a suspension bridge, of considerable lightness and beauty; to the left is Toissey, an old town shaded by poplars and willows. We see another bridge to the right at Belleville. The next places seen are Montmerle to the left, and Villefranche to to the right, whose port is Ause.

Left—Trevoux (68½ miles from Chalons) an old town, beautifully situated on the slope of a hill, over the winding stream under an old castle. It has a population of 3,000; and was the place where the Jesuits compiled and printed the learned works called the "Journal de Trévoux," and "Dictionnaire de Trévoux." The river becomes contracted and passes on the right, by Belle Ile, and under the richly wooded heights of Mont d'Or, 1000 feet above the river. Neuville is seen on the left, near many flotillas drawn by horses. To the right is Couson, opposite

La Roche Taillee, on the left, so designate from a cutting caused to be made by Agrippa through it, to effect a passage for one of the great Roman highways. Further down we see L'Ile Barbe—an island on the river nearly surrounded by escarped rocks, and linked to each bank by a suspension bridge. It was, we are told, a favourite retreat for Charlemagne, and has a chapel of the twelfth century, and many curious fragments of Roman antiquities. As we enter Lyons under the heights which here border the river, called Croix Rousse, we are forcibly reminded of the Avon at Bristol, under the slopes of Durdham and Kingslown, and the rocks of Clifton.

Lyons—86½ miles from Chalons—See page 374.

Railway from Lyons.

The boats are anything but clean, and are generally overloaded with merchandise. They start from the right bank. Leaving Lyons, we pass on our right the junction of the Saône with the Rhone, and sail by the wire suspension bridge of La Mulatiere, close to the railway to St. Etienne. The scenery is picturesque in the extreme, being enlivened by a series of landscapes.

Givors, on the right—an important place, because of its position on the railway, and of the trade which it carries on in glass. It is situated at the mouth of a canal, and has a population of 10,000. Railway between Givors and Vienne.

Vienne—One of the most ancient towns in France (see page 395), and also interesting as the cradle of Christianity in the west. Railway to Grenoble, Lyons, Marseilles, Paris, Givors, &c.

Condrieux—a town celebrated for its wines. Population 4000. At Servières is a suspension bridge and good road leading to Annonay. On the right the St. Etienne and Marseilles road descends through an opening near Annonay, and crosses the Rhone by the suspension bridge of St. Vallier - INNS.—L'ECU.

Standing on a terrace above the Rhône. Population, 3000. In the neighbourhood are some picturesque ruins, and St. Roche Taillée. Sailing from here we see to the left the Château de Ponsas, a splendid object, with frowning towers and battlements. Here, tradition says, Pontius Pilate ended his days. The valley of the Rhone is near; and as we approach, passing a lofty, round-topped hill on our left, called Table du Roi, on the south side of which is the celebrated vineyard l'Hermitage, we see TAIN, a small town of 3000 inhabitants, connected by a suspension bridge of wire with

Tournon on the right, one of the chief towns of the department of Ardèche with about 5280 inhabitants. Above the bridge are the picturesque towers of a castle. Below is the College Royal, founded by the Cardinal de Tournon, in 1542. The valley of the river Isère now opens up into a wide and monotonous plain; the vista through the valley being terminated by the snowy mass of Mont Blanc rising behind the Alps of Dauphiné, a splendid sight, though 110 or 112 miles distant. From here we sail in view of hills covered with vineyards; and the bare lime-stone precipices rising above the village of St. Peray, and surmounted by the picturesque castle of Crussol. Diligences to Romans on the Isère, on the road to Grenoble.

Valence.—HOTELS:—De France: Du Louvre. Pop. 18,710. An ancient walled town, on the east side of the Rhone, here crossed by a suspension bridge. It has a cathedral, containing the heart of Pope Pius VI., who died here a prisoner, 1799; and an artillery school, in which Napoleon I. studied, 1785; also river docks, and some factories. For Railway, see Time Tables.

The slopes of the hills all about are covered with vineyards which produce excellent wines.

On the right there is an ugly line of limestone cliffs bounding the right side of the Rhône valley, and further down on the same side, on the summit of the same escarpment, stands the ruins of Soyons castle. On the left the Roche Courbe, which, when first seen, appears a cleft with precipitous sides, but a little further down, a series of peaks.

L'Etoile, a sweet little village; near to LAVOUTTE, a small town with a castle on the top of a hill over it.

Poussin—A small town, with a suspension bridge. At Cruas is a singular abbey on a hill.

Montelimar. — Stat. — INNS:— Post, Palais Royal, Lion d'Or.

An old town, of 12,050 inhabitants, surrounded by ramparts. Its chief source of industry is the manufacture of Morocco leather and soap. Opposite here is Theil, where the suspension bridge across the Rhone was swept away by the flood in 1840. At this point the scenery is brilliant.

Viviers—A small town of 2700 inhabitants. Its chief buildings are the college and cathedral. On the left we see the magnificent top of Mont Ventoux, the extreme point of the French Alps, seen on our route up to Avignon from here. Below Viviers the river widens up, and is intersected by numerous islands. A new bridge has been erected in place of the one destroyed in 1840. It crosses at BOURG ST. ANDEOL—a town of 464 souls, built on the rock. Here persons leave the steamer for Orange. Opposite here, but 1½ mile distant, is Pierrelatte, named from the colossal mass of rock rising from out the plain in its rear. To the right the Ardèche discharges its waters into the Rhone. About two miles lower down, we reach Pont Esprit, and passing the mouth of the Drome, we reach Anconne, where the river makes a great bend. From here we proceed to

Pont St. Esprit.—A small town, having a population of 5550, with a strong citadel, and one of the longest bridges in France, 2718 feet long, built in 1310. It occupied forty-five years in building, and has nineteen arches, besides four small land arches. At St. Esprit the river becomes a rapid current. The next important town is

Orange.—Stat.—INNS: Hotel des Princes, and De la Poste. Pop. 10,000. See page 379.

The Roman Arausio, in dept. Vaucluse, near the Rhône, once held by the family of William III. to whom it gave the title of Prince of Orange. Notice the Roman Triumphal Arch; and the Roman Theatre, 348 ft. long, 115 ft. high, of uncemented stone. It has a collection of antiquities. The Arch is 72 ft. high, and 69 ft. broad, and covered with reliefs. Remnants of antiquity are seen in almost every house. There are traces of Roman walls, and a Cathedral of the 6th century. Below Orange the Rhone traverses a wide plain. Roquemaure is seen on the right, and on the left Châteauneuf, shortly after leaving which, we see the spires and towers of Valson, fifteen miles N. E. of Orange.

Avignon.—See page 356.

AVIGNON TO MARSEILLES—Distance, 44 English miles—Quitting the Avignon Terminus, the railway runs in a direct course on the left bank of the Rhone, crossing the foaming stream of the Durance by a viaduct 656 yards long, three miles south of Avignon. The route proceeds from here through a country of rugged wildness and uninteresting scenery. Barbantane, and its extensive quarries are on our left: at the other side of the river, four or five miles distance, can be seen ARAMON, a town with 2720 inhabitants. Rognonas and Cadillan station are next passed. Not far remote we see the colossal squared castle of Tarascon on our left, and on our right we see Beaucaire. The railway junction to Nismes and Montpellier is at Tarascon.—Inn: Hotel des Empereurs.

A town with a population of 13,500, joined by a bridge to Beaucaire. It contains the Church of St. Martin, in the Gothic style of the 14th century, the southern portal excepted, which is circular, with deep mouldings. The crypt contains the shrine and marble effigy of St. Martha. The castle is a massive structure, erected in 1400 by Henri II., and for a long period the residence of King René, but now used as a prison. It may be reached via Bordeaux, Agen, Montauban, Toulouse, and Foix, within a short distance are the hot sulphur springs of Ussat and Ax, under the Pyrenees.

Beaucaire.—Inn. Hotel du Luxembourg.

Is opposite Tarascon, at the mouth of the Canal du Beaucaire, connecting the Rhone and Garonne, and has a population of 9545. Beaucaire is celebrated for its Fair, at which usually assemble 300,000 persons from all parts of the world. The ruined castle stands on the summit of a rock, its only remains being now a triangular tower, and a very old Romanesque chapel, in which St. Louis heard mass previous to his embarkation for the crusade. From it an excellent view can be had.

Excursions can be made to St. Remy and St. Gilles, and to Les Beaux, a town without a modern building, having only 200 inhabitants, and being a perfect specimen of the towns of the middle ages. The deep debris of mud spread over waste land, on the right, close to the Bridge of Beaucaire, is the remains of the inundation of 1840, when the Rhone overflowed its banks.

Quitting Tarascon, the railway takes its course through a marshy plain. Segonneaux station is passed before our arrival at Arles, two miles from which, on the left, are the ruins of the great Abbey of Montmajeur, seated on a rock of singular form and ascent. On the north-east side, at the foot of the rock, is a chapel, in the Romanesque style, without ornament. On our left, two miles or so from Arles, the Rhone branches off into two divisions, the Petit Rhone flowing westwards, and crossed by a suspension bridge at Fourques.

Arles.—See page 355.

From Arles, south and east to the sea, nearly as far as Marseilles, stretches a wide and unbroken plain, which takes in the delta of the Rhone, and similar to that of the Nile, in climate and sand, marshes and lagoons, and variety of birds.

Departing from Arles, the railway leaves the Rhone, and taking a south-east direction, issues from the Alyscamp, and passes over a long viaduct, through a stony plain called the Crau, which stretches itself south to the Mediterranean. Leaving Constantine, it arrives at St. Chamas station, a town on the Etang de Berre, with a population of 2640, having an old church. Just outside the town is the Pont Flavien, a Roman bridge that spans the Touloubre, with triumphal arches at each end. The railway in its course from here is carried over many ridges and ravines by tunnels and embankments, passing Berre, Rognac, and Pas de Lanciers, previous to arriving at Marseilles, which it enters emerging from a tunnel 492 yards long.

ROUTE 28.

Paris to Nantes, by Orleans and Tours.

The Direct Route to Tours leaves Orleans on the Left. See Time Tables.

From the terminus in the Boulevard de l'Hôpital, close to the Jardin des Plantes, and the Hospital of Salpetrière, the line directs its course along a pretty and picturesque country by the base of the slopes bordering the left bank of the Seine. It passes gardens, and houses on the river's bank; skirts the walls of Vitry and Joisy on the right, and reaches

Choisy—a thriving and manufacturing town of 4650 inhabitants. Here is a china factory, and also the largest Morocco factory in France. On the heights above, to the right, are the village and château of Orly. We approach the vine-clad slopes limiting the valley of the Seine, and pass

Ablon to Juvisy Station—a very old spot, occupying the foot of a hill on the right.

Here the branch railway to Corbeil separates from the main line to Orleans, turning off to the left, and running near the high road to Lyons; but preserving its course along the Seine, it passes Ris Station, and cuts through a part of the park of Petit Bourg, arriving from Evry Station, at Corbeil on the Essonne.—Pop. 5290.

Leaving Juvisy, our main route curves a little to the west, crossing the high road to Orge, enters the valley of the Orge, traversing the gardens of Savigny—a small village with a handsome castle—and approaches by a viaduct Epinay station; next, skirts on the left the Forest of St. Geneviève, and traverses a portion of the park of the Château d'Ormay before reaching St. Michel, whence the railway passes through Brétigny station, beyond which it descends into the valley of the Juine, passes thence Bouray, Lardy, and Etréchy, and runs parallel with the post road before its arrival at Etampes, an old town, with a population of 9,250, carrying on a thriving trade in flour and wool. Its Gothic church, called Nôtre Dame, and the church of St. Martin, together with the remains of the royal castle, are worth seeing. The Hotel de Ville will interest as an old building. Omnibuses go twice a day to Pithivers, 23 miles south of Versailles.

Monnerville.—Here the railway crosses on viaducts the river Chalonette, ascends the valley of l'Hernery until it reaches the high plain of La Beauce, and crosses the post road by a bridge before arriving at Angerville.—Coaches to Chartres. From here the railway runs side by side with the post road, passing Toury, Artenay, Chevilly, and Cercottes, and reach the station of Orleans, a little east of Porte Bannier.

Orleans.—See page 379.

From here to Tours the railway serpentines along the right bank of the Loire, whose course lies through a wide valley, barred a little by small hills.

La Chapelle; and St. Ay, a small town on the right bank of the river, with a population of 1200. Lord Bolingbroke lived here during his exile from England, and built the Château du Loiret. It has a very fine church, remarkable for the image of the Virgin in black marble, before which Louis XI., whose tomb is here, used to pray.

Meung Station.

Beaugency.—An old town, with a population of 5050, between two hills. The Keep of the Castle, and Hotel de Ville, are objects of attraction. It carries on a brisk trade in wine, and brandy, and is the seat of several factories for woollen cloth, leather, &c.

Digitized by Google

Mer—A sweet village, delightfully ensconced in the midst of country houses and villas.

Menars.—Here is the Château which belonged to Madame de Pompadour.

Blois.—See page 359.

Leaving Blois, the railway wends its way down the Loire, through a fine and fertile plain. It passes Chousy, Onzain, and Limeray, and reaches Amboise.—See page 358. The chapel of the old castle is one of the most exquisite specimens of the profusely florid Gothic style in France.

Departing, the railway is carried along the Loire to Noizay and Vernau.

Vouvray.—Here it crosses the Loire by a bridge to the left bank. Mont Louis being passed, we arrive at Tours.—See page 392.

The railway now directs its course by the left bank of the Loire, passes St. Symphorien on the right—a pretty suburb of Tours, adjoining the hamlet of St. Cyr, close to which, in a neat cottage, lived the poet Béranger—and arrives at Savonnières station, whence it proceeds on to Cinq St. Mars, where it crosses the Loire over a bridge of 19 arches. Close to this spot is the very old and curious monument, known as La Pont-Cinq Mars, a square tower built of brick, whose history is lost in the night of ages. It was originally pinnacled on each side. It is 92 feet high, and 13 feet wide; and has on the south side the bricks arranged in twelve compartments. From the last station of St. Savonnières the railway passes through a country full of villages hewn out of a yellow chalk rock. Langeais is a small but pretty town, at the mouth of the valley which opens into the Loire. It has at its rear very many limestone cliffs, on the summit of one of which stands an old Castle of the 12th century, where the marriage of Charles VIII. with Anne of Brittany was celebrated.

Adjacent to St. Patrice is the Château of Rochecotte, the property of the Princess of Talleyrand, niece to the celebrated French statesman.

The next station is Port Boulet. Our route hence lies through a country remarkable for its number of windmills, fluttering on the heights on either side. Approaching Saumur, we see the church of Nôtre Dame des Ardilliers. On its cupola is a record commemorative of the suppression of religious freedom by Louis XIV.

Saumur.—Inns: De Londres; Budan; Belvidere. Population, 14,080.

A picturesque town, as seen from the river, here crossed by a handsome stone bridge. On the quay stands the Hotel de Ville, an antique building of white and black stone, made to serve the double purpose of market-house and town-hall. Its castellated character, and beautiful Gothic ornaments, will repay a minute inspection. The Museum, in its upper story, contains a Roman trumpet five feet long, and several Celtic remains. Its chief church, that of St. Pierre, and the church of Nôtre Dame, which is older, will interest the antiquarian and architectural student.

The Castle rises prominently above the town almost in a perpendicular position, commanding a view of the Loire and outlying country. The prosperity of Saumur was destroyed by the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, by which all the Protestants were expelled; and the population, which was 26,000 under the governorship of Henry IV.'s Secretary, Du Plessis Mornay, the Protestant leader, became reduced to less than three-fourths.

A house built by King René of Anjou, called the Maison de la Reine Cicile, stands in the Quartier du Ponts; but so defaced, that no traces of its once beautiful front can be seen.

Not far from Saumur, on the south side, is the Dolmen of Pontigné or Bagneux; one of the most perfect and largest Druidical specimens in France. It is a kind of cot, measuring fifty feet in length, but yet built of only fourteen stones, the largest of which is 24 feet by 21 feet, and 2½ feet thick. The road by which these Druidical memorials are approached, leads over a pretty bridge, and by the village of Bagneux, near which they are to be found. About 10 m. distant are remains of Fontevrault Abbey (now a House of Detention), with a Church, containing effigy of our Henry V. and his Queen Eleanor, Richard Cœur de Lion, and Isabella wife of King John, of the Plantagenet line

Les Rosiers.—On the left, just opposite this place, on the top of a hill, is the church of Gennes. Between here and St. Mathurin, on our left is the colossal convent buildings of St Maur—historically interesting because of being the retreat of the learned Benedictine monks who, in 1621, compiled an immense number of valuable works, which have proved a treasure to literature.

St. Mathurin—Here this road leaves the Loire, and does not again join it for a distance of twenty miles. La Bohalle Trélasé, La Paperie, places of no importance, are next passed. Below the latter the Loire is split up into channels, by very many islands which are crossed by bridges difficult to pass under or over.

In our progress towards Angers, we see on our right the bridge Pons de Cé, near a village on the left bank of the Loire

Angers—See page 354.

Angers to Nantes.—The railway from here runs parallel with the bank of the river. The first stations met with are Bouchemain and La Pointe.—A very pretty spot among white villas and cottages, belonging to the inhabitants of Angers. Close to this spot the railway crosses the Maine. The Loire deepens below its junction with the Maine, and its banks become higher.

Several unimportant stations are passed between here and Champtocé requiring no special notice: Les Foyes, La Poissonnière, and Chalons. Here, to the left, we see a beautiful eminence, surmounted by the ruins of the convent of Cordilliers.

Champtocé—A pretty village on the post road. Here are the ruins of the feudal Castle once owned by the infamous Gilles de Retz stein de Laval, called Barbe Bleue—the original of the well-known story called Blue Beard. Having impaired his constitution and fortune by excesses, he engaged an Italian, who pretended to restore them with the blood of infants and young persons. To procure the blood, numerous young girls were murdered by the ruffian himself, to the number of 100. The country rose up against him. He was tried, found guilty, and burned at the stake at Nantes, confessing his crimes.

Ingrande—A small place, standing on the line which formerly marked the boundary of Brittany and Anjou. Between here and Varades, on the right at Montrelais, are extensive coal-fields. On the left we see the hills of St. Florent, containing the large ruins of the Abbey of Montglonne, destroyed during the revolutionary fury; and immediately below it the church of St. Florent, at the side of a pillar to the memory of the Vendéean General Bouchamps, to whom a marble monument is erected within the church. Below St. Florent an island divides the river.

Varades—A town of 3400 inhabitants, where the remnant of the Vendéean army waited for their companions, on their crossing the Loire after their defeat, 1793.

Ancenis—Inn: Hotel de France.

A small town of 3,680 inhabitants, with the remains of an old castle at the water's side. To the left, on the summit of a hill, the ruined castle of Champtocé.

Oudon—Here is the black eight-sided tower of Oudon, five stories high, of the 15th century.

Clermont—Remarkable for its Castle, one of the most beautiful ruins on the Loire, but without any historical associations. The somewhat rugged heights now give way to gentle undulations, which below Maures change again into a flat plain.

Maures.—Shortly after leaving, the towers and steeples of Nantes are seen rising in the distance. We pass Thouare and St. Luce stations before arriving at Nantes—See page 377.

ROUTE 29.

Paris to Toulouse, by Orleans and Limoges.

See Route 28.

Orleans TO TOULOUSE.—Distance, 358 English miles.

The railway crosses the Loire by a bridge, and pursues its course almost parallel to the post-road, entering the tunnel of l'Allouet, 4045 feet long. It leaves the suburbs of Orleans through a country full of villages and pretty villas, crosses the Loiret by a bridge, close to which was the exiled Lord Bolingbroke's residence, in the Château of La Source. From here up to Vierzon, the railway passes through a country bleak, undiversified, and monotonous, arriving first at La Ferte St. Aubin—A small village; on the left of which is the Château of Lowendahl. The following unimportant stations are next passed Lamotte, Nouan-le-Fuzelier, Salbris, and Theillay.

Vierzon.

Departing hence, the railway quits the cheerless scenery just passed through for the valley of the Cher, which is well cultivated, possessing many vineyards, and interspersed with some pretty scenery along its borders. We cross the Eure and Cher immediately after leaving Vierzon, and pass by Chery, Reuilly, St. Lizaigne, Issoudun, and Neuvy-Pailloux stations, before arriving at Chateauroux.

From here we traverse a very dreary country as far as ARGENTON, a small village on the Creuse, and thence, passing some unimportant stations reach Limoges—See page 373.

Travellers who desire to see a curious and remarkable church of the eleventh century, will find one at St. Junien, eighteen miles from Limoges. It contains an altar and sarcophagus, in the Byzantine style.

The next important station after Limoges is Thiviers, in Dordogne, where much earthenware is made. Pop. 2710. The fine Castle of Hautefort is in the neighbourhood.

Perigueux, on the River l'Isle. See p. 387.

Brive—Inn: Hotel de Bordeaux; Toulouse. Pop. 9850.

A town occupying a very pretty situation in the valley of the Corrèze, and remarkable for an old Gothic House, and as being the birthplace of Cardinal Dubois and Marshal Brune. It is surrounded by a maize and vine country.

Our line from here passes through rather a hilly country, takes in on its course a view of the castles of Noailles and Turenne, the latter of which is located two miles east of the road, and is memorable as being the place of refuge of the great Condé's wife, where she concocted the civil war of Guienne.

St. Christophe.—Here the junction from Clermont Ferrand, and Rodez takes place.

Vivies, or Viviers, on the Lot. About 15 miles lower down the river is CAHORS, a very old town (pop. 12,850), the chief place of Department of Lot, with a good Cathedral. Here Fénelon, author of "Telemachus," went to school. He was born at the Castle of La Mothe Fénelon, in the neighbourhood. Another remarkable person, Murat, King of Naples, was born at BASTIDE within a short distance. The dim outlines of the Pyrenees, though 150 miles off, can be seen on a clear day from the heights hereabouts.

We cross the Aveyron, and traverse a portion of the beautiful plain of Languedoc, before arriving at Montauban—See page 376.

Leaving Montauban we pass into the suburb of Ville Bourdon, and enter on the grand route from Bordeaux to Toulouse.

Digitized by Google

Grisolles Station. Thence we proceed through a plain of astonishing fertility, nearly alongside the Garonne, and closing towards Toulouse, arrive at it over a bridge spanning the Canal du Midi, which joins the Garonne a mile or so to the right of the bridge seen in the suburbs—Arnaud St. Bernard. On our left an Obelisk, marks the central position taken by Marshal Soult at the battle of Toulouse.

Toulouse—See page 392.

Nancy to Metz, Forbach, and Ludwigshafen.

Distance—165 English miles.

Nancy.—See page 377.

The railway, leaving Nancy, proceeds through a country requiring no special notice, and at about five miles' distance from Nancy crosses the Moselle, a little before arriving at FROUARD, the junction with the Paris line; whence it proceeds on to Marbache and Dieulouard—places of little importance.

Pont-a-Mousson—Inns: Hotel d'Angleterre. Pop. 8,115. A pretty town, on the Moselle, which is here crossed by a bridge; it has a splendid Gothic church, richly ornamented with paintings of the Lorraine school. The old house, called Maison des Sept Pechés Capitaux, situated in the Square, deserves a visit. The next stations passed are places of no importance,—Pagny, Noveant, and Ars. The new German frontier is crossed before reaching Metz.—See page 444.

From Metz to Forbach the scenery is pleasing, and in many instances picturesque, but altogether devoid of objects of interest. Here the line passes through ground traversed by the German armies in their victorious advance towards Metz, in the month of August, 1870.

Courcelles.—Here the victory of Pange, or Courcelles, was obtained by them on Sunday, 14th August: after they had occupied Herny, Falkenberg, and St. Avold, the stations which next follow. Near St. AVOLD the Lemberg line falls in.

Forbach, formerly the last town on the French frontier, which the Germans reached 6th August, after defeating General Frossard at Spicheren. Pop 4830. Woollen goods are made.

Saarbrucken.—i.e., the Bridge of the Saar—a town on that river, in Rhenish Prussia, now of historical note. Pop. 13,120. It was bombarded and carried by the French on the 2nd of August, in presence of the Emperor Napoleon and his son the Prince Imperial, who here received his "baptism of fire;" but the eclat of this small success was soon lost in the German victories at Weissenburg on the 4th, and at Wörth, or Frösch willer, on the 6th. It was immediately retaken by the Germans, and became the head quarters of the King of Prussia on the 10th August.

Rohrbach, and the adjoining country, as well as that surrounding Bexbach and Neunkirchen, is celebrated as a rich and productive coal-field. The railway then proceeds to Homburg, a small but clean town in Rhenish Bavaria, with a population of 2850, not to be confounded with the celebrated Baths of Homburg (now in Prussia) in the Taunus chain of hills near Frankfort on the Main.

From here there is a branch line to Zweibrücken.

Landstuhl.—A small town, containing a population of 1500. The ruined Castle of the Counts of Sickengen overhangs the town: it was partly hewn out of the rock, and had walls 24 feet thick. In it the chivalrous Franz Von Sickengen died, May 7th, 1523, having been grievously hurt by a falling beam. His bones rest behind the altar of the Roman Catholic Church. Part of his monument—a mutilated statue of a horseman—stands at the bottom of the tower. Another part, with the epitaph stands behind the high altar.

Kaiserslautern.—Inn: Schwan.

On the Lauter, in Rhenish Bavaria, between pleasant hills, and containing a population of 22,700 inhabitants. A castle was built here, in the twelfth century, by the Emperor Barbarossa, which was separated from the town by its fortifications, but was destroyed in the war of the Spanish succession.

Kaiserslautern has considerable woollen manufactories. It possesses a church built by Barbarossa whose Palace was the central Prison of the Rhenish circle.

Neustadt.—Inns: Post, and Goldener Löwe.

This Neustadt an-der-Haardt, on the Speyer, a branch of the Rhine, is an old town, picturesquely seated at the foot of the Haardt mountains. Pop. 7600. A new church was opened in 1862. In its old church, of the 14th century, are many curious monuments of the Pfalzgraves, or former lords of the Palatinate. It is much frequented by invalids for the Grape cure, and is the centre of an attractive neighbourhood, abounding in ruined castles and other objects of interest.

From this place, the Railway to Landau and Strassburg branches off.

The railroad, quitting Neustadt, proceeds through a splendid country, famous for its vineyards and the rich wines which they supply. Geologists will be attracted by the basalt rocks near Pechstein-Kopf mountain.

Haaloch; Bohl; and Schifferstadt.—From this point the railway branches off to Spires. Thence to Matterstadt and Ludwigshafen, opposite Mannheim, on the Rhine. See page 432.

To Madrid, 902½ m.; via Bordeaux, Bayonne, Irun, Vitoria, Burgos, and Valladolid.

From Madrid (p. 542) to Cordova and Cadiz, 355 m. The line passes Val de Penas (11,000 inhabitants), in La Mancha, renowned for wine and for the adventures of Sancho Panza. At 165¾ m. from Madrid you pass through the Sierra Morena, at the defile of Despena perros, i.e., Pitch the dogs over. Eight tunnels, of 110 to 330 yards in this part of the route.

Cordova to Bobadilla, 75¾ m. Thence a branch to Granada, 82½ m. For the Moorish Alhambra, in view of the Sierra Nevada, see page 541.

ROUTE 33.

1. Saragossa to Bagneres de Luchon, by Jaca.

Saragossa to Jaca 110 kilomètres (68⅜ E. mls.); Jaca to Urdos by Canfranc, 7 hours 40 minutes: Urdos to Etsaut (Route to Oloron), 45 minutes; Bedous, 1 hour 30 minutes; Escot, 1 hour. At Escot you strike off to the right, over the Col de Maris Blanca (a walk of 2½ hours); descend by Bielle to Pau Route. Proceeding by that road (1 hour) to Louvie Juson, you hit a high-road taking you, by Bruges and Asson, to Lourdes. From Lourdes you reach Bagnères de Bigorre, by Arreau and Luchon. A good round of 14 days can be made from Saragossa by Jaca to Luchon, and back by Venasque.

2. Luchon to Saragossa, by Venasque.

You ascend first to Bach (3 miles), following the Pique; thence advancing through the fine forest of Charuga (4½ miles) to the French hospice, and rising 4½ miles to the Col de Venasque by a steep ascent. Further on is the Spanish hospice: and in 2½ hours, and descending the course of the Essera, 14 kilometres (8¾ miles), you reach Venasque, from which another route also takes to Luchon Venasque has two inns—Pedro Farras and Brousseau's—5 to 10 francs per day. Position picturesque; 3829 feet above sea; contains some curious old houses and an old church—that of Santa Maria—in the Romana style. This is the first day's work.

Second day, by Eriste, Sahaun, San Pedro, and Campo, to Santa Liestra, a village where the night may be passed.

Third day, by La Venta de Santa Lucia, Grans (1800 inh.) with a very old church, to Cinca, Enats, and Barbastro (6043 inh.); house of St. Vincent de Paul; Plaza de Toros; Cathedral Pretty walks near. To Saragossa, carriages on rail, drawn by horses to Selgua, thence 7 miles, thence by Barcelona line to Saragossa.

3. From Saragossa to Bagneres de Bigorre, by Barbastro.

Rail to Barbastro, 132 kil. (82 E. mls.); thence to NAVAL, 17 kilom. (10½ E. mls.). Old houses; narrow streets; remains of an Arab castle.

Ainsa.—34 kilom (21 miles), formerly an important place, handsome treets; Moorish-looking houses. The two churches are ancient mosques, with immense vaults. The old Castle is quite an Arab construction in its original state.

Route proceeds by Puerto, 15 kilom. (9½ E. mls), whence two roads lead to France. 1. By Col de Sesa to Bielsa (6 hours), height 5087 feet, whence you descend to valley of Aure.—2. Over the Cinca and Cinqueta to El Plan, 15 kil. (9½ E. mls.); Customs' station Here again the route forks. Left route by Port de Plan (height, 8061 feet); hospice of Rioumajou to Tramesaigues (valley of Aure), 6 hours' descent Right road, 25 kil. (15½ E. mls.) takes you to Gistain, and on by a pretty valley to Col de la Pez, at foot of Pic du Midi de Geno (7107 feet), whence through the valley of Louzon to Bagneres de Bigorre.

4. From Jaca, across the Pyrenees.

From Jaca you reach Oloron, Gavarnie, and Cauterets.

Jaca is reached from Saragossa by rail to Huesca, 73 Kil., 45½ E. mls., and from Huesca by diligence.

The approach to

Jaca is by very picturesque slopes. Pop. 3012. The Cathedral is overloaded with ornaments. Near Jaca an immense panoramic view is obtained from Pena d'Oroel (6234 feet high). The monastery of San Juan de Pena deserves a visit, consisting of two churches; one subterranean, and containing the pantheon of the old kings of Aragon. A new monastery, surrounded by forests, has been built by the monks. The expedition takes a day.

From Jaca three routes lead to France. 1. By Canfranc to Oloron, 51 kil. (31½ E. mls.) Canfranc is the great junction of routes from Aragon to France, three of them being especially frequented, viz., 1. Col de Somport; 2. More eastward, the Port de Jaca; 3. Col des Moines. Col de Somport leads to Oloron by Auberge de Pailliette and Urdos. Oloron, 27 miles from Urdos.

2. Another route leads from Jaca to Cauterets; often very difficult, but much frequented in the fine season. This route takes you to a noted mountain basin on the French side, called the Gorge of Panticosa. A guide may be essential here. From Panticosa it is a nine hours' walk to Cauterets.

3. From Jaca to Gavarnie you pass by Panticosa, 36 kil. (22½ E. m.) and thence, by a mountain path over the Sorrosal torrent, by Linas to Bujarnelo (12 hours). Fair inn. Hence you proceed, by a pass open even in winter (2 hours) to the Col de Gavarnie (7480 feet). Descent of 1½ hour to the celebrated Cirque de Gavarnie.

From Saragossa to Eaux Chaudes and Eaux Bonnes.—Proceed first to Jaca and Canfranc. From Canfranc, continuing either by Col de Somport, or nearer by Col des Moines. Hence to Vallée de Bious, whence a carriage road to Gabas, 1½ hour. Gabas to Eaux Chaudes, a fine walk of six miles. Eaux Chaudes to Eaux Bonnes by road, six miles.

ROUTE 34.

Barcelona to Montserrat.—(Three days' Excursion).

First Day—Barcelona to Martorell. Rail, 9 a.m. Fare, 10 reals. Arrival at 10 a.m. Omnibus to Collbato (8 reals). Arrive at noon.

Posada Nueva de las Cuevas—Ascent to Grottoes takes 45 minutes (2 reals) Steep route with ladders. It requires 3½ hours, and takes 38 reals, to see all the curiosities. Dine and sleep at Collbato, which affords comfortable quarters.

Second Day.—Ascend San Geronimo (horse or mule, with guide, 18 reals). Provisions must be taken. Four hours up. Visit church, chamber of the Virgin, &c. Restaurant where you dine. Night quarters at Monastery.

Third Day.—Fine sunrise. Proceed to make visits to the various grottoes, hermitages, &c. Return by N.W. slope. Omnibus from Monastery takes you in one hour, by a fine road, to Monistrol. (6 reals). One hour brings you from the town to the station. Train at 5.30 p.m. Reach Barcelona in half an hour.

The Mountain is an assemblage of needle-shaped calcareous pinnacles of various colours, forming a solitary mass, rising from the plains of Catalonia, and split down the centre by a ravine, on the edge of which stands the monastery. The ruined hermitage of San Geronimo stands on the summit of the mountain, 3920 feet above the sea, and commands an immense horizon. The ancient Monastery has perished, save a gateway in the Byzantine style. Much of the present building consists of a chaos of chambers, galleries, and cells for pilgrims. The church is elegant; the apse very fine. Two good altar-pieces, St. Louis and St. Bruno; the venerated image of the Virgin is behind the altar. The mountain is covered with a number of old hermitages, scattered in adventurous positions on overhanging precipices 2600 or 2950 feet high. The Grotto of the Virgin, the Balcon des Moines, and the Desgutalls, immense rocks from which drips a stream of crystal-clear water, deserve especial attention. The mountain is visited by 60,000 pilgrims yearly, especially the 8th September. It was plundered by the French in 1811 and 1827.

ROUTE 35.

Excursions from Malaga.

Malaga itself (see page 545) has a mid winter climate and is the centre of numerous excursions. Of these we select the following:—1. To Ronda; 2. To the Baths of Carratraca.

1. To Ronda, you follow the road to Carratraca for 37 kilom. (23 E. mls) to La Pizarra, through the most romantic country. Casaborela, commanding an immense view, rises out of a beautiful valley. Beyond it the route plunges into a maze of narrow winding defiles, amidst torrents, red granite rocks, &c. El Burgo (6½ m.) has vestiges of Arab buildings; and soon after you approach the sublime, and almost awful, scenery of the Serrania, forming an immense circle of 28 miles, having in its centre a monstrous rock riven in two by a cleft 520 feet deep, through which a torrent rushes in a succession of cataracts. 6½ miles from El Burgo is Ronda, on two plateaux. Pop. 24,000. Inn, Las Animas. Town in the most picturesqueiy, striking position, divided into three quarters—the town proper, the Mercadillo, and San Francisco. Curiosities—La Casa del Rey Moro, with hanging gardens; La Plaza de Toros; the bridge across the Tajo, 325 feet high, &c. Great horse fair, 20th to 22nd May. Ronda breed of horses celebrated; the people retain much of the old Spanish character and are great smugglers, and very dexterous in the use of the dagger. La Cueva del Gesto, 7 kilom. (4½ miles), is an excursion worth making; and Ronda la Vieja (Old Ronda) deserves another (9 miles), containing ancient remains, including an amphitheatre. Gibraltar can be reached from Ronda by San Roque, 11 leagues (33 miles), a day's journey. Another path leads by Osuna to Seville.

2.—To Baths of Carratraca.—Rail to Pizarra Station. Carriages and mules to be had there. Two hours from Pizarra to Carratraca, through picturesque mountains, de Aguas.

Carratraca.—Height, 1594 ft. above sea. 100 houses for bathers. One story, 40 reals to 6 reals per day; one room, 8 to 1 real. Two comfortable hotels. Table hôte, 20 to 25 reals. The bathing establishment, at the top of the village. Its waters contain hydrate of soda, arsenium, bicarbonates, alkalines, and iron, yielding 768 litres per minute, or 1520 lbs. The smell is strongly that of sulphuretted hydrogen. They are good for skin and rheumatic disease: bronchial, chest, indigestion, and other complaints. Season from 15th of June to September. Cure varies from 15 to 30 baths.

RAILWAY JOURNEY FROM VIENNA TO CONSTANTINOPLE,

Via Bucharest and Varna.——By K. T. (1879.)

ROUTE 36.

The regular Danube Express Steam service ceases in the middle of October, and is often uncertain before that date, from either drought or fogs. Hence the necessity of taking Rail all the way from Vienna to Varna, or from Buda-Pest to Varna. But the journey is long and tedious, and for most people requires to be broken. This can only be done at Bucharest, a place of importance, and the capital of Roumania (see below), but to which there is no Guide that I could find. Hence the traveller has a difficulty in knowing what are the best Hotels, and is ignorant of some important details in a journey which he must make during a considerable portion of the year; unless he travels to Constantinople by the Mediterranean Route, which many bad sailors are anxious to avoid.

The details then of the Railway route are as follows: Distances—Vienna to Verciorova 480 miles: Bucharest 236 m.; Smarda 43 m. (for Rustchuk; Varna 140 miles—or about 900 miles. Leave Vienna 8.30 p.m. (p. 214 of Railway Tables). There is a "Mann's Sleeping Car" (now "International") attached, which passing through Buda-Pest (page 470), Szegedin (p. 478), Temesvar (p. 478). Herkulesbad (Sulphur Baths of Mehadia), Orsova (on the Danube, under the Transylvanian hills, near Trajan's Bridge and the Iron Gates), reaches Verciorova at 9.46 a.m. next morning (p. 214, 297). He e the sleeping car is taken off. This being the Roumanian frontier, the luggage is examined; and a good meal may be had at the Buffet; it is quite necessary, as other opportunities for eating are limited; namely, bread and coffee may be had at Craiova (on the Schyl) at 2.30 p.m.; and a little soup and meat during 15 minutes' stay at Pitesti (on the Argish) at 6 p.m.; Bucharest being reached at 8.40 p.m. (p. 297). Here one day's stay is desirable, as the remainder of the journey is fatiguing.

Having passed one day and two nights at Bucharest, the train is to be taken which leaves at 6.45 a.m. (p. 299), the "Philarète" Station (it is necessary to state this or you may be driven to the "Tirgoviste," by which you arrive). Through Tickets may be got; including the passage by the small steamer across the Danube, between Giurgevo and Rustchuck, or Smarda (3m. beyond Giurgevo) and Rustchuck. The steamer does not not necessarily go via Smarda, but goes direct between Giurgevo and Rustchuck, when the water is sufficiently deep, as it is in the late autumn, after the rains. In winter the steamer service is liable to interruption, on account of the floating ice on the Danube. There are eight stations between Bucharest and Smarda; the distance is 72 kils. (about 45 miles), and the time about 2 hours. A good deal of time is occupied in transferring luggage and passengers to the little steamer which crosses the Danube; in our case nearly an hour.

The boat left Smarda at ten minutes before noon, and reached the Station at Rustchuk (or Rustchuck in Bulgaria), in a little less than another hour, namely at 12.45. The fare for the steamer is high, 4 francs for each person, and nearly as much for a moderate amount of luggage. At Rustchuk Station (p. 293) tickets can be taken to Constantinople direct, including Rail and Steamboat: 1st class tickets 111·50 frs. There are also 2nd & 3rd class tickets; luggage charged moderately, which is examined here. There is an ill-supplied Buffet, with great scrambling and confusion; and we had no time for food. (N.B.—Some in a portable form should always be carried by the traveller on these lines). We started at 1.15 p.m., reached Sheytanjik at 6 p.m., with plenty of time for a rough dinner, and Varna (the Roman Odessus; VICE-CONSUL, W. Daldiel, Esq.) at 9.15 p.m., landing at the Pier for the Black Sea trip. Passengers walk the length of this, which is lighted by a few lanterns, to find some little boats at the end, which will convey them to the steamer some 10 or 15 minutes distant; a very unpleasant transit in wet or rough weather. The steamer is a good Austrian Lloyd boat, (p. 329), with well furnished cabins, starting as soon as the luggage is on board, say at about 11 p.m., and arriving at Constantinople between 2 and 3 p.m. next day. It carries the Mails, and sails on Tuesday and Saturday nights only. The same Express Train runs every day, but on the other nights meets inferior steamers. All through the year a French Messageries Steamer runs twice a-week from Constantinople to Odessa; thence by rail with sleeping car, all the way to Vienna.

Bucharest, or Bukarest, Bucarest, Bukhorest.—Stat.—The capital of Roumania, on the R. Dombitza or Dumbovitza, in lat. 44° 27′ N., long. 26° 8′ E. Pop. about 250,000. The chief Hotels are:—GRAND HOTEL BROFFT, looking on the Grand Place; GRAND HOTEL DU BOULEVARD; and HOTEL HUGUES. There are many others of the second rank. Prices are high, 50 per cent dearer than in Paris; an understanding as to terms should be made. We found excellent attendance, rooms elegant and clean, at the first-named Hotel, which we understood to be if anything the best.

One of its great peculiarities is that the city covers a very large surface of ground, being formed by the union of three or four straggling villages. Of late years its public buildings have increased; and it now comprises some long ill-paved streets, numerous Hotels, Restaurants, and Cafés, large well-stocked shops, and a remarkable mixed population of varied nationalities. The native population is not a Sclavonian but a Latin race, (from the military settlers in Dacia and Mœsia); and the Roumanian language greatly resembles Italian, but French is generally understood. Circumstances combine to make all articles exceedingly dear. Money is scarce; business is in the hands of the Jews, Greeks, and Germans. Some good houses have been built, especially round the principal square.

OBJECTS OF NOTICE.—A large Market, worth visiting to observe provincial costumes and produce. The Greek Churches and Archbishop's Palace. A fine view of the city from St. George's Cathedral. A Museum of local antiquities, open only on Thursday and Sunday. A large National Theatre. There are government tobacco works and gas-works. Carriages are good and reasonable; 1 fr. the course, 2 fr. the hour. There is a very popular promenade at the gardens outside the town, on the road to Ploesti, known as La Chaussée, which is the daily centre of attraction for carriages, horsemen, and loungers.

H. B. M'S. MINISTER.—His Excy. W. A. White, Esq., C.B., 46, Strada Scaulena.

TRAMWAYS are open.

Roumania, lying in a corner between Austria, Russia, and the Black Sea, north of the Danube towards its mouth, is composed of the Danubian Principalities, Moldavia-Wallachia, united 1859, and declared independent of Turkey 1877. It forms a slope from the Transylvanian Alps, on the Austrian border, in which M. Busecs rises 9,530 ft. above sea. The Dobrudja, by which is commands the Delta of the Danube in the Black Sea was acquired 1877. Servia lies to the west; and the new province of Bulgaria to the south. Area 49,260 sq. mls., or 28½ million acres: of which 6 million are under grain (the chief export), 9 pasture, 5 forests 8½ waste. There are 2 million cattle, 5 million sheep, ½ million horses. English machinery and goods are in much request, especially implements. Salt and petroleum are worked. The country is supposed to be rich in metals. Pop. 5,376,000 mostly of the Greek Church, an Auto-cephalous Orthodox branch, under its own Primate. Service in the Rouman vernacular or rustic Latin. About 750,000 are foreigners, including 400,000 Jews. Revenue, 8½ million £; Debt, 19½ millions. Army, 60,000; including 40,000 reserves Hereditary Prince, Charles I., born 1839, elected 1866; assisted by a Senate (76 members) and Chamber of Representatives (157 members).

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE.—Rev. E. B. Frankel.

Tunis (ancient Tunes) the Capital of a Regency, under the Turkish Sultan, stands on a Bay or Gulf of the African coast, near Old Carthage, inside Cape Bon, about 180 miles from Malta, 120, miles from Sicily, or Sardinia, and 560 miles east of Algiers. Principal buildings—the Bey's Palace where Queen Caroline formerly resided, and the Citadel; besides the Mosques, and the Bazaar, where carpets, arms, saddlery, gold and silver cloth, etc. are sold. The Palace of the Bardo, about three miles from the city, as well as a portion of the ancient Aqueduct, a little beyond the Bardo, which conducted the water to the Cisterns, built by Hadrian, are well worth a visit.

The Ruins of Carthage are easily visited in a day by carriage, to be obtained at Tunis; or by rail to Marsa. They occupy part of the ancient site, on a peninsula, between the lagoon and Cape Carthage, about 3 m. from Goletta; but they belong only to the Roman city of Colonia Carthago, not to Dido's Tyrian city. The "Cisterns," and "Aqueduct," are the principal attractions, near the village of Maallaken. The Cisterns or Granaries, built by Hadrian are 16 in number, 60 ft. by 25ft.; the Aqueduct was connected with one coming from the hills, which has been restored by the present Bey, Sidi Sadduk, to supply water to Tunis. Carthage, the great rival of Rome, ruling over 300 cities, and founded by Queen Dido, was destroyed in the Third Punic War B.C. 146, by Scipio Africanus Minor, who landed at Utica, (where Cato the wise is buried); and was rebuilt by Augustus, etc. Hannibal and Terence were born here. It gave name to Carthagena, or Carthago Nova, in Spain. The Saracens took it A.D. 698. St. Louis died here 1270, in the 6th Crusade; a church marks the spot. Several relics, now at the British Museum, were brought home 1861. See Dr. Davis's Carthage and her Remains. At Kerouar, is a Mosque full of marble pillars from old buildings. A hot sulphur spring at Jebel Trossa.

RUSSIA IN EUROPE.

Russia is a vast empire, partly in Europe and partly in Asia. The larger, or Asiatic part, consisting of Siberia (mostly) and Central Asia (i.e. Kirghis Steppes and Turkestan), is so thinly populated that, while the relative area to Russia in Europe is as 5 to 2, the population is only millions to 75½ millions. Russia in Europe (including Finland and the Caucasus), with which we have to do in the present section, lies between 43° and 70° N. latitude, and 18° and 65° E. longitude. Greatest extent from the south point of the Caucasus to the north coast of Lapland, 2,200 miles, and from the west border of Poland to the Ural Mountains, 1,700 miles. Area, 2 million square miles, including 1 million of larch, birch, ash, pine, and oak timber; nearly all which belongs to the great plain which extends through the middle of Europe, from the North Sea to the Caspian Sea and the Ural Mountains. The highest point of European Russia, at Kremenetz, near the Galician frontier, is only 1,380 feet above sea. The Valdai Hills, on the St. Petersburg and Moscow line, at the heads of the Volga and Dwina, are 900 feet only. Bessarabia (3,200 sq. m.), was re-annexed 1878.

Climate—of an extreme character, the winters being colder, and the summers warmer, than in the corresponding latitudes of Western Europe. The spring, however, is mild and temperate in the South, though the summer is of long duration, with oppressive heat and little rain; autumn sets in rather late, and the winter is short, with little snow, though sometimes cold and severe. The Middle region, extending from 50° to 57°, has a rough winter: and, in the more Northerly region, it is long and severe, during which travelling is practicable only on sledges over the frozen snow. At St. Petersburg winter ranges from the end of September to the beginning of May, when it all at once disappears. Here the average days of snow are 70. In the Arctic region, extending from 67° to 74°, the climate is very rigorous in winter, and warm in summer. The N. limit of trees is near the Polar coast, the sea near which is always frozen. Wolves, bears, reindeer, elks, and bisons are hunted.

Geology and Mineral Productions.—The predominating formations are the primary and secondary rocks, including a large space of old red sandstone, covered with shallow lakes. Gold, silver, platinum, copper, iron, and china clay are found in the crystalline and slaty rocks of the Ural range. Coal is got near Kharkov, on the Donets and is found in the central governments of Novgorod, Tver, Moscow, Riazan, Kalouga, Toula, Kiev, Kharkov; marble in Finland.

Rivers.—Volga, Dnieper, Dniester, Don, and Dwina are the longest; the Volga being 2,400 miles to its mouth in the Caspian. The are all shallow and uninteresting, and are united by Canals. Steamers run only in summer. The Lakes are Ladoga (the largest in Europe), Onega, and many smaller, all in Finland.

Soil and Vegetation.—The half north of 50° 55° contains much forest, especially north of St. Petersburg, marsh, and lake; the other half to the south is arable. About 796,000 square miles possess a peculiar and rather remarkable soil, consisting entirely of decomposed vegetable matter, which forms a stratum varying in thickness from three to five feet. A great part of Western Russia is sandy, and intersected by extensive marshes and bogs. The middle region is the wealthiest and most densely peopled portion, and consists of wide, open, undulating plains, with very slight elevations to break the monotony. Beyond the Volga is an immense tract of poor desert land, called a steppe. The Russian forests are the most important of her vegetable productions, not only from their enormous extent, but from their supplying in profusion timber, tar, pitch, potash, and turpentine, which form a principal part of the commercial exports, and also fuel. Population of Russia in Europe (1870-1), 75½ millions; of which three-fifths were serfs down to 1863; 55 millions are Russian and Orthodox (or Greek Church); 3 are Roman Catholics; 2½ Protestants, ½ Mahometans; and 2 Jews. About 5¾ million belong to the military class and 1 million are hereditary and personal nobles. Education is subject to the direct control of the Government. Including Siberia and Central Asia, the total population of the Russian Empire is 87¾ millions.

Administrative Divisions.—Russia in Europe is divided into 60 Governments, including the Kingdom of Poland; besides is in the Grand Duchy of Finland, and 12 in the Caucasus.—Army on a peace footing, about 800,000 in war time 1½ million Regulars, and ½ million Cossacks. Navy, (1877) 240 ships (29 being Ironclads), in the Baltic and Black Seas. Revenue (1878), about 96 millions sterling. Debt, about 420 millions; having been much increased by the war of 1877-8. Duty on spirits provides more than a third of the entire revenue of the Empire. Principal items of expenditure are for the army, £24,000,000; navy, £5,000,000; charge on debt, 31½ millions.

Commerce.—Imports (1878, from England, worth 9½ millions. Exports, 18 millions; chiefly wheat, rye, and other cereals, flax, hemp, leather, skins tallow, pitch, furs, sturgeon, etc.; cottons and metal goods are sent to China; silk, cotton, and woollen spinning and weaving are carried on at Moscow. Railways open (1878), 13, 560 miles. Telegraphs, about 44,100 miles. Telegram to U. Kingdom 9½ l. a word. From the Caucasus 11d.; Russia in Asia 1s. 9d. to 2s. 8d.

Money, Russian Currency.—100 copecks or kopecks (1 silver rouble) 3s. 2d. Paper Money is almost the sole currency; gold and silver coins except 50, 15, and 10 copeck pieces are seldom met with. The paper rouble is worth about 2s. 6d. to 2s. 8d. sterling; 8 paper roubles about £1 sterling. Gold Coins—10, and 5-rouble pieces. Silver Coins—1 rouble; 25, 20, 15, 10, and 5 copecks. Copper Coins—5, 3, 2, 1, ½, ¼ copeck pieces. Bank Notes—1, 3, 5, 10, 20, 25, 50, 100, 1000, 2000 roubles.—From The Merchants' Handbook of Money, Weights, and Measures, by W. A. Brown, LL.D. Good exchange can be got at either Eydtkuhnen or Wirzbolof (Wirballen). "No platina money is now issued. The silver pieces of 25 and 5 copecks are very rare. A silver rouble is hardly ever seen; gold pieces rarely ever circulate. The coins below 1 rouble are silver and copper; but the silver is very much alloyed to bring it into proper relation with paper. The silver rouble contained twice as much silver as a roubles' worth of small silver pieces." Note.—Travellers should be on their guard in taking old Dutch ducats in circulation all through Russia and Poland, many being so reduced by clipping as not to be worth more than 7s. 3d. or 8s. 6d. in place of 9s. The Pood—36 lbs. Verst—⅔ mile.

Cabs.—A bargain must be made for Cab fares. In almost all towns except St. Petersburg, the tariff varies from 40 to 50 copecks an hour; and 30 copecks for a drive through the town.

Time for Travelling.—The best time is May to June, or August to October. Winter is good for those who can stand it, and are able to enjoy the pure air, sledging, and other amusements. Hotels are dear, and railway fares are higher than in Germany. Refreshment stations are large and well provided. The carriages are good and warmed with stoves, double doors and windows. Trains are slow, 15 to 30 m. an hour; and the station is often out in the fields. On the roads travelling can be done in a Tarantasse, a phæton without springs, drawn by 2 or 3 horses, with a bell overhead. The driver is called "Yemstchik." At hotels out of the great towns a bargain must be made; and it is sometimes convenient for the traveller to bring his own bedding and towels, and even provisions. Tea can always be had.

Caution to Travellers.—Travellers must procure the visa of the Russian Consulate-General in London to their passports (32, Gt. Winchester Street, E.C). Subordinate officials in Russia do not as a rule understand English, whilst everywhere the visa and seal of the Russian Consulate General is recognised. The bearer of a Foreign-office Passport need not attend personally to obtain the visa. The Passport, which must bear his signature, may be forwarded to the Consulate per registered letter, enclosing the visa fee of 2s. in postage stamps or otherwise. It should be posted three clear days previously to the visa being required; with a fully directed stamped envelope, to cover the passport when reposted. Passports torn and illegible, and those more than say five years old, should be exchanged for new ones. To prevent delay, Foreigners naturalized in England must produce at the Consulate's office their letters of naturalization on transmitting their passports granted by the Foreign Office. Foreigners, not naturalized in England, must procure the visa of their respective Consuls before transmitting their passports to the Russian Consulate for endorsement.

A traveller intending to reside in the country, must be furnished with a ticket of residence from the civil governor; but if he only intends staying a short time, he may dispense with this; it costs from four to nine roubles, according to the rank of the person. At both Moscow and St. Petersburg, his permission is to be obtained at the Address-Office for Foreigners (Bureau d'adresse pour les étrangers). On leaving Russia no advertisement of intention is now necessary. Passports for departure, delivered by governments of the frontiers, are valid for three weeks; and those from governments of the interior for three months; after which, Passports must be reviewed by the Governor, to enable the Foreigner to pass the frontiers.

FOREIGN BOOKS.—All Books are examined by a committee of censure, and none are admitted unless they have been previously approved.

Schlusselburg.—Light boats on the Neva. Starting-places near the Jardin d'Eté, and the Convent of Smolna. Start every day, 9 a.m., 3 p.m.

STREETS.—Long and straight streets are called "Prospekts," or "Perspectives;" ordinary streets, "Oulitsa;" small streets or lanes, "Perevulok."

Sentry-Boxes are seen at the corner of every street. Here are stationed the soldiers of the police for keeping order in the streets; others occupy the towers on the island to give alarm in case of fire.

This splendid looking metropolis of the Russian empire, is seated on the river Neva, near its entrance into the Gulf of Finland, 15 m. from Lake Ladoga, where it is divided by islands into four channels, called the Great and Little Neva. Approaching by water you pass Cronstadt (on an island), with its forests of masts, towers, and forts, and then come in sight of the palace of Peterhof, in its well wooded park. After a couple of hours the traveller sees the golden spires and domes of the city, and is landed on the Quay, near the Academy of Arts. The dead flat on which the city now stands was a morass, occupied by a few fishermen's huts, on the site of which Peter the Great began to build, 1703, by erecting a small Hut for himself, and some wooden hovels near the Old Fort (by Tressini, 1706-40.) In 1710 Count Golovkin built the first brick house; and the next year the Emperor laid the foundation of another. From these small beginnings rose the imperial city of St. Petersburg, a strange mixture of great palace-like houses and mean hovels. The river which is as broad as the Thames, and in many parts broader, is deep, rapid, and clear. Its water is used for household purposes; but it is not good to drink. The quays make noble uninterrupted walks for several miles on each side. English Quay (Angliskaya Nabarejna) is near Nicolas Bridge, a permanent one of 7 iron arches, on granite piers. The others are floating timber bridges; on which no smoking is allowed. They are removable in winter. The ice breaks up between 22nd March and 27th April. Steamers run up and down the river; to Cronstadt in 1½ hour.

The best streets are broad and spacious; and three of the principal ones meet in a point at the Admiralty. That called Vosnesenski leads to the Warsaw and Baltic stations; the Gorokhovaia, to the Tsarkoë Selo Station; and the third or Nevski Prospekt, the Regent-street of St. Petersburg, leads to the Moscow Station and the Nevski Church (i.e., the Church of the Neva.) It is nearly three miles in length and 120 ft. broad; is full of shops, palaces, churches, &c. on each side, and is the great artery of the city. Out of this street there is a large arcade or bazaar. This part is traversed by the Moika, Ekaterina, and Fontanka canals.

The Kazan Cathedral, in this street, is a noble edifice, built 1801-11, by Voronikhin; facing the statues of Generals Kutusof and Barclay de Tolly. Two circular colonnades lead to the entrance, which is adorned with colossal statues. In the interior are fifty-six marble columns 52 feet high each hewn out of a single block of marble; with walls and flooring of the same, all beautifully polished. There are here some choice paintings; but what attracts the eye most is the balustrade, with pillars twenty feet high, beams, picture frames, &c., before the sanctuary, all of which are of solid silver. Our Lady of Kazan is covered with jewels of immense value; and the silver before-mentioned was a present to the Holy Mother, so called, from the Cossacks after the campaigns of 1813-14. St. Isaac's Church was commenced a century ago by Catherine II.; but was rebuilt 1819-58, by Montferrand, in the shape of a Greek cross, like all other Churches here. It is a simple but massive pile, with 112 pillars in the four fronts. The east or the chief entrance are sixty feet high, and seven feet diameter—all round, and highly polished granite monoliths from Finland. The foundation alone cost upwards of £200,000. Fabulous sums are mentioned as the total cost. The dome 296 ft. high, like our St. Paul's, is surmounted by a golden cross covered with copper, overlaid with gold; for the gilding of which forty-two measures (equal to fourteen bushels) of ducats were melted down. The Altar screen is of immense value. There are several mosaic pictures and malachite ornaments.

Within the Old Fort above mentioned are the Mint; and the Cathedral of St. Peter and Paul, containing many trophies, with the remains of Peter the Great, and of successive sovereigns, except Peter the II., who is buried at Moscow. Near the fortress is the Hut of Peter the Great, protected by a building over it, in wood and glass, part being used as a chapel; the other half, containing the furniture and mementoes of Peter. On the south side of the Neva is Petersburg proper; so that standing on the ramparts, and looking over the river, you have before you the Summer Gardens, with the fine quay, on which are the Marble Palace, the residence of the Finance Minister, the Michael Palace, the Embassy, Hermitage, Winter Palace, and other buildings. A little to the left is the West End of St Petersburg, the residences of the nobles, &c., in the quarters called Lithania and Moscovskaia, near the Liteinoi Bridge.

To the right, is Vasili Ostrof or Wassily Ostrow (Basil's Island), on which are situated the Academies of Arts and of Sciences; the University, founded in 1719; the Exchange and Custom House; the Marine Cadets' School; and the School of Mines, 1819, having a very fine Museum, rich in minerals, perhaps the finest in the world, such as emeralds, amethysts, &c., a block of malachite 1000 lbs. weight, valued at £19,000; a lump of gold, 80 lbs. weight. The Academy of Arts, a Doric Pile by Kakorinhof, 1788, has a collection of Pictures in 7 or 8 rooms. The Academy of Sciences, built 1799, by Zakharof, contains Oriental, Egyptian, and other remains; with an Ethnographical Museum, and collections of natural history, minerals, plants, etc., including the great Siberian elephant and Mammoth: and a library of 150,000 vols.

One striking object is an equestrian Statue of Peter the Great, erected by Catherine II. in 1782. It is of colossal size, by Falconet, and stands on a huge pedestal of granite, between Isaac's Church and the river. Another statue of Peter faces the Engineers' School. On the opposite side of the church is an equestrian statue, erected by the present Emperor, to his father Nicholas—the bas-relief in bronze, representing the principal episodes in his life. The Alexander Column is also a very fine monument by Monferrand (1832 near the Winter Palace; 150 feet high, of which the red granite shaft is 80 feet. Cath. II's statue is in the Nevski. The Romansof Obelisk, by Brenna (1799), is a bronze, 82 ft. high. A statue of Suwarrow, Swarov, or Suvorof, is in the Champ de Mars, near the Summer Garden; in which I am is the statue of Krylof, the Russian fable-writer.

The Imperial Library on the Nevski is a large building, and contains about 1 million vols., with 25,000 MSS, including Tischendorf's valuable Sinai Codex, and Mary Stuart's Missal. Open daily.

The Botanical Gardens, on Apothecaries Island are well worth a visit, especially the palm-houses. The Datschas, or country villas of the nobility and merchants on the Islands are nearly all built of wood, in every variety of style and colour, all detached, and standing in their gardens and groves.

In the Taurida Palace, built 1783 by Starov for Cath. II., who gave it to her favourite Potemkin, is the great Ball-room, 33 ft. by 70 ft. or one-sixth of a mile in circuit; on one side of which is the Winter Garden, or conservatory, the whole length of the palace; it is lined with statuary, and divided from the ball-room by marble pillars, but otherwise roofed in, and forming part of the saloon itself. Enormous chandeliers, and silver branches for lights encircle the pillars, which with the plants and trees in the conservatory hold upwards of 20,000 wax lights. The Czarevitch and Czarevna live at the Anitchkof Palace, in the Nevski Prospekt; built 1748 by Rastrelli. The Marble Palace where the Grand Duke Constantine lives, is a heavy but grand pile, by Girolami 1770-85. The Old Michaelof Palace, where the Emp. Paul died, was built 1797-1800 by Brenna, and is now the Engineers' School, under Todleben. The New Michaelof Palace is a fine building by Rossi, 1819-25.

The Winter Palace (Zimny Dvoretz), where the Emperor lives, on the banks of the Neva, includes the Crown Jewels, rooms full of portraits and battle pieces and the Hermitage Galleries, a vast collection however. It was commenced in 1754, and finished in 1762, for the Empress Elizabeth; and restored 1839, after a fire, by Braillof and Staroff; its front—700 feet in length—is three stories high; it is nearly square. When the Emperor is resident upwards of 7000 persons inhabit the building. Here the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh were married; the Prayer book used by the Dean of Westminster being the one used at the marriage of George II., William IV., and the Prince of Wales. The Empress's reception room, or Golden Saloon, has its walls entirely covered with gold, and the White Saloon has all its decorations of pure white, relieved only by gold. The fine Throne Saloon, or St. George's Hall, is 140 feet long by 60 in width.

The Hermitage, connected with the Winter Palace, was built by Empress Catherine, and is a most luxurious retreat, rich in works of art of all kinds, in antiquities, rare porcelain, Siberian curiosities scientific instruments, miniatures, &c. The modern Hermitage, begun 1840 finished 1852, by Klenze of Munich, is in a light Grecian style, 515 feet long, 375 wide. Its atrium, galleries, and the floor, present splendid specimens of columns, obelisks, candelabra, vases of granite, porphyry, marble, and lapis lazuli. Perhaps want of elevation is a defect in its construction. On the ground floor—Salle VII. contains Greek antiquities of the Cimmerian Bosphorus, and Siberian curiosities, historical and natural. One of the most remarkable antiques is the Venus of the Hermitage (No. 345). The Siberian collection Closet L.) has a coat of mail of solid gold (30 lbs. weight). Early stone and iron instruments (Tartar) are in Closet G. The Porcelain Salle is No. 18. The Library has some archæological curiosities.

Gallery of Paintings on the first story; it contains 39 rooms; and is especially rich in works, by A. Carracci, Claude, Van Dyck, Cuyp, Guido, Murillo (18), Raphael, Rembrandt. Reynolds, Rubens, Snyders, Teniers, Titian, Velasquez, and Wouvermans.

1st Room contains Statuary, and a gallery of Historical painting: 2nd, Italian school: 3rd, Flemish school: 4th, Spanish school: 5th. Frescoes of Raphael: 6th. Italian school. Leonardo da Vinci, Andrea del Sarto, Seb. del Piombo: 7th, Italian School, Raphael, Correggio, Giulio Roman: 8th, Italian school. Titian, Moretto, Palma: 9th, and 10th, Italian school, Titian, Carracci, Guido, Domenichino, Giordano, Salvator Rosa, &c.: 11th, P. Potter, Teniers, Wouvermans: 12th. English School (Reynolds's Infant Hercules) and Rembrandt: 13th, Old German and Dutch schools: 14th, Rubens, &c.: 15th German: 16th and 17th, Dutch, Snyders, &c.: 18th, French School: 19th and 20th, Russian school, Bruloff, &c: 21st and 22nd, Coins: 23rd, Gems: 24th, a Theatre: 25th, Copies of the Loggie of Raphael. Some of the French and Dutch make a separate collection in the old part of the Hermitage.

The Gallery of Peter the Great has, among other curiosities, the sword, telescope, books, cane, &c., of the great man, and many things made by him. There are also many foreign curiosities, Japanese, Chinese, &c. besides an Anglo-Saxon cup found in Russia, a glass cup with the name of Anne of Cleves in Latin, and another with the name of Francis Drake.

The Hermitage is generally open daily, 10 to 4. Admission by ticket from some resident merchant, or by paying one rouble to the porter.

OTHER BUILDINGS.—Cathedral of St Alex.

Excursions—1. Tsarskoe Selo, by Rail. Here is a huge Palace built by Cath. II. with traces of profuse gilding outside. One room inside is lined entirely with amber. There is also an armoury containing rich suits of armour, fire arms jewelled saddle cloths, with a menagerie, a dining house, a frigate on the lake for the Grand Duke, and well wooded grounds.

From Tsarskoé, take drosky to Paflovsk, 3 miles, to the Imperial Park. The upper story of the Palace, rebuilt 1803, has many vases in Siberian jasper, lapis-lazuli, and malachite, immense mirrors, and splendid Gobelins tapestries. In the gardens are many pavilions ornamented with sculpture as memorials of members of the Romanof family. There is a pretty farm also, with an artificial cascade. Paflovsk contains, beside the principal palace of Constantine, brother of Nicholas I., another belonging to Grand Duke Constantine, brother of the reigning Emperor. At Pulkova is the Imperial Observatory, founded 1838.

2. Oranienbaum, from Cronstadt by steamers, several times a-day. (Distance, 8 versts or 6 miles). Palace built by Menschikoff in 1724 consisting of three blocks of building. There are several other palaces at hand; e. g., Sergueiefka, the property of the Grand Duchess Marie, with a beautiful park and delightful views. Also a farm of Prince Oldenburg. 3. Peterhof, near Oranienbaum, was begun 1720 and was built by Leblond for Peter the Great. It is made to retain its original appearance, even its ancient yellow colour being continually renewed. It contains porcelain, malachite, tapestry, paintings relating to victories in the reign of Catharine II.; and a collection of 368 portraits of women, painted by Count Rossli for the empress during a journey. All are in the national costume. The gardens are full of Neptunes, and Tritons, and good fountains. The park has many curiosities:—Marli, a favourite resort of Peter the Great; the cottage of the Empress Catharine, sumptuous and brilliant with gold and mirrors; the Palais de Paille; the English Garden, with a ball-room; and Alexandria, a collection of private cottages of the Emperor.

The illuminations on a fine evening convert all the leaves of the trees into dazzling stars, and the water into floods of molten gold. Peterhof was the favourite residence of the Empress-mother. 4. St. Sergius, near the Gulf of Finland, a little way from Peterhof (10 miles from St. Petersburg). Finished 1758. Consists of a Convent containing four churches, and especially a cemetery, with many remarkable monuments of some of the first dignitaries of the state. 5. Ropscha, a palace founded by Peter the Great rebuilt by the Empress Elizabeth. Peter III. was assassinated here in 1762 (July 6). It was completely reconstructed in 1785, by Mr. Engelmann. The view from the Belvidere or tower takes in the brilliant cupolas of the capital, and the Gulf of Cronstadt. The garden is filled with lakes, streams, and cascades. Ropscha was latterly the property of the Empress Alexandra, wife of Nicholas. 6. By steamer up the Neva, to the Imperial Porcelain Factory, on to Schlüsselburg fort and its water works, in Lake Ladoga, near the Valamo Convent. The Fins of the neighbouring villages still sing national songs, recording their wars against the Russians.

Krasnoe-Selo (12 m. from St. Petersburg by rail); on a hill, called the "mountain" of Donderhof. The Palace, built by Nicholas, in the shape of a vast isba, or peasant's cottage, is surrounded with fruit-trees. Regiments of the Guard, camp here in summer.

Cronstadt, the port of Petersburg, had (1874) 47,166 inhabitants, including the garrison of 25,000 men. The fortifications begun by Peter the Great, 1703, have been greatly strengthened since the Crimean war. West Port is reserved for merchant vessels. Exports mostly tallow, cereals, hemp, and flax. Port open from May to Nov. Bar at mouth of Neva, 6 to 10 feet.

Here are Docks, arsenals, granite forts, vast barracks, a double harbour, customs, &c., almost all made under Nicholas I., in the space of 30 years. The Mole is an interesting walk: it is also expedient to drive (1½ league) 4 or 5 miles beyond the Citadel for a good point of view.

Lake Ladoga (pron. Lad'oga).—The best way is to proceed from Schlusselburg, at the end of the Neva, by Valaamo steamer, generally crowded with pilgrims. It is the largest of Russian or European lakes (100 m. by 60.), subject to storms, and containing several well wooded granite islands. After a voyage of 80 miles, you reach the island of Konewetz,—so called from the annual sacrifice of a horse by the ancient Fins, on this spot. It has a convent of monks, who devote themselves to fishing, and religious exercises. The church contains a silver statue of Saint Arsinius.

Mean temp. 13° (Jan) to 77° (July). By river and canal to Lake Onega and the Dwina, down to Archangel on the White Sea, 1100 m.

The island Valaamo rises steeply from the waters, on granite rocks, covered with verdure and pine-trees. It is 20 miles round, in the middle of a group of 40 islands. The convent Church is rich in jewels, and in having a library containing rare books. The charming atmosphere of a northern summer's night is one of the chief attractions of Ladoga.

Astrakhan.—Pop.—(1869) 46 226.

Capital of a Government (formerly of a Tartar kingdom), 900 m. from Zarisyn (or Tsaritsin) the nearest rail (p. 292), on an island in the Delta of the Volga, where it falls into the Caspian sea, of which it is the chief port. It is irregularly built of wood, on uneven ground, and is a curious gathering of cupolas, minarets, bazaars, and trading factories, half Oriental in character. The leading merchants are Armenians, Hindoos, and Persians. At the annual Fairs, the population is increased by 30,000. Here are markets for cotton, silk, and shagreen, and other goods, caviars, and isinglass, timber, and for the fish caught in the Caspian.

Kazan or Kasan (i.e. the Cauldron).—Pop. (1869) 66,262. HOTEL Resanof: Hotel Odessa.

Mean temp. 4° (Jan to 65° (July).

On the Kazanka, 5 miles from its mouth into the Volga, 314 miles from Nijni-Novgorod (p. 288), (Steamer, 24 hours down, 29 up the Volga.) Kazan is a kind of point of contact between European and Asiatic Russia. The Tartar town is across the Bulak. It is a dirty and badly drained, but a tolerably well built place, which has been often burnt. It was founded 1265 by the Tartars; and taken from them 1552 by Ivan (John) the Terrible.

CHIEF BUILDINGS.—In the high town is the Kremlin, containing the Governor's and Archbishop's Palaces, and the Church of the Virgin, with its much venerated Image. Other Churches are the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul; the Annunciation, and St. Cyprian. In the lower town are the Gostinnoi Dvor, or Bazaar, with a good tower; the Theatre; and the University, founded by Alexander I. in 1805, for the study of Oriental languages, and attended by Persian, Mongol, Turkish, Tartar, and Armenian students. Its Observatory is one of the best in Russia; it has a museum, library, and botanic garden; and is rich in coins, Siberian quadrupeds, and birds, costumes, Chinese paintings, &c. There is a promenade near the Black Lake, a stagnant pond with a few trees, called the "Russian Switzerland." Here are important manufactures of cloth, leather tiles, soap, anchors, steel goods, &c. The May Fair, lasting six weeks, is remarkable for its glass ware and china. Rail, pp. 288 and 292.

Kherson or Cherson.—Stat.—Pop. (1869) 46,320.—On the Dnieper, 8 hours from Odessa, by daily steamer (Saturdays excepted).

HOTEL—NEW ODESSA (Maritcheill) best.

It does a large trade with Odessa, especially in grain, tallow, wool, &c., and supplies the Russian ports of the Black Sea with timber, brought down from the interior. It has John Howard's monument (he died here 1790), a cathedral, citadel, &c.

BRITISH VICE-CONSUL.—R. Webster, Esq.

Kief or Kiev.—Stat.—Pop. 79,773 (1869).

HOTELS: GRAND HOTEL.

This town, the Jerusalem of Russia, a small Moscow, held in great veneration. 274 m. from Kursk: founded they say by the Varangian heroes, Askold and Dyr and a rival with Novgorod, as a mother of Russian cities. It stands picturesquely on the Dnieper (ancient Borysthenes), and consists of three parts; the best of which, to the north, is inhabited by the governor and best families, and shaded with fine trees. Notice the Church of St. Basil, built by Vladimir the Great, on the site of a temple of Perunne, the Jupiter of the ancient Russians. Cathedral of St Sophia, built 1037, by the Grand Duke Jaroslaf; fine Byzantine mosaics of scripture subjects tomb of Jaroslaf. Other Churches—The Desyatynnaia and St. George, built 1052; monastery of Petcherskoi, the first in Russia, founded 1055. Bazaar and Jews' quarter, near the fortress. The quarter called Podole is handsome, and regularly built. The University of St. Vladimir, founded in 1833, has a library of 100,000 volumes. The Suspension Bridge over the Dnieper (cost £260,000) was built 1848-55, by Vignolles, and is 6755 feet long. A Viaduct for the rail is equally striking. There is another viaduct at Kremantschug, 150 m. down the Dnieper, 2,200 feet long, on 87 girders. A great curiosity is the Catacombs of St. Anthony, founder of the monastery, cut in the rock by the river; containing passage six feet high, very narrow; 80 bodies preserved in open coffins, and dresses adorned with gold and silver. Catacombs

TELEGRAM to U. Kingdom, 9½d. a word.

THEATRES.—Great Theatre for Italian and Russian operas; Little Theatre for dramas—both in Kitaigorod.

OMNIBUSES from rail to hotels. DROSKIES.—A little dearer, but better than at Petersburg, 5 to 6 roubles a-day. Get the landlord to make a bargain for you before taking a drosky any distance. Sledges in winter very cheap. The fiacre and street police regulations same as in Petersburg; and charge for cartes de séjour the same also.

Moscow, the real metropolis of the empire, though not the seat of government, is a large city, on the Moskva, where the Neglina joins it at the centre of several rails. 400 miles S.E. of St. Petersburg, in 55° N. latitude, and in 37° E. longitude. In 1812 it was all but destroyed by fire, an event memorable in history, as being connected with the invasion of Russia by the French, under Napoleon. On the 7th of September the battle of Borodino (about 60 miles W.), took place and the Russians retreated, leaving Moscow to its fate. The city was set on fire by the governor, Count Rostopchin, and was in ruins when the French entered it on the 14th of the same month. In the fire 30,000 sick and wounded soldiers perished. It destroyed more than three parts of the town; but they are now all rebuilt, and considerably improved. Mean temp. 14° (Jan.) to 67° (July.)

It has five divisions—the Kremlin, at the heart of the city, containing the ancient palace of the Czars, where Peter the Great was born: the Kitaigorod, containing the University, the printing-house, and very many valuable buildings; the Bielgorod, or White Town; the Semliangorod; and the Sloboda or suburbs. Its cotton, cloth, and other factories employ many thousand hands. Moscow, with the gilt and coloured spires of its 350 churches, and its narrow winding streets, is best seen from the Tower of Ivan Velikí in the Kremlin, from the Simonoff Monastery on the east, and from the Sparrow Hill on the south, where Napoleon first caught sight of it.

REMARKABLE BUILDINGS—The quaint and gorgeous Kremlin, standing on a hill, (lat. 55° 40' N., long. 37° 38' E.) Derivation of name and date of foundation uncertain. In 1339, it was surrounded by oaken walls. It forms an inclosure nearly two miles in circumference, with five gates; the principal being the Spaski Vorota, or Redeemer's Gate, having over it a picture of the Saviour of Smolensk, held in high veneration. (Take off your hat while passing under this gate.)

Entering the square you see three Cathedrals and two other churches—one, St. Basil, having 11 spires; the Great Bell: Ivan Velikí Tower, the Palace, Treasury, Arsenal, &c. Rising above all other objects is the tower of Ivan Velikí, or John the Great, 270 feet high. It contains thirty-four bells, the largest more than 50 tons weight. They are decidedly worth hearing on Sundays and festival-days. The Great Bell, cast in the reign of the Empress Anne, and weighing 200 tons, has been raised from the pit, in which it was sunk, and placed upon a pedestal. Though cracked and useless, it is yet a great object of veneration.

The Cathedral of the Assumption, founded in 1325, and rebuilt in 1472, is decked out with gorgeous and extravagant ornaments. In this small church the Emperors are crowned.

The Cathedral of St. Michael, close to this, contains the tombs of several early Czars, and many splendid ornaments. The Church of the Saviour, one of the most ancient in Moscow, has relics of Stephen of Perm, the first Christian martyr and missionary in Russia. The new Palace, built by the Emperor Nicholas (1838-49) contains handsome suites of rooms, and halls dedicated to St George (white), Vladimir (red), and St. Andrew (blue.) St. George, devoted to the military order of that name, is one of the finest. They are all 68 ft. broad, and are 208 ft., 103 ft., and 163 ft. long, respectively. The picture gallery contains paintings by Raphael, Coregio, and Guido. Notice the Banqueting Room; the Council Hall of the Patriarchs; the old Gold Court, and the Terem, now stored with antiquities; the Treasury, something like the Tower of London, containing ancient Russian and German armour, coronation chairs of different Russian czars, modern fire-arms, &c. The throne of the Czar Alexis has 1223 rubies, besides turquoises and pearls. A globe, sent to the Prince of Kief by the Greek emperors Basil and Constantine, contains diamonds, rubies, sapphires, emeralds and pearls. In the Wardrobe are the boots of Peter the Great, and a statue of Napoleon. Near this are the Arsenal, with its trophy guns, taken from the French, 1812, and the Senate House.

Other buildings in the city are—the splendid Temple of St. Saviour, near the stone bridge, begun 1812, and rich in gilt and marble; the University, founded 1755; a great Riding School, a large Foundling Hospital, where 15,000 children are taken annually; the restored Roman Hall House, near the Kremlin; the National Museum, with its paintings, library, antiquities, and life-size figures in costume of the Russian people &c.

Nijni-Novgorod.—Stat Pop. 44,190 (1869)

HOTELS:—Indifferent.—1. Lobashieff's Hotel de Russie; 2. Nikita Egoroff, near the fair; 3. Billet's Ville de Hamburg, near the air. Rooms very dear during the Fair.

This town, 273 miles from Moscow, styled "Nijni," the Lower, was a colony of Novgorod, founded in 1222, at the confluence of the Volga and Oka, and has been several times sacked by the Tartars. The government offices are in the Kremlin, which contains the monuments of Minim and Pojarsky, who delivered their country from the Poles, 1612.

PRINCIPAL CHURCHES.—1. Cathedral of the Transfiguration, founded 1221; Minim is buried in it. 2. Cathedral of the Archangel, rebuilt 1620. 3. Church of the Nativity of the Virgin (1712); built in a peculiar style, and of a peculiar colour. The town has 59 churches. From the tower of Minim the spectator enjoys a panoramic view. The whole town is at your feet, and the Fair (if in season) looks like another town; while the rivers Volga and Oka are alive with traffic The Otkos, or terrace, was built by the Emperor Nicholas.

At the Fair, which lasts from July 15 (o.s.) to Aug. 25, the crowd sometimes reaches a million persons, chiefly Orientals; and the business carried on is estimated at £20,000,000. It is held in and round the Emperor Nicholas's Great Bazaar, which is composed of 50 streets of shops; where they sell tea, corn, leather, skins, fruit, madder, wine, cotton, Persian silks, turquoises, malachite, and curiosities from Bokhara, geological specimens from Siberia, iron ware of Tula, &c. Behind is a boulevard, with the cathedral, a Tartar mosque, an Armenian church, &c. The Fair quarter is surrounded by a canal, to protect it against fires; and is drained by enormous sewers. On the banks of the rivers huge towing machines are seen. The navigation of the Volga embraces a fleet of 400 steamers. Rail, p. 288.

Nicolaieff, or Nikolajew.—Stat.—Pop. (1874) 78,860. HOTEL—

A naval yard, in the Black Sea, about 20 m. from the Bug's mouth, near the Dnieper, 80 m. from Odessa; having building Slips, a new Floating Dock, &c. It was founded 1790. RAIL, p. 291.

BRITISH VICE-CONSUL—W. Wagstaffe, Esq.

Novgorod.—Stat.—Pop. 18,000.—HOTELS—Seat of a government, called "Gospodin Velikl," Great Lord, on the Volkhof, on a low hill 450 ft. above sea, near Lake Ilmen, 111 m. from St. Petersburg; a former Hanse town, and reputed the oldest of Russian cities, founded 862. By Rurik, one of three Norman brothers, sons of Rus, of the race of Verlags or Varangians. He is styled the founder of the Russian monarchy, the thousandth year of which was celebrated 1862, by the erection of a monument to him. The streets are straight and at right angles. The Governor's Palace and the Town House and Law Courts are in the Market place or Torkovaia; The Cathedral and archbishop's palace in the Kremlin or citadel. It had a population of 400,000 before 1570, when it was taken by Ivan the Terrible, with great slaughter. Rail, p. 288.

HOTEL DE LONDRES; HOTEL ST. PETERSBURG, overlooking the port; HOTEL SUISSE.

DROSCHKIS, two horses, 50 kopecks the hour.

A fortified seaport in the Black Sea, 80 miles from Nicolaieff (as above) in the government of harbour is an excellent and capacious one; in lat tude 46° 29′ N., longitude 30° 44′ E. The principal part of the town is built upon the top Kherson, founded in 1792 by Catherine II. The of a long range of cliffs, commanding a fine sea view. A public Walk, planted with flowering trees and shrubs, extends along the top, having the governor's house at one end, the Exchange at the other, and a statue of the Duc de Richelieu, who planned the town, in the centre. The former Richelieu Lyceum is now a University. The Cathedral of St. Nicholas is sumptuously decorated. Houses in the best localities built of a soft, light-coloured stone, and roofed with sheets of iron, or painted wood. Grain and wool are the chief exports, chiefly in English steamers. Imports are colonial produce, cottons, silks, coals from England, machinery, tea via the Suez Canal, &c.

STEAMERS.—To the different ports on the Crimean and Asiatic coast, the Danube, Constantinople, and the Mediterranean. See Alphab. List.

Odessa is the starting point for the CRIMEA, or Crim-Tartary, now Taurida. The steamer calls first at Eupatoria, near which the Allies landed from Varna, 14th-16th Sept, 1854, and marched to the Alma (battle 20th Sept.), which the steamer passes in view of, on her way to Sebastopol, (S at)—HOTELS: Wetzel's, Tiesk. Mean temperature 35° (January) to 77° (July).

BRITISH VICE CONSUL.—W. J. Watson, Esq.

The town and harbour are a mass of ruins since the siege (17th Oct., 1854, to Feb., 1856), but it is conveniently situated for a commercial port which it has now become. From Sebastopol there is a road up the country to Inkermann (5th Nov., 1854), and the fine valley of the Tchernave near the English and other grave yards (16th Aug., 1855); thence to Baktchiserai (20 m.) and the Alma, about half-way to Simferopol. Baktchiserai (Hotel Avamble, in the suburb of Asiac) is the Tartar seat of the former Khans; and has their palace and tombs, with mosques, bazaars, and the houses once occupied by Catherine II. and Nicholas. Half-an-hour's walk from this are the Convent of Monastir, cut in the rock, and the singular new town of Tschufut Kaleh capital of the Jewish sect of the Karäites. Simferopol—Stat.—Capital of the Crimea. Hotel, Schnyder's.

Leaving Sebastopol, the steamer goes round Khersonese Light, and passes in front of Balaklava (charge of the Six Hundred, 5th Nov.), and the bold picturesque cliffs which follow, backed by thickly wooded mountains behind. In this wild and sheltered district, where the laurel, vine, fig, olive and other fruits grow luxuriantly, many country seats are springing up. Aloopka, or Alouchta, is the Gothic Castle of Prince Woronzoff. Livadia among woods and vineyards, is the seat of the Emperor; Kirykhyk, of the Empress; Orianda, of Grand Duke Constantine; Gaspra, of Grand Duke Michael. The Mazaratch Massandra, and Nikita Gardens are said to produce good wine, almost equal to French. Yalta is a pretty town at the bottom of a bay, in the best part of this fine country. Two Hotels; Galakoff and Grand Hotel de Russie.

From here you can visit Manjup-Kaleh, and the fine Baidar Pass or Gate; or ascend the Tschatir-Dagh (4040 feet), the highest mountain in the Crimea. The steamer touches at Kaffa or Feodosia; then, Kertch, near Sea of Azoff, interesting from its Greek remains, and as the place where Mithridates, King of Pontus, died A.D. 63. Many German watchmakers here. Notice the old Tombs, and new Great Fort. H. B M's. Consul, P. Barrow, Esq. Consul (at Taganrog) F. Wooldridge, Esq. Steamers to the Circassian coast; past Soukoum Kaleh, a small naval port, to Poti (see Tiflis, below); thence to Batoum, etc., for Constantinople. Soukoum Kaleh is the nearest point for Mount Elbrus, viâ Kodor Forests, and Nachar Pass in the Caucasus.

Orenburg—Stat.—Pop. (1867) 32,435.

The capital of a government, on the border of Europe and Asia, on the river Ural, 600 miles north east of Astrakhan. Besides the Governor's Palace, it contains two Cathedrals; a Turkish Mosque; Custom House, Exchange, and Bazaar; a Military School, Museum, &c.; and has a trade with Central Asia in silks, jewels, Chinese goods, &c. The direct Telegraph route to Pekin, viâ Semipatalinsk, along a good road and a fertile country, is 1400 m. shorter than round by Kiachta. From here, across the Kirghis Steppe (a desert 1,000 m. broad. by 2,000 m. long) to Khiva, in Turkestan, on the Oxus, is 950 m.; to Tashkend, on the Jaxartes, 1,100 m. Rail, p. 294.

Revel, Stat.—Pop. (1867) 37,325, mostly Germans.—Hotels: Goldene Löwe, Wittestrand.

The capital of Esthonia; with good views from the heights. Bathing in the Baltic in summer.

Objects of Interest:—The Gothic Cathedral (lat. 59° 26' N., long. 24° 45' E.), first built in 1329, but several times destroyed by lightning; containing some fine sculpture. At St. Nicholas' church is a copy of the Dance of Death, similar to that at Lübeck; with the preserved body of a duke, in rich lace and velvet.

British Vice-Consul—Baron de Boucanton.

Excursions.—Catharinenthal has a little palace of Peter the Great, who planted most of the trees

Fine view from Lakaberg; Convent of St. Brigida, connected by a subterranean way with the old monastery of Munchendorf.

Riga.—Stat.—Pop. (1869.) 98,892.—Hotels: St. Petersburg; De Londres; King's Arms.

On the Dwina, about five miles from its mouth, in a Gulf of the Baltic, called the Gulf of Riga. It is a very strong town, and is capital of the Government of Livonia. Its commercial position is next to that of St. Petersburg. Foreign merchants carry on its trade, and those connected with the English Factory there enjoy the greatest share of the commerce. Corn, hemp, flax, iron, timber, masts, leather, and tallow, with Riga balsam, form the principal articles of export. There is a large floating Bridge over the Dwina, 2,600 feet long and 40 broad: this is removed in Winter.

SWEDEN.

Sweden or Sverige, or the East half of the Scandinavian peninsula, lying between 55°-77° North lat., and 5°-31° E long, extends 1000 m. from N. to S., and 300 from E. to W., and is in general a flat country. From Gothenburg, in the W., to Stockholm, in the E., there is scarcely an acclivity; but the Norway border line is marked by mountain ridges of crystalline and granite rocks (corresponding to our Silurian) like Norway, 7,000 to 8,000 ft. high. Its coast is broken up by many inlets or fiords.

The country is divided into three parts—Sweden Proper, Svealand; Gothia, Götaland; and Norrland; 24 provinces; and 12 stifts or bishoprics, under an Archbishop at Upsala. Area, 12,900 English square miles, of which ⅛ are agricultural, ⅛ forest, ¼ lakes. Population (1878), 4,531,865. The Laps amount to 6,711. In 1862 there were 5,086 primary schools. The secondary schools were attended by 11,145 pupils. Two Universities, one at Upsala (1,081 students), the other at Lund, (432). Education is compulsory. Sweden has produced among many eminent men—Linnæus and Berzelius in science; Tegner, Atterbom and Frederica Bremer in literature; Tessin and Härteman in architecture; Fogelberg and Sergel in sculpture; Ehrenstrahl in painting; and Jenny Lind.

Agriculture.—It grows barley, hemp, oats, hops, potatoes, and wheat. Exports are corn, cattle, timber, in planks, frames, tar, pitch, &c. The timber is mostly pine, fir, and birch. The Mines yield silver, copper, iron, which last is worked generally, the best at Danemora, near Upsala. Largest mines—Persberg and Yngshyttan (iron); Falun and Atvidaberg (copper). Coal was worked near Helsingborg; and is now found (an inferior sort) at Hoeganaes, 300 feet deep There is a coal bed at Ofverum, on the Linköping-Westerick Railway. Fisheries.—Cod, mackerel, oyster, lobster, and herrings, on the coast of Bohnslan. Good fishing in the lakes and rivers. Its Halmsta lax (salmon) are renowned. Game in the North, include grouse, partridge, hares, tetrao bonasia, &c. The elk is rare. Bears and wolves diminish; the reindeer is chiefly in Lapland. Nearly all the Rivers run to the Gulf of Bothnia; except the Klara, which runs to Lake Wenner. The Lakes are numerous, and mostly in the South, the largest being the Wenner, 2,015 square miles; Wetter, 716 square miles; Maelar, 472 square miles; all united by Canals and Railways. Climate—The air is cold and dry; mean temperature at Stockholm, 42°. Snow lies five or six months. There is hardly any spring.

Manufactures—Cotton, cloth, sugar, beer, and brandy. The Commercial navy numbers 4,160 vessels. Value of Exports and Imports with England, 9¼ millions sterling. Principal channels of navigation—Gota, Trollhätta, Strömshälm, Södertelje Canals. Railroads—West Line, Stockholm to Gothenburg, and to Charlottenburg and Christiania; South, Falkoping to Malmo; North, Stockholm to Upsala and Gefle; besides several lines opened since 1874, including Wexio towards Calmar and Karlscrona. Total (1878) 1,060 miles, of six or seven different gauges, about 2·6 to 4·7 feet; the State lines being the widest. There are 180 Telegraph stations, and 5,155 miles of wire. Telegram to United Kingdom 5½d. a word. A good dinner at the Stations for 25 öre, or 1s. 6d.

Army.—38,100 men, and 234 guns; besides the land vär, 97,000, and militia 189,000. The Navy (1878), 130 vessels, large and small (42 steamers, and 14 iron-clads), with 153 guns, and 8,000 sailors. Chief stations at Carlscrona and Stockholm.

Government.—In 1397, by the union of Kalmar, Sweden and Norway became a tributary to the Danish crown. Gustavus Vasa rescued it from this dependence, and had the sovereignty conferred upon him in 1523, and the crown made hereditary in his line. On its failure (1818) Marshal Bernadotte was elected as Charles XIV. By the Treaty of Kiel (1814) Norway was united to the Swedish crown. The present king Oscar II., a grandson of Bernadotte, was born 1829, and succeeded 1872. He is styled "King of Sweden, the Goths and Vandals, and Norway." The Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf, Duke of Vermeland, was born 1858. The Diet (Riksdag) consists of the Upper and Lower Chambers, elected by the people, meets yearly, 15th January to 15th April. Revenue, (1878) 4¼ millions sterling. Debt (1877) 10¼ million. The Established religion is the Lutheran.

Hotels.—In Sweden and Norway the tourist is often surprised at having two bills to pay on his departure from the Hotels—the one for the apartments he occupied, and the other for the restaurant.

Posting.—The charge per Swedish mile per Horse is 1 Rixdollar, or 80 öre, at the country stations, and 1½ rixdollar, or 120 öre, at the fast stations; that is, when starting from the town. It is usual to give the boy who accompanies, 5 öre.

Money.—100 öre = 1 riksdaler = 1s. 1½d. English. Gold Coins.—Pieces of 20 and 10 kronors = £1 2s. 2½d. & 11s. 1½d. English. Silver Coins.—Pieces of 4, 2, & 1 kronors = respectively 4s. 5½d. 2s. 2½d., 1s. 1¼d; and pieces of 50, 40, 25, and 10 öre = respectively 6½d., 5½d., 3½d., and 1½d. English. Bronze Coins.—Pieces of 5, 2, and 1 öre = respectively 3d., ½d., and 1-7th of a penny English. Bank Notes.—All notes are in denominations of gold crowns of 10 kronors; and amounts above two gold crowns, must be paid in gold when demanded.—From The Merchants' Handbook of Money, Weights, and Measures, by W. A. Brown, LL.D. London: Stanford. Postage to England 2½d for 1oz.

Measures.—The foot = 0·296 mètres, 0·974 Eng. feet. 1 Swedish mile = 6 miles, 5 fur., 40 yds., or about 7 miles English. Liquids, kubikfot = 10 pos or kanna. 1 Swedish cubic foot = 0·921 Eng. cubic foot. Weights, 1 lb. of 100 öre 1 Swed. 16 = 0·937 Eng. lb.

Capital of Dalecarlia, 175 miles N.W. of Stockholm. Its streets are long and wide. Direct communication with Korsnäs and Tuna by Lake Runn.

SIGHTS.—The churches of Kopparberg and Christine, the latter built 1471. The School of Mines is very ancient, and contains a collection of minerals, and the Dalecarlian costume worn by King Gustavus III. in 1788. He was assassinated 1792. The whole district of Dalecarlia is full of associations with Gustavus Vasa. On Lake Runn (Rynkhytian), is the barn in which he thrashed corn; and at Ornäs, a Swedish mile from Fahlun, the little house and room inhabited by the great king, of which a fac-simile was at the Paris Exhibition of 1867. Fee to view it, 25 to 30 oere.

Fahlun is in the midst of a region of copper mines, 28 miles in length and 7 in breadth, enclosed by rocks of reddish granite, the greater part of which is composed of iron and copper pyrites. During many centuries the annual yield was eight millions of pounds of pure metal. At present only a little copper, gold, silver, lead, and sulphur, are produced. The best ore yields 20, but the poorest only 1½ per cent. Railway to Gefle, see page 285.

Gefle.—Stat.—Pop. (1877) 18,141. HOTEL:—RAILWAY STATION HOTEL.

CUSTOM-HOUSE near the Steamboat Pier.—Passengers' luggage is sometimes opened on its arrival by the Copenhagen steamer. The first train (Express) leaves an hour after the arrival of the Steamer from Copenhagen at 7 a.m. for Stockholm, arriving there at 9.36 p.m. (14½ hours). No public conveyances at this hour; only porters.

A large and handsome commercial town, on the left bank of the Gothaelf, near the Cattegat, 245 m. W.S.W. of Stockholm; lat. 57° 42′ N., long. 11° 57′ E. Trade in iron, steel, timber, &c. The Ship Canals through the town are spanned by good bridges. The two Churches are noble buildings In the grand square is the beautiful bronze statue of Gustavus Adolphus, the "Lion of the North," killed at Lutzen, 1632. The public-houses have been bought by the town; it is said to be a financial success, but does not stop drunkenness. At the rocks behind the town is an extensive view. Ruins of Bohus Castle in the neighbourhood.

AMERICAN CONSUL.—E. Oppenheim, Esq.

ENGLISH CHAPLAIN.—Rev. M. E. Snepp.

Gota Canal, ending at Gothenburg, is the chief line of water communication through Sweden from Stockholm, now partly superceded by railway. It was begun in the year 1810, and ended in 1839; having a length of eight Swedish miles, costing 13,713,346 rixdollars. The Canal joins the lakes Asplangen, Roxen, Boren, Motala, Wetter, Bottonsön, Wiken, and Wener. It begins properly at Soderkjoping: and the steamers to Riddarholmen, near Stockholm, reach it by Lake Malar, the gulf of Telge, the canal of Södertelje, the gulf of Trannö, and that of Slätbaken, which leads direct to the Göta Canal. There are quick steamers on this canal between Stockholm and Gothenburg; the fare is not high, and the living is both good and cheap. Objects of interest on the Canal:—Some five hours from Gothenburg are the fine Falls of Trollhattan; sufficient time is allowed to see these and the splendid locks. At Lake Wetter the scenery is, generally, somewhat flat, but there is good variety of lake and river, pretty islands, and bold promontories. At Roxen there is a succession of locks. Time is given to go and see the old Monastery, where many of the Swedish kings lie buried. At Motala is an engine manufactory; at Söderköping a mineral spring.

CONVEYANCE.—Railway to Stockholm, page 284.

Helsingborg.—Stat.—Pop. (1878) 10,990.

A town on the Swedish coast of the Sound opposite Elsinore. It is neatly built, near some mineral springs. The country behind is full of shallow lakes, with good roads, between wood fences. The Sound is frozen in Winter.

BRITISH VICE-CONSUL.—C. Westrup, Esq.

CONVEYANCE.—Railway to several places p 283.

There are fifty Steam Boats plying between different parts of the town and to the environs Four days a week steam-boats start from Stockholm to Smedjebacken (in Dalacarlia) by the Lake Mälaren, the Stromsholms Canal (with 26 locks and fine waterfalls), a number of small lakes. From Smedjebacken a railroad leads to Lake Wesaman, on which a steam-boat runs as far as Grangardet. This is one of the prettiest channels in Sweden, and the whole of the trip can be done in three and a half days; every Sunday and Wednesday a steamboat starts at 9 a.m. for the Castle of Gripsholm, where the prisons of Eric XIII., John III., and Gustavus IV. (Adolph) are shown. A great number of historical portraits are kept here. The steamboat is back in Stockholm by 8 o'clock p.m.

Stockholm, the capital, 40 miles from Upsala, 320 from Copenhagen, 800 from Tornea, standing in a situation between Lake Malar and the Sea, remarkable for its beautiful scenery, is a long and irregularly constructed city, occupying seven rocky islands, besides two peninsulas lined by good quays. Lat. of Observatory 59° 21′ N., long. 18° 4′ E. Mean temp. 25° (Jan.) 64° (July). It is one of the finest cities in Europe in position; and is often styled the Venice of the North. A crowd of picturesquely wooded islets, create a variety of beautiful views. The harbour of Stockholm is a very good one, admitting ships of the largest burden. At its extremity rise several streets, one above the other, in the form of an amphitheatre; and at the summit is the Palace—a magnificent building.

The principal objects of attraction are the Cathedral, Bank, House of the Diet, Royal Academy of Science, and Royal Academy of Arts. The Arsenal has within it an immense number of trophies and standards taken from different nations. The two principal streets are those of the Regency (Regerings gatan), issuing in the Gustav Adolph square and the Queen's street (Drottning gatan), running from the Quay north to the Observatorii place. Along the latter are many public buildings devoted to charity and science, especially the Academy of Sciences, founded 1739; including 175 members, divided into seven classes. This fine building contains a Portrait Gallery, a Library (35,000 vols.), open Wednesday and Saturday; a Zoological Museum and a Cabinet of Natural Philosophy; open Saturday, 12 to 2. The Technical High School is a large pile, containing a Museum of models and a laboratory.

Manufactures of glass, china, silks, woollens, &c., are carried on.

POINTS OF VIEW.—The visitor should gain the view from the tea garden at Mose Backe of the numerous islands dotting the clear sea below; the ships moving in or out; the beauty of the spires; above all, the noble Palace which towers above everything else.

Guides may be hired from the hotel. The round takes in the following.—Carlberg Castle, erected by Charles XI., now a military academy. Out of its park you pass Solna Kyrka, an ancient structure of the 11th century (still in use). You then enter the park of the Haga, with a castle of the same name, the summer residence of the Queen Dowager, alongside the lake of Brunnsviken. You pass the King's horticultural gardens; and, after a few minutes further drive, you are in the park of Ulricedale, the favourite resort of the late Charles XV., of whom several traces are to be seen here. Close to the Church erected by him stands a curious-looking old house (also by Chas. XV.), representing a facsimile of Ramhythan, the original in Dalecarlia, where Gustavus Vasa, in 1521, found refuge, and where he planned and ultimately liberated his country, then oppressed by the Danes. Further on in the park you will find several orangeries, and hothouses with rare collections of tropical plants near a good inn. You pass then through the pine forests, by the way of Tivoli and Alkistan Queen Christine's way, Tiskartorpet (a hunting hut occupied formerly by Charles XI., and Charles XII., when a boy), and Charles XV.'s Ladugårdsgärdet (a place for military review), viâ Djurgardsbrunn (inn), over a bridge, and you are in the *Djurgård*n, or the Park proper, with its multitude of cottages and private residences. It is the haymarket of Stockholm and abounds in cafés, restaurants, concerts, etc., etc. and is the place where the people, on a fine day or Sunday afternoon, "most do congregate." In the centre of the Park stands Rosendale, a royal summer residence, with beautiful flower gardens, statuary, vases, etc., etc. After a few minutes more drive along the shore of Djurgårdsviken, you enter the city again, but from an opposite direction to that by which you left.

The Royal Palace stands on an eminence, commanding a delightful view of land and water. It consists of a great quadrilateral, 391½ feet by 418½. At each angle is a wing 161 feet by 51, except the S.W. one. South façade is the richest. Chapel on this side is particularly ornate, containing marble pillars, paintings, and stucco work, by Swedish artists, and a carved pulpit. Notice,—1st, the State Apartments, 2nd story (Festivitetsvåningen), with a great gallery, 169 feet long, 23 wide, much admired for its mythological and symbolical ornaments; prettiest group, Venus and Cupid, by Byström.—2nd, the King's Private Apartments (Konungen's mindre eller ersklda våning), N.W. angle. The Salle des Armes has a valuable collection, including Russian flags from the battle of Narva, gained 1700, by Charles XII.; a sword, richly incrusted with gold, &c, once the property of Gustavus Vasa.—3rd, The Queen's Apartments; note especially the Salle des Miroirs, profuse in gilding, glasses, and embroidery. Lighted up, the effect is magical. 4th, The King's Great Apartment, with views over Lake Mälar. Salle Victoria contains a present of Napoleon III. to King Oscar, a large mirror, and a wonderful Norwegian clock.—5th, Former apartment of King Oscar—the Apartment of Dowager Queen Josephine. Salon Rouge has many portraits of the royal family. Cabinet Rouge and Cabinet Jaune contain works of art by royal personages. The Oratory has many paintings of Reubens and Van Dyck. The Royal Library (north façade) deserves special attention (open 11 to 2, except Saturdays and Sundays). Its curiosities are, Codex Aureus of the four Gospels, in gold letters, on violet and white parchment, with an Anglo Saxon note, saying it was bought from Pagan pirates. Also, the Gigas Librorum, a wonderful collection of MSS. by Benedictine monks, on 300 parchments; a Latin bible (1529), with autograph notes of Luther; a Cicero de Officiis, printed by Fust, 1465 &c.

The Cathedral, or Ridderhus Church, of curious architecture, contains the sarcophagi and trophies of Gustavus Adolphus, several Charleses, including Charles XII., Charles XIV. (Bernadotte) also Fred. I., Adolphus Fred., Gustavus III., Oscar I., with their wives and children, and several persons of historical note, with the crests of the knights of the Seraphim Order.

Church of St. Nicholas (near the Palace), the oldest church, so named after Nich. Breakspeare, who was a missionary here, has a fine altar piece, the helmet and spurs of St. Olaf on a pillar and frescoes by Ehrenstrahl. Here the kings are crowned. Other churches are St. James, St. Clara, St. Catherine (with a good dome), on the Mose Hill, the highest point of view, from which there is a fine panorama of the city (as above-mentioned). This church is on the spot called the Blood Bath, where 97 eminent citizens were put to death by Christian II., in 1520. A handsome new Synogogus is by Scholander.

In front of the Riddarhus or House of Assembly for the Nobles, is the statue of Gustavus Vasa; near the statue of Berger Jarl, the founder of Stockholm, with part of the oldest remaining house

The National Museum, the finest building of Stockholm, stands on the Blasiholmen, opposite the Royal Palace, near the Grand Hotel and was planned by Stüler; it is 260 ft. by 170, and 90 high, consisting of three stories. The principal façade is adorned with statues of eminent Swedes, Linnæus, Tegner, Berzelius, &c. The vestibule on the first story has statues of northern gods, Odin, Thor, and Balder, by Fogelberg. On the ground floor are the Museum of Antiquities and the Numismatic Cabinet. First room is the Stensalen (stone-room) containing numerous relics of the Age of Stone, as whetstones and arrows of silex, stone pottery; 2nd, the Bronze and Iron Gallery (Brons och Jerngalleriet), with bronze fibulas, etc. The Pillar salen has curiosities of the Middle Ages, including clothes of Gustavus Vasa, Gustavus Adolphus, Charles XII., and a sepulchral stone with Runic characters. The Numismatic Cabinet contains 5000 Anglo-Saxon coins, and above 20,000 Arabic and Byzantine coins from Gothland, once a great seat of trade. On the first story are Sculpture and Arms, besides drawings of Raphael, Correggio, and Titian: There is a beautiful Endymion from Adrian's Villa, near Tivoli; also much fine Majolica porcelain. The collection of paintings in the 2nd story is not yet completed.

The Södermalm, or south suburb, deserves a special visit on account of the house No. 24 Hornsgatan, formerly inhabited by the great necromancer Swedenborg, and because of the view from the Mosebacke.

EXCURSIONS.—To Upsala, as below by rail, 2 hours, by steamer, 4 hours; can return the same day. To Gripsholm a large and ancient Castle in Lake Mälar, the King's country seat, marked by cupola spires; having a fine collection of portraits and paintings, and a beautiful neighbourhood. A steamer leaves Riddarholm quay on Wednesdays and Sunday mornings, at 9 o'clock a.m., returning at 5 o'clock p.m., fare, 3 rixdals. To Drottningholm (daily, every hour), the present King's summer residence, in a beautiful park, with collections of paintings, and curious castle of imposing dimensions, containing statuary, fountains, and a swannery, etc.

ENGLISH MINISTER.—His Excellency Hon. E. Erskine. SECRETARY OF LEGATION, R. G. Watson, Esq. CONSUL.—R. D. Hay, Esq.

AMERICAN MINISTER.—His Excellency J. L. Stevens. CONSUL.—N. A. Elfving, Esq.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE at SS. Peter and Sigfrid Church—Chaplain (C. C. C. Soc.), Rev. W. Combes.

CONVEYANCES.—Stockholm is reached from Hull or London in about 60 hours, viâ Gothenburg, by three weekly steamers. Copenhagen to Stockholm, by rail (after crossing the Sound) 18 hours. In 1874 the direct line, viâ Linköping, will shorten it to 15 hours. Malmo to Stockholm, 15 to 17 hours; to Gothenburg, 12 hours; Stockholm to Gothenburg, 12 hours; Stockholm to St. Petersburg (Russia), by three-weekly steamer, viâ Abo and Helsingfors, from 50 to 60 hours; at Helsingfors, by rail to St. Petersburg. Stockholm to Stettin (Germany), once-a-week, 50 hours; to Lübeck (twice-a-week), also by steamer, 14 hours. At least one steamer leaves daily for the northern part of Sweden, viâ Gefle, and along the coast of the Bothnian Gulf, touching at various seaports till you reach Lapland and the City of Haparanda, the most northern town in the Baltic; after a ride of a couple of miles you reach, on a mountainous table land, the village of Aavasaxa, from where the view of the midnight sun can be observed during two or three weeks in high summer.

N.B.—Stockholm is the cheapest place in Europe to buy furs, etc., etc.

Trollhatten, or Trolhætta.—Pop. 1000. A straggling place, 5 hours from Gothenburg, the people of which live in red coloured houses, carrying on a brisk trade in timber and iron. The Waterfall, or rather succession of rapids here, is very fine, Height 112 feet, divided into four separate falls, in a wild gorge, within a distance of 3,600 feet. The second fall, Toppöfallet, is 44 feet high.

The Göthaelf river is navigable from the sea to the Falls of Lilla Edet; from which a canal and locks lead past to Akerström and to the Falls of Trollhätten; where the navigation is continued by a canal of three miles along the river, close to sawmills belonging to a Glasgow Company.

Upsala.—Stat.—Pop. (1878) 14,070.—HOTELS: Stadshotellet, in the Drottning-gatan, No. 9, Hotel Upland, near the Dornbron bridge. Price of rooms about 1 rixdol. per day.

RESTAURANTS—Löf's Källare; Vestra Agatan, No. 8. Cafés—Stadshotellet, Norberg's Schweizeri.

POST-OFFICE, Ofre Slottsgatan, No. 1. Telegraph near the Station.

CARRIAGES can be hired at Stadshotellet and Drottninggatan, Nos. 6 and 10. Prices—To the mines of Dannemora and Osterby, 1 horse car 10 to 12 rix dol.; 2 horse car 20 to 25 rix dol. (30 to 36 hours). To Old Upsala and back, 2 or 3 hours, 1 horse car, 2 rix dol.; 2 horse car, 4 rix dol.

The town, built of wood, on a fine plain watered by the Sala, is an Archbishop's See, of very ancient date, and was a great centre of Pagan superstition before the conversion of Sweden. It was originally called Aros. Mean temp. 22° (Jan.) to 62° (July).

PRINCIPAL OBJECTS OF NOTICE.—Governor's Palace, containing gobelins tapestry, portraits of sovereigns, and pictures of the battle of Lund, 1676, when Charles XII defeated the Danes; Ecclesiastical Seminary. Cathedral or Domkyrka (the largest in the North), is of brick, 370 feet long, 141 wide, 115 high; begun 1289 by Etienne Bonneuil, a French architect; finished 1435. It has a reliquary said to contain bones of St. Eric, and a handsome pulpit. Here coronations took place. One of its numerous monuments, in marble of Gustavus I., with frescoes, represents events in his life. In the Baner mausoleum are the remains of Linnæus, Oxenstierna, Brahé, &c. On the Odins Lund Avenue is the obelisk to the memory of Gustavus Adolphus. The University of Carolina Redivivа, founded 1477, by Jacob Ulfson, stands at one end of the Drottning gatan, and contains the Library, the largest in Sweden, with 150,000 vols. and 7,000 M.S., especially the Codex Argenteus, or Gothic Gospel of Bishop Ulphilas (318-88), of silver letters on purple vellum, but nearly half lost; also the Acantica of Rudbeck, and the sacred book of the Druses, with the Edda M.S. Behind the Carolina is the Park, with a splendid building devoted to the study of chemistry and physics. The Botanical Garden has many rare plants and the bust of Linnæus. In the Gustavianum is a Museum of Art; an Observatory is attached to the University. Its 400th year, in 1877, was attended by representatives from most European Universities.

Near Upsa a (3 m.) are the vestiges of Old Upsala, or Gamla Upsala, with a curious old church, with a detached belfry, incorporating a Temple of the Æses (a mythical giant race), one of the most ancient remains in the North of Europe. There are also mounds and tumuli (one 60 feet high and 232 feet round) over the graves of Odin, Thor, and Freya. The mines of Dannemora also deserve to be seen, having been worked since the 13th century. The deepest, the Jungfrugruvan, is 510 feet down. One of the largest pumps is worked by a hydraulic wheel, distant 4,000 feet. The mine is on the surface, and can be descended by ladders or by the basket. Its iron is the best in Sweden. At a quarter of a mile is the great foundry of Osterby.

Steamers to Stockholm every day, by the Mälar Lake. Railway to Stockholm, page 285.

Wenersborg, or Elfsborg.—Stat.—Pop. 4,070.

On the S.W. extremity of Lake Wener, and reached by the steamers from Gothenburg, contains an uninteresting church. The place has a busy aspect, but there are few streets and little scenery.

Rail -See page 285.

Wener Lake is the largest in Sweden, having a length of 15 Swedish miles, and a width of 7; height above the Baltic 145 feet; depth, 359 feet; with several islands—Thorsö, Bromö, Arnö, &c. It receives 60 rivers. The steamers of the Göta Kanal pass across Lake Wener.

Westerso or Westeras.—Stat—Pop. 4,660.

HOTELS: Gästgifvaregården; Hotel Kraak. Rooms, 1 rix dollar 25 oere to 1 rix 50. Post-Office and Telegraph. Manufactures—Tobacco, pottery for stoves, &c.; and shipyards.

A town on the north side of Lake Mælar, distant from Stockholm about 13 Swedish miles.

OBJECTS OF NOTICE.—Domkyrkan, or cathedral, with tower 328 feet (date 1271). Splendid altar-piece, given to the church by Svante Sture, who is buried in its vaults, which also contain remains of King Eric XIV. Old Castle, built in the 12th century by Bishop Illanus; Town-hall, and an ancient College, with library of 11,000 vols. Near Westerås is the great Stromsholm Canal, begun 1777, crossing several lakes, and lined with forges and furnaces.

CONVEYANCES.—Steamers to Stockholm, Strengnäs, Arboga, and Eskilstuna.

Wetter Lake.—On the direct course from Stockholm to Gothenburg, communicating with Lake Wener and the Göta Kanal. The steamers that follow this route are noticed under Gothenburg, which see. Lake Wetter covers 17 square Swedish miles, and washes the banks of four provinces. Its water is very transparent and subject to furious sudden tempests. The depth is given as 420 feet, and it is 297 feet above the sea. It receives contributions from nearly 100 streams, and has several islands, especially the Jungfrun, with romantic traditions. Six towns stand on its banks, Motala, Junköping, Askersund, Wardstena, Gremna, and Hjo.

Wisby.—Pop. 6,043.

HOTELS:—Lindby's, Gothland, Wisby. Rooms, 1 rix dol. per day. Post-office and Telegraph. Carriages at Hellgren's.

MANUFACTURES.—Breweries, distilleries, shipbuilding.

Capital of the island of Gothland in the Baltic, with regular steam communication to Stockholm and Kalmar. This is a very interesting trip to the antiquary and the botanist, the flora of Gothland being very rich.

Wisby was in the middle ages one of the most important towns of the Hanseatic League. In the 13th century it had 12,000 burghers besides workmen; 18 churches, and five convents. It was robbed of much of its wealth by King Waldemar, 1361, and has never recovered itself. Part of the old wall and some of its 46 towers remain.

Notice the Cathedral, a strange mixture of the Byzantine and the Gothic styles, founded 1190; 192 feet long and 78 broad. Highest tower, 200 feet. Holy Ghost, built 1046, is two churches, one over the other. The other old churches (all small) are in a ruined state, including St. Catherine, the best, belonging to the Franciscans; St. Nicholas, with statues of the Saint and of St. Augustine; St. Drotten; St Clemens, &c. Söderby, Högklint, &c. are worth visiting.

BRITISH V. CONSUL.—

LAPLAND.

LAPLAND, belonging partly to Sweden and Norway, and mostly to Russia, extends from latitude 64° N. to the Arctic Ocean, and from the Atlantic coast to the White Sea; which latter washes the eastern shore, opposite Archangel. Area—Russian Lapland, 100,000 square miles; Swedish (including Lapmark and Finmark), 50,000. Population, 18,000. They are an undersized race, of Mongolian blood. The country is traversed by a chain of mountains, of the primary formation, giving rise to many rivers, running into the Arctic Ocean and the Gulf of Bothnia. Some of the peaks in this chain exceed 6,000 feet in height. Most of the country is covered with dense forest, broken by rivers and lakes, some of vast extent. The country abounds with game of all sorts, and in many of the forests are found bears, wolves, elk, &c.; while the rivers teem with fish. Agriculture is little practised, the Lapianders living mostly on fish and the produce of the reindeer, which is also bartered for rye, &c. They make moss bread and cakes of pine-tree bark.

The Language is of Asiatic origin, but Swedish is understood in Swedish Lapland, and Norsk in the N. W. part. Although the climate during the nine winter months is intensely cold, the summer is warm, and generally fine.

Money in use is that of the countries to which Lapland belongs.

Books.—Particulars of points of interest, routes, &c. are given in "Up in the North," published by Chapman & Hall. See also Captain Hutchinson's "Try Lapland."

The principal towns are—

Hammerfest, in the Island o Qvaloe (whale island), on the Arctic Ocean, 60 Eng. miles S.W. of the North Cape in Norwegian Lapland; lat. 70° 40′ N., long. 23° 40′ E., is the most northerly town in Europe, and has an important fishery. The streets are watery ways, with boats for carriages. Reindeer and eider duck shooting. Arctic birds and the white bear are found. Here the midsummer sun never sets for about ten weeks, and the winter sun never rises for the same time. Communication by STEAMERS during the summer with Throndhjem and Christiania.

ENGLISH VICE-CONSUL.—C. Robertson, Esq.

Lulea, on the Gulf of Bothnia, 62 miles S.W. of Tornea, on the border of Swedish Lapland, at the mouth of the river of the same name, which has a S.E. course of 200 miles. Pop. 1800. It has a large trade in timber, tar, &c. BRITISH VICE-CONSUL.—J. Bergmann, Esq. Communication by well-appointed Steamers, running about twice a week during the summer months to Stockholm, calling at many towns on the Gulf.

Pitea, on the Gulf of Bothnia, 30 miles S.W. of Lulea. Pop. 1500. A good harbour and shipyard.

Tornea, in Russian Lapland, at the head of the Gulf of Bothnia, and at the mouth of the river of the same name; lat. 65° 50′. It has a large trade in fish, fur, iron, timber, tar, hemp, &c. Pop. 800. On the opposite side of the river is Haparanda, which may be considered part of the same town, although belonging to Sweden.

NORWAY.

In NORWAY the Railway is called Jernbane (iron rail).

Norway, affectionately called Gamle Norge, "Old Norway," by its people, is an independent Kingdom under the Swedish crown, on the west side of the Scandinavian Peninsula, of which it makes one-third. It is 1100 miles long, from the Naze, in lat. 57° 30′, to the North Cape, in lat. 71° 10′; its breadth varies from 7 to 280 miles. It is a compact mass of mountains, or mountain "plateaus," in lofty elevated valleys and lakes; and forms two divisions, Northern and Southern. The Eastern half of the Southern portion is covered with forests and lakes. Area.—About 123,300 English square miles, of which one-tenth are arable, one-fourth forest, 1-40th snow: and divided into 20 amts and 5 stifts. Population (1876), 1,806,900, of whom 25,000 are Fins and Laplanders. About 13,000 emigrants leave yearly. The largest towns are Christiania (pop. 75,986), and Bergen (pop. 33,384). Norway is not populous in proportion to its extent, owing to its mountainous character and northern position.

The Mountains bordering on Sweden are a series of Silurian table-lands, called fjelds, or fields—(the j sounded as y)—2,000 to 4,000 feet high, covered with heath and trackless forests, edged by winding valleys. On the middle one, or Dovrefjeld, dividing the country into Northern and Southern, is the Sneehætten, 7,620 feet high. In the Northern half are the Kjolen Mountains, 6,200 feet high at Sulfjelma, near the North Cape; and in the Southern is Skagastölstind, 8,670 feet high, with other peaks from 4,000 to 6,000 feet, under the names of Langfjeld, Sognefjeld, and Hardangerfjeld. Numerous islands line the broken coast, which is indented by deep narrow fiords, between vast abrupt cliffs, sometimes many thousand feet high. The coast is comparatively mild and rainy, and free from ice all the way to the North Cape. Bergen has 80 inches of rain yearly. Strong currents run in and out; one of which, at the Loffoden Islands, called the Maelström, is a whirlpool of fabulous strength—a vulgar error at which the Norway skippers only laugh, though they believe in the Kraken, or sea serpent.

Lakes.—About 2,000 large and small, generally narrow along the course of the rivers; some are of a Swiss-like character. The largest are Mjösen, or Miösen, 77 miles long, and Randsfiord, 30 miles long. Rivers.—Numerous, but short, the longest being the Glommen, 310 miles. They are generally made to furnish water-power to drive the saw-mills. Several Falls are to be seen, some 600 to 900 ft. high; such as Morkfos (fos or force); Rjukanfos, in Telimark district; and Vöringfos the last is 900 ft. high.

Among the Products are flax, hemp, hops, barley, oats, and potatoes. Grain succeeds up to lat. 70°. Rye bread is a common diet. Trout, char, venison, cloudberries and cream, may be got at the inns. Timber comprises pine, Scotch fir or deal, oak, larch, Norway spruce, birch, wild apple and cherry. Most of the houses are timber, on a brick foundation; they are dry and warm, and last for centuries. For the Sportsman there are the bear, wolf, lynx, golden eagle, red deer, reindeer, elk, grouse, and blackcock; with wild geese, eider duck, salmon, and seal; and no game laws, except that the elk must not be hunted from November to July.

Chief Minerals are iron (at Kaafiord, &c.), copper, lead, silver; of which last the richest mine is at Kongsberg.

In Climate it is less cold, but more moist and changeable, and generally less salubrious, than

Digitized by Google

Sweden. Snow lies from November to March. Summer lasts for three months, and is delightful, and very warm; the air is fine and bracing on the fields, but the mosquitoes bite. Among the mountains the winter is long and severe. On the west coast the climate is milder than in the interior of the country, and the western and northern harbours are open the whole year: the weather is generally steady, being either good or bad for considerable periods. The Fisheries, particularly on the west coast, find employment and wealth for the natives, and supplies sailors for the Norwegian fleet. Principal fish are cod, herrings, salmon, and lobsters, employing 16,000 men and 3,000 boats. Exports are dried fish, timber, planks, cod oil, seal skins, cobalt, Prussian blue, copper, iron, and ice.

Government.—Norway was formerly governed by its own hereditary sovereigns; one of whom was the ferocious St. Olaf or St. Olave. On the death of Haakon V. in 1319, his grandson in the female line, Magnus Smek, united the kingdoms of Sweden and Norway. In 1397, Olaf V., son of the celebrated Margaret, united the kingdoms of Norway and Denmark. In 1814, Norway was ceded by Denmark to Sweden; to which, the Norwegians consented, on condition that Norway, though governed by the same King as Sweden, should be independent; preserving its constitution and laws, army, navy, customs, &c., as at present.

Norway was the original seat of the Normans, or Northmen, who settled in England, France, Sicily, &c. One of them, Rolf Ganger, or Rollo, of Aalesund who settled in Normandy, was the ancestor of William the Conqueror. The exploits of the early Vikings (Vik-ings) are related in the Sagas.

Estimated Revenue (1879), about £2,120,000; with a Debt of 5¾ millions. Value of Imports and Exports between Norway and England, 3¾ millions, out of a total of 8 millions. The Mercantile Shipping numbers 8,060 vessels, of 1¼ million tons. Navy—122 vessels, large and small (30 being steamers), of 290 guns, and 6,500 men. Chief port, Horten, in the Gulf of Christiania, where there is an Arsenal, with a Naval School. Army, about 18,000, full strength; besides volunteers. The Military School at Christiania. Education is universal. Railways—About 660 miles open (1878). Telegraph, 4,740 miles, with 127 stations. Post-Offices, 870. Postage to United Kingdom, 2½d. for ½oz. Telegram, 4d, per word. For Money Orders, see page xlvii. The Trunk Railway from Christiania was planned by R. Stephenson.

Money.—100 öre = 30 skillingen = 1 kroner = 1s. 1½d; 4 kroner = 1 specie daler = 4s. 5½d. Gold Coins—20 and 10 kroners, otherwise called 5 and 2½ specie-dalers. Silver Coins—2 and 1 kroners; 24, 15, 12, and 3 skilling pieces. Bronze Coins—2, 1½, 1 and ½ skillings (otherwise called 6, 5, 3, 1½, öre); and the 2 and 1 öre pieces. Bank Notes—100, 200, 40, 4, 2, 1 kroners, otherwise called 100, 50, 10, 1, ½, and ¼ specie-dalers. The old system was as follows:—24 skillingen = 1 s. for mark = 10½d. English. There were no gold coins. Silver Coins—Species-daler (divided into 120 skillings) = 4s. 5½d.; half species daler = 2s 2¾d.; and ört, half-ört, and quarter-ört pieces; and pieces of 4, 3, and 2 skillingen. Copper Coins—2, 1, ½ skillingen pieces = 8-9ths, 4-9ths, and 2-9ths, d. English. Bank Notes—The bank notes were on different coloured papers, and were 100 (red), 50 (green), 10 (yellow), 5 blue, and 1, ½, and ¼ (white) specie dalers.—From The Merchants' Handbook of Money, Weights, and Measures. By W. A. Brown, LL.D.

Weights.—16 skaalpund = 1 lispund, 20 lispund = 1 skippund. Butter, meat, etc., are sold by the following weights:—2 mark = 1 skaalpund; 12 skaalpund = 1 bismerpund; 3 bismerpund = 1 vog. Last=2 tons English.

Measure.—30 inches = 31 English. The most common measure is the Alen (ell):—12 inches = 1 foot: 2 feet = 1 alen. Norway mile = 7 English miles nearly.

Posting.—The charge is 24 sk. spec. per Norwegian mile per horse, at the country stations, and at the fast stations 36 sk. spec.; and 48 sk. from towns., besides about 6 sk. for the carriage, if the traveller is not provided with one himself. It is usual to give the boy who accompanies the carriage 4 sk. per Norw. mile for 1 horse; but should he have the care of more than one horse, 3 sk. per mile for each horse.

Passports are abolished. The Luggage of a traveller is very slightly examined. The Languages spoken are Danish and Norwegian, which is very similar to Danish. English Vice-Consuls at all the principal towns—Christiania, Bergen, Trondhjem Christiansand, Stavanger, &c.

Maps and Books.—Good Maps may be procured at Christiania. The traveller will find them very useful in journeying through this country. "Bennett's Handbook," is printed annually and sold by T. Bennett, 17, Store Strandgaden, Christiania. It contains all the posting and boating stations on all the highways, their distances and charge for posting, (regulated by law). It takes little room, being less than 100 pages. It may be bought at Christiansand, Bergen, and Throndhjem. C. Forbes's "Norway" is illustrated with maps and woodcuts, price 12s.

Fishing.—This country is much visited by anglers for Salmon fishing. In the north, the Tana, the Alten, and the Namsen; and, in the south, the Rauma near Molde, and the Topdals rivers are among the most noted. There are also many others well known; some but slightly; besides numbers still untried. In one or two rivers, as much as two or three thousands of pounds weight have been taken in a season with the fly, by a single rod. But, the known good rivers will be found occupied, (some few are let) and many may be tried without success; so that possibly the season will be spent, taking only two or three fish. Excellent trout fishing is to be met with in almost all parts. The lake fishing is also very good.

A FEW HINTS FOR TRAVELLERS IN NORWAY.

The most convenient way for Englishmen going to Norway is by Steamer from Hull or London to Christiansand and Christiania. See Steamer List. Should you go to Christiania first, it will be advisable either to buy or hire a Carriole there. No vehicles are better suited for carrying a large quantity of luggage; portmanteaux of almost any size can be fastened upon them, and very small carpet bags, containing necessary articles for passing the nights from town to town; large carpet bags are awkward, but can be taken. Every traveller should procure Bennett's Handbook, above-mentioned; the stations alter much every year, while new steamers are put on lakes, and new roads and railways are constructed, as to make this book almost indispensable. The Officers on the Steamers speak English.

Routes.—The principal and most desirable routes for visitors to follow are those leading from Christiania to Bergen, from Christiansand to Bergen, and from Bergen to Drontheim. Three main lines of road connect Christiania and Bergen:—1. By Vang and Fille Fjeld, 48 Norway miles (1 N. mls.=7 Eng.); journey of 7 to 8 days. This route passes the celebrated Falls of Voringfos, among the finest in the world (noticed further on), and the Glaciers of Justedal. 2. By Lake Mjoesen or Mjösen, presenting in its upper reaches scenes reminding you of Swiss waters; 49 Norway miles; rail, steamer, and posting road; 7 to 9 days. 3. By Sundvolden and Hallingdal; 43 Norway miles; post road; 5 days. It passes by the superb Falls of Hönefos.

Four roads lead from Christiansand to Bergen:—1. By Arendal; 58 Norway miles. Posting road. This route passes the three splendid falls of the Nid, and the highly romantic Lake of Nisservand, 34 English miles long. 2. By Forsgrund; 63 Norway miles. Post road, steamer, and mountain path. This route passes the foot of Goustafjeld (6000 English feet high), with a magnificent view, and the Falls of Riukanfos, noticed further on as one of the finest in Europe. 3. By Stavanger, 45 Norway miles. Carriole roads, steamers on the Fjords in summer, or row boats. It passes the beautiful lakes of S redals and Vaud, and the curious ravines of the Matte Fjord. 4. The fourth road is by Saetersdalen. Horse route. Cars only go to Valh. It passes the Cascade of Helfos; but is not so remarkable as others.

From Christiania to Drontheim (or Trondhjem,) there are two principal routes. 1. By Röraas, 45 Norwegian miles. Rail and posting road, not much used. This road passes the copper mines of Röraas, yielding 250 tons of copper yearly; mines 1600 feet deep. It also passes the fine lake of Oresund. 2. By Lake Mjösen and Lillehammer through the valley of Gudbrandsdal, the garden of Norway; 46 Norway miles. Rail, steamer, and post road. It passes the Falls of Hunnerfos, Vlig, the birth-place of St. Olaf; and takes you to the foot of Snechætten, frequently ascended (7620 feet). A Railway in this direction, across the Dovrefjeld was opened 1877, from Hamer on Lake Mjösen to Tönset, Koppang, and Trondhjem. 270 miles long from Hamar.

From Bergen to Drontheim there are two routes, one by sea and the other by land. 1. The land route, 57 miles. Carrioles, steamers over the Fjords. Near Loervig the scenery is quite magnificent. Pass near the Justedal mountains; wild defiles, fir forests, and Fjords abound. 2. By sea, 80 Norway miles; 4 days. Price 10 species. You follow many Fjords, and between the main land and reefs. Promontory of Stadland, covered with glaciers, is the most remarkable point.

Some Shorter Routes are:—1. From Christiania to Molde, 42 N. miles. Rail, steamer, and post roads. This route coasts the fine lake of Lessaov. The neighbourhood of Molde has some of the best scenery in Norway. 2. Christiania to Lake Mjoesen, 6 N. miles; rail 3 hours. 3. Christiania to Kongsberg, 7 N. miles. Post road. Kongsberg has some silver mines, yielding 100,000 specie dollars per annum.

Two other Excursions deserve notice:—1. Drontheim to Hammerfest., Steamer, 6 days. Fare, 15 species. You pass the Polar Circle at the Troenen Isles. At Hestmendsoen the coast presents a fearful chaos of rocks. Bodoe is the first important station where the steamers stop, 58 miles from Drontheim, in 69° north latitude. The Loffoden Islands, near here, are the great seat of the cod fishery, the annual take being 16,000,000 fish. Hammerfest, the most northerly town in Europe. Much whale and seal fishing in winter. Excursion to the North Cape.—See "Lapland Section," above. 2. Drontheim to Fiskumfos by Levanger, 24 N. miles. Post road. Fiskumfos is one of the finest waterfalls in Norway. Or by land through Kongsberg, taking the opportunity of visiting the celebrated silver mines. If the traveller's time be unlimited, he might go from Throndhjem by a weekly steamer to Hammerfest (as above); thence to the North Cape, to Vardö, the most northern fortress in the world, and to Vadsö, not far from the Russian frontiers, the whole distance taking about a fortnight.

In these northern regions, viz., at Bodö, Tromsö, Hammerfest, Alten, Vardö, and Vadsö, the sun never sets for some weeks before and after midsummer. There is no Steam communication between Vadso, on the Norwegian frontiers of Russia, and Archangel.

VICTORIA HOTEL. GRAND HOTEL.

DU NORD; D'ANGLETERRE; H. COPENHAGEN.

The capital of Norway, 700 m from London, 580 m. from Hull 550 m. from Leith; at the extremity of a picturesque bend of the Bay of Björviken, which forms the northern extremity of the Gulf or Fiord of Christiania, nearly 80 miles from the sea in the Skajerrack. It is divided into the City, the suburbs of Vaterland, Pepervigen, and Fierdingen. the fortress of Agershuus, or Aggerhuus, and the old town of Oslo, near Egeberg Hill. The City was rebuilt and named by Christian IV., after a plan designed by himself. Its streets, 40 feet broad, are at right angles, with cisterns at the corners. Many of the houses are of brick. The Castle of Agershuus is built on a rock on the west side of the bay, below the city. Oslö was the site of the old city, burnt in 1624; it contains the episcopal palace, and an old Church, with a Cemetery, in which lies Mr. George Bradshaw, the projector of the "Bradshaw Guides," who died here of cholera 6 Sept. 1853

The Royal Palace is the principal building, erected at a cost of £300,000. Here are the storthing or Parliament House, faced by statues of Harald Haarfager, and Bernadotte the government departments, court of law and the public seminaries. One of these is the Military Academy, or Cadet Institution, with an excellent library, a collection of models of mines, bridges, &c., and of minerals. The University is a handsome new building, in which is the Museum of Natural History and of Northern Antiquities, including idol gods, altars, arms, &c. The National Gallery has some paintings by Tidemann, and a library of 130,000 volumes. Norwegian and Danish Theatres. Lat. of old Observatory 59° 54' N., long. 10° 45' E.

Christiania possesses an excellent harbour, and its principal exports are iron, deals, carpenter's work ice, lobsters, and oil cake. Oscarshald, a beautiful château belonging to the King, 3½ Eng. m. by land, or 1½ by water, deserves a visit; it has pictures by Tidemann. At Horten, 32 miles S., in the Gulf, is the chief Naval Dockyard, with a School and Arsenal. Further away, via Haugsund Stat. (p. 241) are Konge-udsigt and Dronningudsight, two fine points of view; and the Kinnerige, or Ringerike, with a vast prospect, leading in Gousta fjeld.

Drammen.—Stat.—Pop. (1876) 18,610.

A great port for the timber trade, on the Drammen fiord, in the Bay of Christiania, about 20 miles S.W. of Christiania, consisting of two parts joined by a bridge. A fire, 11th-12th July 1866, swept the town from end to end, nearly two miles, burning most of its log houses, factories and public buildings. Rail, p. 281.

BRITISH CONSUL.—W. Melhuus, Esq.

Drontheim or Throndtjem.—Stat.—Pop. (1876) 22,170. HOTELS:—

BRITANNIA: D'ANGLETERRE; BELLEVUE.

There are plenty of good Lodging houses.

This former residence of the Norwegian kings, standing on a beautiful winding fiord, was founded in 997 by Olaf Tryggvesen, on the site of an ancient city, Nidaros, which had a temple dedicated to Thor and Odin. Being of wood, it has been burnt several times; but since the last great fire in 1841, all the new buildings are of brick and stone. The half ruined Norman and Gothic Cathedral, (lat. 63° 26' N., long. 10° 25' E.), was founded 1182: only the choir and transept used. It is of greenish stone, with some fine interlaced arches, and stands in a large graveyard. A copy of Thorwaldsen's grand work Our Saviour and the twelve Apostles is on the altar. Coronation House of timber where the kings are crowned. Custom House on the site of the Orething where the kings were elected. The Museum has a library, and many remains relating to ancient Scandinavia, such as armour, &c.; besides Norwegian minerals, birds, &c. Here are the Bank of Norway; also, a College, a Royal Academy of Sciences, and a seminary for the Lapa. Many ships are built at Drontheim; it exports fish, copper, and timber.

The environs are very beautiful, including the Lerfossen, or falls of the river Nid, about three miles south of the town; 70 to 80 ft. high, 120 ft. broad. Good salmon fishing.

BRITISH VICE CONSUL.—A. Kjeldaberg, Esq. AMERICAN C. AGENT.—M. Lundgreen, Esq. POST AND TELEGRAPH OFFICES. ENG. CHURCH SERVICE at the Chapter House (in Summer), supplied by the Col. and Conr. Ch. Soc. RAILWAY, see p. 281.

Frederikstad.—Pop. 2700.

Situated at the entrance to the Christiania Fiord, close to the remains of the strong fort of Frederickshald, on the Swedish frontier. Here the warlike Charles XII. was killed in the siege of 1718. Excursionists can visit the Falls of the Glommen, (Sarpfos) about a Norwegian mile distant.

BRITISH VICE CONSUL.—T. Sandberg, Esq.

CONVEYANCE.—Steamers to Frederikshald, Moss Drøbak, and Christiania (9 hours).

Hammerfest.—See "Lapland Section."

Lillehammer.—Stat.—Pop. 1700.

At the north end of Lake Mjösen on the high road to Throndhjem, 33½ Nor. m. distant. Its Cathedral was founded by the Englishman, Pope Adrian. Hunnerfos or Hunner Fall is at Fossegaarden. The high road ascends the Gudbrands valley for nearly 170 m. up to the Dovre Fjeld, (O. Rödsheim's Inn) a good point for ascending the Galdhoppigen, the highest peak in Norway, 8380 ft above sea, and not difficult. Further to the S. W. is the fine scenery at the head of Sogne Fjord.] After Rommundgaard on the main road, you come to Dombaas, under the Dovre Fjeld, where the road parts off—one way through the fine Romsdal to Ask (a good centre) and Molde; the other way to Stören on the Drontheim rail., past Jerkinn and Kongsvold, from which Snechætten the highest point of the Dovre Fjeld (7620 ft.) may be reached. Its top is a vast crater with a frozen lake inside.

Molde.—Pop. 1800. On the Atlantic side, among fine coast scenery in the Römsdal's mouth, 5½ Nor. m. from Christiansund, from which the Dovre Fjeld can be reached via the Romsdal, and thence on to Mjösen Lake and Christiania, 320 m. About 6½ Nor. m. down the coast is Aalesund, at the mouth of the Stoer Fjord, whence Rolf Ganger or Rollo, ancestor of William the Conqueror, started to conquer Normandy, 905.

CONVEYANCES.—Steamers to Bergen, Christiansand, and Hammerfest.

Riukanfos Fall.—This noted waterfall is in the Telemark district, near the road from Christiania to Bergen, 3 0 m. distant, by rail, post road, mountain path, and steamer. Rail (p. 281) to Kongsberg (Inn; pop. 4 00; with its rifle factory, mint, and silver mines;) thence by carriole to Hitterdal and its old Church, (a picturesque timber pagoda-like structure, 84 feet by 57 feet), where the road to the Falls turns off. It passes by Tinöset, on the splendid lake of Tind or Tindsjö, surrounded with wooded mountains. Ascend Westfjorden valley to Goustafjeld (6000 feet), from which there is a grand view. At 12 miles from Fjostrand are the Falls, formed by the Maan, a tributary of Lake Mjoesvand (34 miles long), and falling 520 feet.

From Hitterdal the main route passes Virje, Botten, and Odde, which takes the traveller over the snow fields of Gutefjeld (5300 feet). Odde stands on Soer Fjord, a branch of Hardanger Fjord, from which an excursion can be made to the glaciers of Folge Fonden, 5600 feet, commanding a splendid view. Hence to Bergen.

Stavanger.—Pop. 20,370.

A port on the Bukke-fiord, out of the North Sea, on the west coast, 18½ Nor. miles S. of Bergen; and about 30 m. S. of Hangesund, at the mouth of Hardangerfiord. It has a timber and fishing trade, and a good Cathedral, near which is the grave of King Harald Haarfager, (or fair hair), who defeated the petty Vikings here in 872. The site is marked by a national Pillar, unveiled July, 1872, by Prince Oscar at the 1000th anniversary of this event. His descendant, called Harald Harfager, who ravaged the Yorkshire coast, was defeated at Stamford Bridge by Harold, King of England, 1066.

BRITISH VICE CONSUL.—W. S. Hansen, Esq.; and at Hangesund L. E. Eide, Esq.

DENMARK.

A little Monarchy, (formerly much more extensive,) between the North Sea and the Baltic, divided into two parts, Continental and Insular. The Continental part consists of the N. half of the peninsula of Jutland (ancient Cimbrian Chersonese), projecting out of Germany, to which the S. half, or Schleswig-Holstein now belongs. The Insular part comprises a number of Islands,—Seeland, Funen, Laaland, &c., lying across the mouth of the Baltic, towards Sweden, and threaded by the Sound, the Great Belt, Little Belt, and other passages.

Area.—14,800 sq. miles, of which 9800 are in Jutland; with a coast indented by shallow fords, and a surface almost uniformly level; but green and picturesque pasture is common. The highest parts are only 400 to 500 ft. above sea. Population.—(1878,) 1,940,000 estimated; mostly Lutheran, and very English-looking; as might be inferred from the common ancestry of the two people; for from hereabouts came the first Danes and Anglo-Saxons who invaded England. About 7000 emigrants to America leave every year. Area of Colonies—(Iceland, Greenland, Faroe Islands, St. Thomas, &c.,) 44,300 sq. miles; Population, 130,400. The Guinea and East Indian possessions have been ceded to England.

Climate—mild and wet on the whole. The Channels of the Baltic are frozen in winter, which lasts for several months. Products—are chiefly agricultural,—rye, oats, barley, hemp, hops, potatoes, &c. Exports to England, (value 2½ millions sterling) are grain, cattle, horses, sheep, oil cake, tallow, bones, cherry-brandy, &c. Fish and game are abundant. Black bread is a common food. The rivers are not worth notice. A little coal is found in Bornholm.

Sovereign.—The King, Christian IX., was born 1818, and succeeded 1863. Prince Frederic, his heir apparent, was born 1843. His eldest daughter, Alexandra, is our excellent Princess of Wales. Another daughter, Dagmar, is wife to the Czarevitch of Russia. Denmark is an ancient Monarchy, at one time (1397) including Norway by inheritance, and Sweden by conquest, under Queen Margaret. Norway was ceded to Sweden 1814. Schleswig-Holstein was ceded to Prussia, after the war of 1864; along with the Kiel Canal, a work 15 miles long, from Rendsburg to the Baltic, begun 1777, and finished at a cost of £500,000. Under the constitution of 1866, the government consists of a Rixdag, or Diet, composed of a Landsthing or Senate, (66 members); and a Folksthing or Commons, (1 for every 16,000).

Revenue (1878), nearly 2½ millions; with a Debt of 9½ millions. Army—42,000 on the peace footing. Navy—66 vessels (35 being steamers), with 284 guns. Mercantile shipping,—3368, of 258,300 tons. Imports and Exports from and to England (1876) 2½ millions and 4½ millions respectively.

Railways run from Fredericia to Aarhuus, Aarborg, Viborg, &c: and from Fredericia across the Islands to Copenhagen; made 1864-6, by Peto and Brassey. Later lines connect Copenhagen with the Islands of Falster and Laaland. Total (1878) 850 miles. Telegraph Lines, about 1800 miles. Telegram to United Kingdom, 4d. per word.

Education.—There are 4000 Schools, with several Colleges, under a University at Copenhagen. Education is compulsory for every one between 7 and 14. In modern times, Denmark has produced the great sculptor, Thorwaldsen, and authors such as Oehlenschläger, Bodtcher (died 1874), and Andersen (died 1875), besides Holberg, the founder of the national theatre. Shakespeare is popular here.

Money—100 Öres = 1 Kroner = 1s 1½d. GOLD COINS—20 and 10 Kronors = £1 2s 2½d. and 11s. 1½d, English. SILVER COINS—4, 2, and 1 Kronors, and 50, 20, and 10 Öres. BRONZE COINS—5, 2, and 1 öre = respectively 2-3rd, 2-7th, and 1-7th, English. The Kronor is above one-half of the old Rigsdaler, which was divided into 96 Skillings, and were equal to 2s 2d. 7-20th, English. From the Merchants' Handbook of Money, Weights, and Measures, by W. A. BROWNE, LL.D. Postage to U. Kingdom, 2½d. for ½oz. Cards, 1d. Money orders, see page xlvii.

DESCRIPTIONS OF PLACES.

Rail continued to Aalborg, on the Limfiord, which is crossed by a viaduct-navir, a moveable bridge for vessels and which runs up island to the west side of Jutland. Thence to Frederickshaven; for the Steamer to Gothenburg in Sweden.

HOTEL:—Stadt Hamburg. A port on the Baltic side, 60 m. from Fredericia; having a good church, Church, and a Museum. Rail.

Assens.—Pop. 3610.

A town in Funen, on the sea coast. A constant communication is maintained between this and the Schleswig coast across the Lille (Little) Belt. See Nyborg and Odensee.

COPENHAGEN, or Kjobenhavn.—Stat—Pop. (1878) 233,000, including Frederiksborg (pop. 21,000.) HOTELS:

HOTEL KONGEN OF DENMARK.—First-class hotel, beautifully situated on the Place Royale; deservedly recommended for its comfort, and good table d'hôte. First-class Coffee House (Saur Berlin style) newly opened.

THE PHŒNIX HOTEL—opposite the British Embassy. HOTEL D'ANGLETERRE. Kongens Nytorv.

RAILWAY STATION, immediately outside the Fortification, and close to the Tivoli Gardens, distant from the principal Hotels (King of Denmark, Phœnix and Angleterre) and the Steamboat Quay ¾ of a mile or a mile. Droskey at the Station.

This city is situated in a flat opening in on the east coast of Zealand, or Seeland, in the Sound, (opposite Malmö in Sweden,) where broadest and where the small isle of Armack forms a superb Harbour, capable of holding 5000 ships. It is a well built city, with houses in flats, laid out in regular, though narrow, streets, paved with granite, and adorned with very fine buildings. Oster Gade is the best street. The shops are on the ground and first floors,—the latter reached by steps. Much rebuilding is going on in the old parts of the city. It is defended by a citadel, said to be impregnable; and also by several strongly defended forts, mounted with 1680 cannon. In the vicinity are very many beautiful and picturesque sights. The city itself is entered by four arched gateways having drawbridges across the moat.

The Gother Strasse, in the Alt Stadt, is 4000 paces long. The town has 16 squares, especially the Kongens Nytorv, from which 13 streets branch off. The Exchange is a beautiful Gothic building, built of brick, and stone quoins, after a design by Inigo Jones. It is also surmounted by a singular spire, representing in its formation four dragons, with their twisted tails tapering upwards, after the fashion of a corkscrew, with their heads turned to the four points of the compass, and it has recently undergone thorough repair; the colouring in the large room is very chaste. The Church of the Trinity has a very fine Tower 200 feet high, and on its top there is an observatory. The Saviour's Church has a very curious winding staircase, and is surmounted with a Tower 288 feet high. The Churches of the Holy Ghost, and Notre Dame, are very fine buildings. The interior of the latter has beautifully wrought marble statues of the twelve Apostles, Christ, and a kneeling Angel, by Thorwaldsen.

The prospect from any of these churches takes in the city and harbour, surrounded by their bastions and windmills, the citadel, line-of-battle ships, frigates and corvettes, dockyards, arsenals, warehouses, palaces, parks, gardens, beech woods, squares, streets, canals, and market-places. A long wide plain, interspersed with forests and lakes, is seen to the westward; whilst towards the east appears the blue sea, covered with craft of all description, with the coast of Sweden in the background.

A great many Bathing places are to be found at Copenhagen. The water of the Baltic is half salt and half fresh.

Another object of attraction is the Royal Palace (Slot) of Christiansborg, on the S. of the town, in a deer park, with fine trees, on the straits of Kallebö strand it has been rebuilt twice. It includes the Houses of Parliament, the Library and Picture Gallery, with Thorwaldsen's Museum adjoining. The present edifice, erected 1830, is of a rather ordinary style of architecture, with many windows; but its principal façade, N.E., is redeemed by some statues of Thorwaldsen. In the antechamber to the Riddersaal is the celebrated Frieze of the great Danish sculptor, representing the entrance of Alexander into Babylon, including 300 figures, and extending 390 feet. The chapel is simple but elegant, with bas-reliefs planned by Thorwaldsen. The royal Library (open every day 11 to 1), contains 450,000 printed books, and many archives and manuscripts. The Picture Gallery contains 565 paintings, especially the Adoration of the Magi by Raphael, the Marriage of Cana by Tintoretto, Gamblers by Caravaggio, St. John and the Madonna by Annibale Carracci, the Apostles at Emmaus by Rembrandt, and other pieces by Rubens Salvator Rosa, Van Dyck, Dow, &c.

The eye will be taken by the four colossal statues ornamenting its stupendous façade. Coloured silk damask and silver ornament its empanelled walls. The Ball Room should be particularly noticed; its walls and arched ceiling representing a pure white marble and gold. A colonnade is formed by the Corinthian columns on either side; chandeliers, with cut glass pendants and spangles, suspended from the ceiling and adorning it; the whole being reflected by the plate glass at either side. The floors are of oak, maple, and ebony, diamonded. The Stables should also be visited: they contain stalls for 200 horses.

The Palace of the Princes situated near that of Christiansborg, contains especially the Museum of Northern Antiquities, (open Monday 5 to 7, Thursday 11 to 1), one of the most remarkable of the kind that exists. It is on the first story, and is admirably classified in 12,000 numbers. In the first rooms nothing is seen but implements of the Age of Stone, arrow heads, chisels, &c; next come the bronze arms and instruments, such as swords, shields, vases, &c.; 3rdly, you reach the Age of Iron, extending from A.D. 500 to 1000. The Ethnological Museum (open Wednesdays 5 to 7 p.m., and Saturdays 12 to 2) is on the third story, and embraces 35 salles, including Greenlandish, Chinese, Japanese, and other curiosities, admirably classified. There are other collections; that of Natural History is in the next street. Sunday, Tuesday, and Thursday, 11 to 1 p.m.

Amalienborg Palace deserves to be visited on account of two beautiful statues of Thorwaldsen, Terpsichore and Euterpe, in one of the salles. Near the palace is the statue of the great Danish poet Oehlenschläger, erected 1861.

The Chateau of Rosenberg, built by Inigo Jones 1604, in the Kongens Have, contains, among numerous relics, the sword of Charles XII., tapestries, old furniture gold tables, orders, jewels, and a throne of massive silver at the end of the Riddersaal. In the beautiful schwool is a statue of Hans Andersen, erected 1875, on his 70th birthday; he died the same year in his pretty villa of Rolighed.

The University, founded 1478, an old looking quadrangle, attended by about 1050 students, mostly theological, and contains an Anatomical museum and a Botanical museum, a Botanical graden (entrance, Thursday 8 to 2 p.m., and 4 to 7), a library of 30,000 vols., and an observatory.

Near Christiansborg Palace is Thorwaldsen's Museum, open twice a week, 11 o'clock till 2, at which the visitor will be able to spend hours in contemplating the beauty of the sculptor's work. The Museum itself is a hollow square, the outer walls are coloured in yellow ochre, with the reception of the sculptor and his works from Rome depicted on them. It contains an immense collection of works, all being the creation and bequest of one man, who is thus spoken of in a work, entitled, A Trip to Denmark:—

"Albert Thorwaldsen, the son of a poor shipcarpenter from Iceland, was born in Copenhagen 1770. His genius, at an early age, impelled him to Rome, where he arrived almost penniless; but, having soon afterwards obtained employment in Canova's studio, his talent very quickly developed itself in the beauty and genius of his designs. Ultimately, he took a studio of his own, and modelled his famed statue of Jason, but, as he obtained no order for it, he, in despair, determined to quit Rome, and return to Denmark. All his arrangements were made for that purpose, when Mr. Hope, of London, seeing the cast of Jason, was so much struck with its beauty, that he immediately ordered it in marble.

"This turned the tide of Thorwaldsen's fortune, from that time his fame was established and commissions poured in upon him. He then fixed his residence in Rome making occasional visits to Denmark, and finally settled in Copenhagen in the year 1838. He had apartments allotted to him in the Palace, where he died, 1844."

SIGHTS.—The visitor should ascertain immediately on his arrival the days and hours the various exhibitions are open. At present the Scandinavian Museum and the Thorwaldsen collection are open twice a week. The woods at Charlottenlund are very fine. Open carriages start frequently on Saturday and Sunday afternoons from near the citadel. The Academy of Arts in Fred. V.'s old Castle of Charlottenborg (which is to come down), will find a place in the Botanical Gardens. The Karlsberg Institute was founded by Jacobsen, owner of the great Karlsberg Brewery, near the city, founded 1845.

Elsinore, or Helsingoer.—Stat. — Pop. 8,000. HOTELS:—NORDEN; ORESUND.

A town of some commercial importance, 40 m. from Copenhagen, and of historical interest, from its connection with Shakspeare's Hamlet. Elsinore commands the narrow entrance of the Sound, and is opposite the Swedish town of Helsingborg (1¼ mile, in a direct line). The toll for passing the Sound was done away with in 1857. It is completely frozen in winter. In summer the view from the Lighthouse is animated by scores of passing vessels. The Cathedral has some remarkable monuments: but the most interesting spot is the Gothic Castle of Kronborg, built 1574 and 1584, by Frederic II., but much modernised—with a chapel, picture gallery, and light-house, with fine view over land and sea. The ghost scene in Hamlet is placed on the battlements of the castle. George Third's unfortunate sister, Queen Matilde, was confined here for some years. Half an hour north-west of Kronborg is the royal castle of Marienborg, where some stones, described as "Hamlet's Tomb" and "Ophelia's Brook," are duly pointed out to the anxious inquirer. Mariandal, at Convent and bathing place, and Hellebaek, are close by.

BRITISH VICE-CONSUL, E. Muus, Esq.

Roeskilde.—Stat.—Pop. 4,650.

A town in Seeland, on the Ise-fiord, the ancient capital of Denmark, 21 m. from Copenhagen, in a good corn country; containing a Castle, and St. Lucius's Gothic Cathedral, (founded in Canute's time), marked by three slender spires. Tombs of Queen Margaret and other Sovereigns. Rail to Korsoer, Copenhagen, Kallundborg, Vordingborg. Rail. p. 279-80.

Svendborg.—Pop. 5,540.

A town with shipyards, distilleries, &c., in the island of Funen, well worthy of a visit. Ferry to the island of Thorseng, about half a mile.

SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN.

A province of Prussia, in the south part of the Cimbrian Chersonese, north of the Elbe, between the North and Baltic Seas; composed of Schleswig (or Slesvig) mostly Danish-speaking, and Holstein mostly German; the two being divided by the Eyder. Pop. (1875) 1,074,812. Area 6,809 square miles, including the island of Alsen in the Little Belt and the Frisian islands in the North Sea. Surface flat and well cultivated, producing cattle, horses, grain, butter, &c., much of which is exported to England. It was a Duchy belonging to Denmark previous to 1864, when, after the capture of the Dannewerke (or line of defence), Düppel, &c., it was over-run by the Austro-Prussian forces, and was finally annexed to Prussia, 1866, along with the little duchy of Lauenburg.

Altona.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 74,102.

The old capital of Holstein, seated on the north bank of the river Elbe, contiguous to Hamburg, which it was intended to rival, and is built on the side of a hill. It is the terminus of the Schleswig-Holstein Railway, and is connected by it with Kiel, on the Baltic.

CONVEYANCE.—Railway to Kiel in 3½ hours, p. 168; viâ Hamburg to Berlin, see page 164.

Flensburg.—Stat.—Pop. (1875) 26,745.—HOTELS:

Rasch's Hotel, much frequented by English.

Stadt Hamburg, a very well-conducted commercial house.

The seat of government, and chief town of the duchy of Schleswig; situated on the Flensburg Fiord, an arm of the Baltic, with a fine deep harbour. It has a considerable trade with the Baltic ports, Sweden, England, and West Indies; and contains 19 oil mills, 2 corn mills, breweries, distilleries, sugar-refineries, iron-foundries, rope-works. The introduction of the railway, steam-ships, and gas-works, has given it new life. (Lat. 54° 48′ N., long. 9° 28′ E.) Several who fell in the Danish-German war are buried here. Glücksburg Castle is 3 m. s.

RAIL to Hamburg, Rendsburg, Copenhagen.

Hadersleben.—Stat.—Pop. 9,000.

HOTELS:—"Höppners," clean, moderate, and obliging. Over it is this quaint inscription:—

"Straft Gott die Stadt mit gluth und Brand
Und stürzt in Zorn die Häuser nieder
So baüet seine Segen's Hand
Und Friederich's Huld die Schöner wieder.
1760."

A clean flourishing town, one of the most ancient in Schleswig; containing iron, bone-manure, and flax manufactories. Its church is ancient.

Husum.—Pop. 5,000.

A well-built town, in an extensive cattle-feeding and agricultural district, in Schleswig, on the North Sea.

BRITISH VICE-CONSUL—C. Christiansen.

TURKEY.

Routes from London.—There are several routes to Constantinople, which offer peculiar attractions to the general traveller, particularly that viâ Paris and Vienna, and thence either by boat down the Danube to Rustchuk Giurgevo, or by rail to the same place via Pesth, Temesvar, Orsova, and Bucharest; from Rustchuk to Varna by rail, thence by boat to Constantinople. The Austrian Lloyds' Steamers leave Vienna for Rustchuk Giurgevo every Tuesday and Friday at 7.0 a.m., arriving at Rustchuk Giurgevo on Friday and Monday, from Rustchuk to Varna daily at 11.0 a.m., from Varna by steamer, arriving in Constantinople on Thursday and Sunday evenings. Fares from Vienna to Constantinople—1st Class, £12 10s. 10d; 2nd Class £8 17s 1d; Mixed, £11 13s. 8d See Advt For route to Giurgevo from Vienna by rail, see pp. 214. 296 A new route has been opened by Odessa. The Russian Steam Navigation Company's steamers leave Constantinople every Monday and Thursday at 2 p.m.; returning Tuesday and Saturday. The time occupied by this route is, from Constantinople, 6 days to London; 6 days to Paris; 5 days to Berlin; 4½ days to Moscow; 5 days to St. Petersburgh; 4 days to Vienna. The Company's Offices in Constantinople are at Moumhane; Baron Steigar, Local Director.

Passengers by the Danube in summer should be prepared with mosquito-curtains. The route up the Danube against stream is in summer tedious. The routes via Vienna and Trieste, and thence by the Austrian Lloyds' Steamers to Constantinople; or by the Rhine, Switzerland, Italy, and Malta, are very pleasant; but too fatiguing and circuitous. The mere amateur tourist will find the Paris and Marseilles route agreeable and cheap.

Passengers by this route should time their arrival at Marseilles so as to catch one of the direct steamers plying between that port and Constantinople. Those steamers leave Marseilles every Saturday at 5 p.m., calling only at Messina and Piræus (Athens), and make the passage in about eight days; so that a traveller need not be longer than ten days on the road.

The various routes from London to Paris and Marseilles being fully specified elsewhere, we have only to add that the journey from London to Marseilles (890 miles) can now be accomplished in 30 hours Passengers may stop at Dover and Calais (or Folkestone and Boulogne), Paris and Lyons.

London to Constantinople, including railway to Marseilles. viâ South Eastern Railway, 1st Class viâ Calais, £20 11s.; viâ Boulogne, £20 5s.; 2nd Class viâ Calais, £14 18s.; 2nd Class viâ Boulogne, £14 13s.

By way of Cologne, Magdeburg, Leipsic, Prague, Vienna, and Trieste the expenses will be, 1st class, about £20; 2nd class, £13 10s.

An excellent line of steamers from London for Constantinople, fortnightly, calls at Malta, Smyrna, and occasionally as Syra. Fares:—First cabin, £15; second, £10. Agents in London, A. Carnegie, Westcott, and Lawrence, at Constantinople, Keay and Donald, opposite Galata Custom House.

Steam from Liverpool.—Messrs. Burns & MacIver despatch steamers every ten days, calling at Malta, Syra, and occasionally at Gibraltar. Fares, about £20. Passengers can take a ticket for the voyage out and home for £40, paying in addition, 5s. per day while staying at the different ports where the steamer calls, in case the passengers prefer living on board. This is of great advantage to invalids. The average passage to Constantinople and home, including stoppages at intermediate ports, is under six weeks. These steamers carry stewardesses. Agents at Constantinople, Messrs. C. & E Grace 5, Rue Bikir Perchembé Bazar; Galata.

Messrs. Papayanni Brothers' steamers run from Liverpool to Constantinople every ten days Agents in Constantinople, Daniel Pappa & Co., 4, Halil Pacha Khan, Galata

Messrs. Leyland & Co.'s steamers, from Liverpool to Constantinople, fortnightly. Agent at Constantinople, Edward Lafontaine, Manouk-Oglou Khan, Kara Kieu.

All the steamers from England call at Malta. Some of the London steamers call, before coming to Constantinople, at Smyrna. The average passage out is 17 days.

In addition to the regular Marseilles weekly mail steamers to Constantinople, the Russian Trade and Steam Navigation Co. have a steamer fortnightly. The steamers of the Fraissinet Company to and from Marseilles weekly (see advt).

A fortnightly line of steamers from Havre, agent, Thomas Russell, near Galata Custom House. These steamers go to Odessa.

Messrs. Davids monthly steamers from Antwerp; agents, C. and E. Grace. A line of steamers from Norway and Sweden, agent, C. J. Reppen and Co., near Galata Custom House.

Austrian Lloyd's Steamers.—From Trieste every Saturday at 2.0 p.m., arriving in Constantinople on the following Thursday at 7.0 p.m. From Constantinople every Friday at 5.0 p.m. arriving in Trieste at 9.0 p.m. on Wednesday. The steamers of this line leave Constantinople regularly for all the ports of the Black Sea, the Dardanelles, the Archipelago, the Coast of Syria, and Egypt. From Constantinople to Cyprus the route is via Smyrna, every alternate Thursday, at 4.0 p.m., arriving in Cyprus on the following Wednesday. See Alphabetical List.

Messageries Maritimes Steamers.—From Marseilles every Saturday, at 5.0 p.m., arriving in Constantinople on the following Saturday. Constantinople for Kusterdje, Sulina, and Galatz, every Monday at 12.0 noon; for Odessa, every Tuesday at 4.0 p.m; for Samsoun and Trebizonde, every Monday at 2.0 p.m. Also regular departures for all the Syrian Ports and Alexandria, and the Archipelago. See Alphabetical List and Advertisement. There are two lines of steamers from Marseilles to Malta. One of these is a direct line; the other touches at Genoa, Civita Vecchia, Naples, and Messina; and both are so arranged as to correspond at Malta with the packet proceeding indirectly to Constantinople. The departures take place weekly, and are very regular.

Egyptian (Khedive) Steam Navigation Co.'s Mail Steamers from Constantinople for Alexandria, calling at Gallipoli, Dardanelles, and Smyrna, every Wednesday at 4 p.m. English Steamers and Engineers.

The Russian Trade and Navigation Co.'s Steamers. — Leave Constantinople for Odessa every Monday and Thursday, at 2 p.m.; Taganrog, Kertch, and Caffa—leaving Constantinople on Mondays, at 2 p.m., from April to November. Sebastopol passengers proceed from Constantinople by the Odessa steamer, on Tuesday. For Smyrna, Caramania, Cyprus, the ports of Syria and Alexandria—leaving Constantinople fortnightly, on Saturdays, at 4.0 p.m. For Marseilles—fortnightly, no fixed day. Mr. Henry Lamb despatches English steamers fortnightly, to Odessa.

Trinacria, or Italian line, carrying Mails for Italy, leave for Messina and Italian ports every Saturday, arriving at Constantinople on Sundays.

From Hull and Antwerp, there is a fortnightly service of Steamers from Brownlow Lumsden and Co., in connection with lines to Dunkirk, Hamburg, Rotterdam, Gothenburg, Dundee, Leith, Aberdeen and Newcastle. Agents: Theodoridi and Co., Rue Moumhane, Galata.

Steamers from the north of England and Glasgow: agents Keald, Mathwin and Co, Rue Quarantine. Dawson and Co., Swan Brothers, Keay and Donald.

Fevaid-i-Osmanie Steam Co. (Turkish).—This Company has a weekly service between Constantinople and Trebizond, Varna, Salonica, the ports of the Sea of Marmora. The departures are being constantly changed. English steamers and engineers.

"A duty of 8 % is charged upon goods brought coastwise from one part in Turkey to another. It therefore the traveller buys carpets, &c., at Smyrna, and intends to go to Beyrout, he should despatch them by steamer to England from Smyrna; not take them with him to Beyrout, and there despatch them. There does not seem to be any system of landing goods. An export duty of 1 % is charged, unless one produces a paper from the seller, shewing that the duty if the article comes from another country, as in the case of Persian carpets,) has been paid. Baksheesh will often get over all difficulties, however."—G.H. (October, 1871.)

Travelling—Travellers careful of their health should recollect that the climate in summer changes from one extreme to another, and that the same day, even the same hour, may be intensely hot and cold. They should wear cotton shirts and flannel; their outer dress should be of light make and colour, as for India, but they should have some very warm and portable outer clothing, to provide against a sudden change of temperature. On coming here they should not adopt the fez, which exposes novices to a coup de soleil, but they should wear white hats or caps, of such a make as to shelter the head and keep it cool. It should be recollected that the climate of Constantinople, with its thin, pure, and exciting air, is salubrious, but also very dangerous, and that persons of a full habit, or those that are intemperate, are liable to acute diseases of an alarming character. Catching cold very frequently leads to bronchitis and pneumonia; intemperance produces dysentery.

Money.—40 paras = 1 piastre = 2½d.; 100 piastres = 1 lira Turca = 18s. English; a purse is 500 piastres. SILVER COINS—30 paras, 1 and 2 piastres,—Turkish shilling and silver Mejidieh, (1 Turkish lira = 20 piastres. GOLD COINS—Turkish lira, ½ and ¼ do. = respectively 18s.; 9s.; 4s. 6d. Gold and silver coins of other countries are current in Turkey. The English Sovereign at 112 to 113 piastres; the French Napoleon 90 to 105 piastres; the Russian Imperial 93 to 105 piastres; the Spanish dollar 24 to 31 piastres; and the English half crown at 12 to 15 piastres. COPPER COINS—1, ½ ¼ piastre pieces, and worth respectively 2½d.; 1d.; ½d.; and the 5 and 1 para pieces worth about 27 10s and ¼ of a farthing English. The Ottoman Bank issues paper money of £5 piastres and upwards, which can be got in London. The traveller should avoid bargaining in English money or francs; but bargain in Turkish currency, which will generally save him 10 per cent. Throughout Turkey there are in circulation worn silver debased coins. One of these, the beshlic, is estimated at 5 piastres but its intrinsic value is far less; and there are ½, ¼, 1-10, and 1-20 beshlic pieces. See the Handbook of Money, Weights, and Measures, by W. A. BROWNE LL.D.

Turkey Asia, seaports (Smyrna etc.) 10½d.; Inland, 1s 1½d. Turkish Islands—Candia or Crete, 1s. 1½d. Cyprus 1s. 0½d; Myte ene, Rhodes, Samos, Scio (Chio or Chio) 1s.

TELEGRAPH AGENCIES.—Reuter's, No. 11, Rue Tom-Tom. Bordearlo's, Rue du Journal. Pangalo 19, Rue dendek, Pera.

Dardanelles.—With the exception of one or two stoppages at the entrance of the Straits, the is very little to interest the tourist in the scenery through the Dardanelles. The shores are a succession of low hills, bare and monotonous, presenting no novelty to excite attention until the steamer reach the now important town of Gallipoli, situated on the European side of the strait. A short distan beyond this the Dardanelles gradually enlarge until the steamer enters the Sea of Marmora, when t tourist will obtain his distant but first sight of Constantinople. On the right are the Prince's Island

Bosphorus.—As the steamer dashes on apparently with increased speed at the sight of the Quee of the East, the white buildings and minarets glittering in the sun are seen more distinctly, until th traveller distinguishes the celebrated mosque of Santa Sophia, the Sultan's palace, the entrance to t Bosphorus, and then the steamer suddenly turns a jutting point of land called the Seraglio Point, an glides at half speed into the Golden Horn, or splendid harbour of Constantinople. At this moment, if th weather be fine and clear, the gorgeous panorama that opens to the view of the voyager is one of th most extraordinary it is possible to conceive or to describe. Accustomed as English travellers are t sea-views, the coup d'œil of the Golden Horn will elicit unqualified admiration. It is a bay or ampl theatre, surrounded by hills which are covered with buildings, domes, minarets, and fairy-palaces: down to the water's edge; those on the summits being intermingled with the foliage of cypress groves, and those on the shores appearing through the floating panorama of a thousand vessels in the harbour, ships, steamers, feluccas, and myriads of caiques, skimming in all directions. The landing takes place in the Turkish Wapping, from which the handsome Frank quarter of Pera is reached.

On arriving in the Bosphorus the best mode of landing is in one of the large boats, not a caique; the latter are exceedingly difficult to enter, particularly for ladies. Passengers' luggage has to be landed at the Galata custom-house. Passengers by the Marseilles steamers land at the French custom-house, attached to the offices of the Messageries Maritimes. Commissionaires from the different hotels are always on board the steamers on their arrival. The stranger should determine on the hotel he intends to stop at previous to landing, and inquire for the commissionaire of the hotel; who will render him what assistance he may require in landing his luggage, passing through the custom house, and engaging hamals to carry it. The Galata custom house is troublesome, but with a little civility and abstention from bullying, the passenger gets through with mere tumbling of his luggage. No stranger should try to land without a commissionaire to look to the customs and his luggage. A great improvement has taken place of late in the management of the hotels in Constantinople. The traveller will now find every attention paid to his comfort. The system is to charge so much per day for room, breakfast, and dinner; the price ranges from 12 to 17 francs; in addition there are in general, some extras which the traveller ought to ascertain on arrival. His merely saying the word is quite enough.

Persons residing in lodgings will find it best to take their meals at a restaurant, of which Pera has several; the prices charged are reasonable, and the cuisine in the greater number is good Reigning Sultan —Abdul Hamed II., born 1842; succeeded 1876, on the deposition of Murad V., who reigned only a few weeks after the deposition of his uncle Abdul Aziz. Population (subject to the territorial changes made by the Berlin Treaty of July 13, 1878), 46 millions to about 960 000 square miles—viz., in European Turkey (of whom 4½ are Christian); 17½ in Asiatic Turkey; 20½ in Egypt, Tunis and Tripoli in Africa. Army, about 160,000 in peace; 600,000 in war time. Navy, 170 vessels, of which 115 are Steamers and 23 Ironclads, with 2,090 guns. Estimated Revenue (1879) about 14 millions sterling; against an Expenditure of about 17 millions. Debt (1877), 240 millions. Imports and Exports from and to England (1878), and 4½ and 2½ millions respectively.

Constantinople.—Pop 600,000 to 1,000,000 (?) including the suburbs of Galata Pera, Top hana, and Scutari—the last on the Asian side, 1½ mile distant, past Leander's Tower.

The immense increase which has taken place in the number of visitors to this capital, renders the present hotel accommodation totally inadequate.

Tramways.—On both sides of the Golden Horn there are now well arranged lines of Tramways, opened in 1872. On the Stamboul side the lines run from the Karakieu bridge, passing a considerable distance to Ak-Serai and Ou-Capou. On the Galata side, from the second bridge in the Inner Horn, Asap-Capou, running along the main street of Galata, Tophana, Cabatash, passing beside the Sultan's palace at Dolma Bakteh, through the village of Bechiktash to Ortakieu, a distance of about 4 miles; the fare for the entire distance 3 piastres.

Railways. A short line open from Pera to Galata. The Adrianople station is in Stamboul, near the Karakieu bridge. Scutari and Ismidt, on the Asiatic side at Scutari, whence there is a steam ferry conveying passengers, carriages, horses, &c. Omnibuses and carriages at Scutari. See page 397.

Omnibuses.—Well appointed Omnibuses belonging to the Tramway Company now run on both sides of the Golden Horn. In Stamboul from Karakieu bridge, to the beautiful Turkish suburb of Eyoub. In Galata, every five minutes from the Rue Voivode, in the immediate vicinity of the main street of Galata, running a distance of three miles, passing by the Petit Champs of Pera, the Grand Rue, Pera, the Taxim, Pancaldi, by the Protestant and Catholic Cemeteries, and Tchill; the fare is 2 piastres.

Carriages.—The Tramway Company has further supplied the wants of the public with a large number of well appointed Carriages for hire, which leave nothing to desire. Fares—a course, either in Stamboul or the Galata side of the Golden Horn, a quarter of a medjideh, (about 11 pence), and half a medjideh per hour.

The introduction of these very great improvements has been attended with the most extraordinary success. The traffic for the Tramways, Omnibuses, and the Carriages has far exceeded the expectations of the parties who have carried out the affair. The circulation of all classes of the Turkish population is immense, and the Company, although it has now been working but a short time, finds great difficulty in providing an adequate supply of vehicles, notwithstanding the large additions they are receiving from Vienna. The Tramway Company has been the greatest financial success of any undertaking ever brought out in Constantinople, and to those who have had any experience of the great inconvenience the population was subjected to before, from the difficulty of getting about, except on foot and horseback, and this not always easy even for persons who could manage to use such means of locomotion, it will be easily understood what a marvellous change there is for the better. Travellers will no longer have to complain that carriages are uncomfortable and expensive, and we may look forward to all other needful improvements following as a matter of course.

Steamers.—From the Golden Horn for Scutari, every half hour, 15 min., 1 piastre. There are 16 departures from the bridge daily, mounting the Bosphorus on the European side, in addition to 12 to the shorter station of Arnoutkeiu, and 8 on the Asiatic side. The descents from Buyukdé (Europe), and Beicos (Asia), being the same num Travellers are recommended to take the steame going either side, and return by the other. Mor ing by the European side, after clearing t crowded shipping of the Golden Horn, the steam passes the Imperial Gun Factory of Tophane, a soon after the magnificent Palace of Dolma Batch within a short distance comes the recently erect Palace of Teherigan. At the landing place Ortakiere, is a very beautiful mosque, the pr portions of which are very striking. The steam keeping close in shore, next passes the columna the celebrated Barbarossa. Leaving the next sto ping place Arnoutkieu, the extraordinary force the current, running here at the rate of 5 knots, w be noticed. Next comes the picturesque Bay Bebek, the residence of a number of English a other European families. Immediately afterwar is reached as a conspicuous object the splendid placed American College, on the heights Roumelie-Hissar. This admirable institution, found ed by a philanthropical American, Mr. Robert, New York, has been now opened for a few yea under the presidency of the Rev. Dr. Hamlin, a sisted by an able body of professors from the Unite States; and a sound general education is given. Th greater proportion of the students, of whom the are about 150, are chiefly Bulgarians; and the colle has already exercised, and is likely to continue to have a remarkable influence over this communit

The kiosks and residences of the Pashas, th retreats of opulence, line these favoured shore and these dwellings succeed each other quite numerously as the houses on the road from Hyd Park corner to Hammersmith, and at places suc as Therapia and Buyukdéré, they are dense enough to form large villages, provided with hotels, shop cafés, and lodging-houses. The waters abound fish, and droves of porpoises and dolphins dispo in myriads on the surface of the Bosphorus, splash ing and playing about in the plenitude of the strength and security, till a sword fish takes a di at them, and sets them off curvetting and snortin like sea-horses. The shores of the Bosphorus ar enlivened by the innumerable wicked-looking felucca-rigged craft, darting by in all direction and manned by wild, swarthy looking men, re minding one of Greek pirates, &c.

The prettiest spot to land at is a little village o the Asiatic side of the stream, above Therapia an Buyukdéré, at the bend of the Bosphorus. Fro the summit of the hill above this village there is fine view of the opposite or European shores of th Bosphorus, and even of the Black Sea, whence

"'Tis a grand sight, from off the Giant's Grave,
To watch the progress of those rolling seas
Between the Bosphorus, as they lash and lave Europe and Asia."—Byron.

The return to Constantinople down the Bosphoru is delightful, going with the stream, and keepi close to the Asiatic side—glowing with all the pu ple glories of an Eastern sunset—the prospect i most enchanting the whole distance to the angle the Golden Horn, and the landing place of Tophan

EXCURSION TO THE BOSPHORUS.—Every visitor from England who does not object to the great fatigue, will, no doubt, enjoy a sail up this celebrated strait, in one of the pretty little caïques, rowed by a couple of stout Turks. These men row very well and the trip is exceedingly pleasant. Or the excursion may be performed by the steamer. No voyager or artist has yet done justice to the beautiful scenery of the Bosphorus. The rounded outlines of the hills, the light rich green of the vegetation, the luxuriance of tree and flower and herbage, resemble the banks of Killarney or Windermere. For thirteen miles, the waters escaping from the Black Sea, now compressed by swelling hillocks to a breadth of little more than a mile, then expanding into sheets of four times that space across from shore to shore, rush along in a flood of dark blue, like the Rhone as it issues from the lake of Geneva, till they mingle with the sea of Marmora; passing in their course by a succession of wood and dale, ravine and hill side covered with the most profuse carpeting of leaf and blade, while kiosk and pleasure grounds bastions and loopholed curtains, gay gardens, villas, mosques, and noble mansions, stud the banks in unbroken lines, from the very foot of the forts which command the entrance up to the crowning glory of the scene, where the Imperial city of Constantine, rises in many coloured terraces from the verge of the Golden Horn.

The hills strike abruptly upwards to a height varying from 200 to 600 feet, and are bounded at the foot by a line of quays, which run along the European side from Pera to Buyukdéré, about five miles from the Black Sea almost uninterruptedly. These quays are very numerous on the Asiatic side also. The villages by the water side are so close together, that Pera may be said to extend from Tophana to the forts beyond Buyukdéré. All along the water's edge there are a succession of villas and palaces, and small kiosks, which remind the traveller of an Italian lake—Como or Orta. There are several palaces belonging to the Sultan, situated on such eminences as one sees on the Rhine or the Moselle, wherever a beautiful view is to be commanded. In the absence of all artistic impressions, the Turks are great admirers of nature. Fields and forests, blue water and skies, sunny airs and bright flower gardens, are the great sources of their happiness. The state of listless dreaming into which the contemplation of these objects throws them they call kef. These little kiosks, dedicated to the idlest inactivity of mind and body, are perched about the hills of the Bosphorus, and there the Turk dreams away his leisure time, drinking in the bright and lovely prospect around him, with only the bubbling of the narghilli to assist rather than intrude upon his contemplation.

Roumelie-Hissar is the narrowest part of the Bosphorus, and the submarine cable from Europe to Asia is laid here. The old Turkish fortifications are worth noticing. Shortly after the truly princely residence of the Khédive of Egypt, at Ebrehim, is reached; among extensive and exquisitely laid out gardens, which are unequalled on the Bosphorus. The steamer next touches at Yenikieu, and then at Therapia, the summer residence of a number of leading families; with a good public garden. The English Embassy, situated close to the water side, is a very unsightly structure. Beside the English Embassy is the quieter looking residence of the French Ambassador. At Therapia there are two Hotels—Hotel d'Angleterre, kept by Mrs. Petalla, an Englishwoman; and the Hotel des Ambassadeurs. The scenery about Therapia is very lovely. The steamer in a few minutes crosses the bay to Buyukdere, a large and populous village, in every respect a most enjoyable summer residence, so far as purity of air, good walks, fine scenery, and all that can make life agreeable are to be had. The traveller is recommended to spend a night, or, if possible, a little more time here. There are three Hotels at Buyukdéré: Belle Vue or Bella Vista (kept by Sasselli), at a fine point of view; Lafleases, surrounded by an extensive garden, baths, &c; and Hotel de l'Europe, near the landing-stage. There are many objects of interest about the place.

At the end of the bay is the celebrated plain where the Crusaders encamped under Godfrey de Bouillon. The immense plantain trees on the plain are very remarkable. Belgrade forest, celebrated by Lady Mary Wortley Montagu in her Letters, is near Buyukdéré, and there is an excellent macadamised road to it, which passes the viaduct that conveys the very insufficient water supply to Pera from the heads at Belgrade. At Buyukdéré there is a very fine promenade along the water side, on which is situated the Russian Summer Embassy, and the handsome residences of the wealthy bankers and government functionaries of the capital. A band plays on the promenade during the evening; there is also a public garden. From Buyukdéré agreeable excursions may be made to the Giant's Mount on the opposite side, commanding a splendid view, and to the Black Sea, a few miles distant.

Leaving Buyukdéré travellers can cross by steamer to Beicos, and descend the Bosphorus by the Asiatic side. In the immediate vicinity of Beicos will be noticed the celebrated valley of Uuklar-Iskelessi, and the charming kiosk, built of marble, presented by Mehemet Ali, Viceroy of Egypt, to the late Sultan. The view from the kiosk is one of the best on the Bosphorus. The steamer keeps close in shore, affording an opportunity of a close view of the beautiful gardens and residences built close on the water. Passing Pashabaktche and Candifa, where the Yalis (summer residences) of some of the principal Pashas are situate, we arrive at Anatolie-Hissar, opposite to Roumelie-Hissar, where there are also the remains of old Turkish fortifications. After this is noticed a handsome white marble imperial kiosk at the head of the valley of the sweet waters of Asia—a favourite promenade of the Turkish ladies on Fridays (the Turkish Sunday). The next calling place is Candili the residence of the numerous Hitheon family, the English bankers, and other English families. Coasting along by Vanikieu, Tchenghelkein, the Sultan's palace of Beylerbey is reached. The palace and grounds form a tout ensemble which must be seen to be able to form any conception of their beauty. The last calling place is at Couscoundjouk; the steamer then passing Scutari crosses to the Golden Horn, where the journey terminates at Karakieu Bridge. The time occupied in either mounting or descending the Bosphorus may be calculated, including stoppages, at 2 hours; fares either way, 5 piastres.

Horses to be had in all parts of Pera, Galata, Stamboul, and at all the villages on the Bosphorus.

Firman for the Mosques, Serai, &c.—The best way is to apply direct to the Turkish Home Office in Stamboul. It costs 23 fr. for one person, and about 36 fr. for four. Some of the Mosques may be seen without firmans. Only take off your shoes on entering.

Dancing Dervishes to be seen Sundays, at their convent of Kassem Pacha. Shouting Dervishes, Thursdays, at Scutari. Great assembly of Mussulmans at the Eaux Douces (Kiahat-Hanè), Friday afternoons, spring and summer.

News-rooms.—The British Literary & Scientific Institution, Pera, has an excellent Library and News-room, which is supplied with English and local newspapers and periodicals; lectures are delivered weekly during the winter. A chess-club is held in the Institution. The rooms are open from 9 a.m., to 10 p.m.; strangers are admitted during their stay on the introduction of a member.

Newspapers.—The Levant Herald, an English Newspaper, published every day in English and French, with a Special English Edition, for transmission to Europe on Wednesdays. Office, 468, Grand Rue Pera, next door to Hotel d'Angleterre. The Levant Times and Shipping Gazette, is published daily at Ipsick Khan Perchembé Bazar Galata, and has a large circulation. La Turquie, the official paper, is published in French every evening. There are nearly 20 others in French, 16 Turkish, 12 Armenian, 12 Greek, 4 Bulgarian, 2 Judæo-Spanish, 1 German, 1 Arabic, 1 Persian.

Places of Worship.—The English Embassy Chapel; the Rev. G. Washington chaplain. Service, on Sunday at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. Christ Church, (Memorial Church, Pera), a handsome edifice behind the Hotel d'Angleterre; open for divine service every Sunday: in English, at 11 a.m. & 7.30 p.m.; in French, at 3 p.m. Weekly communion; celebration on first and third Sundays of every month, 8.30 a.m., on the other Sundays, 12. Daily prayers, 10 a.m. The fittings of the church are still incomplete, and help is urgently required. Chaplain of Christ Church, and agent for the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, Rev. Charles G. Curtis, M.A. Protestant services also held in the chapels attached to the Prussian, Dutch, and Swedish Legations; Rev. A. Millengen, M.A., in the chapel of the Dutch embassy. At Haskene, suburb, English Episcopal service is celebrated in English every Sunday, at 3 p.m. There is a Church of England at Orbakeuie, a village on the Bosphorus; and during the summer there is Episcopal service at Therapia every Sunday. Chaplain at Kadikoui, below Scutari, Rev. F. Elliot, M.A.

At Bebek on the Bosphorus, the American Missionaries have service every Sunday in the Chapel attached to their Educational Establishment. There are numerous Roman Catholic Churches in Constantinople and its environs; the principal ones are St. Peter's and George, Galata; and Saints Anthony, Mary, and Louis, Pera. The Jews have several Synagogues in different quarters, and there are many Greek and Armenian churches.

At Haskene, there is service every Sunday forenoon at 11, in the Lecture Hall in the British Literary Institution, according to the Established Church of Scotland; Minister, the Rev. W. Brown. This is a suburb on the E. side of the Golden Horn, where several hundred English and Scotch artisans are employed in the dock-yard.

Near this is the Ministry of Marine, where the Conference of 1876-7 was held.

Constantinople or Stamboul, the city of the Grand Sigtior, stands on the Western shore of the Thracian Bosphorus, and its situation is equally remarkable for beauty and security. A gently declining promontory, secured by narrow seas, stands S. E. corner of Europe, stretches out to meet the continent of Asia, from which it is separated by a narrow a strait that in a quarter of an hour can row from one continent to the other. This channel, which is called the Bosphorus, running about 20 miles from the Black Sea, looks like a stately river, until it sweeps by the angle of Constantinople, and enters the Sea of Marmora. But just before it is lost in that sea it makes a deep cut between the triangle of Constantinople proper and its foreign suburbs of Galata and Pera, forming the port the Golden Horn. At this owner of Thrace, the Magarian leader, Byzas, planted the City of Byzantium, about 660-70 B.C. It was taken by the Romans A.D 73; and here Constantine fixed the Eastern Seat of the Roman Empire in 328 30, calling it Constantinopolis, the City of Constantine, of which the Orientals make Stamboul, from the Greek es tan polin, or "the City." "Room" or Rome is also a popular name for it to this day; and the province in which it stands is Roumeli. Godfrey de Bouillon was here, in the first Crusade, 1096-7, in the reign of Alexius Comnenus. It was taken 1204, by the Venetians and Franks, led by "Blind Old Dandolo," and held till 1261; during which the Greek Emperors reigned at Nice and Trebisond. Their line terminated with its capture by the Turks, 1453, under Mahomet II., after 53 days' siege.

Stamboul like its prototype, is said to be built on Seven Hills, which appear to rise above one another in beautiful succession; and is about 13 miles round. There are many decaying and neglected remains of Roman and mediæval times. The ridge of the first hill is occupied by the Seraglio, behind which, a little on the reverse of the hill, the dome of Santa Sophia can be seen. This was the site of the first city of Byzantium, near the ferry over from Asia. The second hill is crowned by the mosque of the Osmanieh, whose dome is strikingly bold and lofty. The still grander mosque of Soliman the Magnificent, towers on the third hill; whilst an ancient Aqueduct, the Aqueduct of Valens, crosses the valley between the third and fourth hills. All these, intermingled with painted houses, gilded domes, and slender minarets crowned by the shining Crescent, impress the beholder with a high idea of the city at the first view. Much of Stamboul was burnt in 1865; now laid out with wide roads and streets.

WALLS AND TOWERS.—The city proper, occupying the triangle between the Golden Horn and the Sea of Marmora, is surrounded by the remains of decaying Walls, in which are 28 half-ruined Gates (including 3 or 4 now closed up), viz. 12 on the side of the Golden Horn, 7 on the side of the Marmora Sea, and 7 on the land side to the west. The Walls have almost disappeared on the two sides next the water. Those on the land side, which are in better condition, form a triple line, first begun by Theodosius II., and are marked by 188 turrets (once 190), with a dry ditch 30 ft. broad beyond. On this side, where the cemeteries lie, and which is 4 m. long from Sea of Marmora to Golden Horn, there are seven Gates narrow and beaked, viz., Yedi Koulé, or Gate of Seven Towers next the Sea of Marmora; Kapalu Kapou ("Kapou" or "Kapousé," is a gate), near Ismail Pasha's garden; Silivri Kapousi or Selymbrian Gate; Mevlanah Yeni Kapousi; Top Kapousi, where the last Greek Emperor, Constantine Palæologus was killed, 1453, by a cannon shot ("Top," a shot); Edrene Kapousi, or Adrianople Gate; Egri Kapousi, or Crooked Gate, near the Golden Horn, by which the Emperor Justinian entered. The 7th or Golden Gate is walled up. Near the Egri Gate, where there was an embankment down to the sea are remains of the Hebdomon Palace, including the two storey Hall of Constantine or Belisarius, now called Tekfyrseral.

Galata on the North side of the Golden Horn, (where, in addition to the bridge and pontoon bridges, an iron Bridge has been built, but never opened), is the chief business quarter for European merchants, who are confounded under the general name of Franks. A steep street leads up to Pera, which stretches for more than two miles along the summit of a lofty hill. Pera has long been appropriated for the residence of the Corps Diplomatiques from the different nations of Europe, who have each of them a palace here. It is also the residence of the most wealthy merchants, and is only poorly built and lighted with gas. In June, 1871, a tremendous conflagration destroyed the greatest part of Pera, upwards of 6000 houses were burned down, including the British Embassy. A fire brigade has been organised by Count Czechany. Stone and brick dwellings are now taking the place of the former easily-ignited wooden shops and houses; but no attempt has been made to lay out the streets in an improved manner. The greater part of the Grande Rue is so wretchedly narrow that two carriages can only pass with difficulty, and at only a walking pace, while the foot passengers scramble on by the wall as best they can—hustled by loaded porters and strings of pack-horses and donkeys. The Turkish suburb of SCUTARI is on the Asiatic side.

SHOPS.—Pera is well supplied with shops where the traveller can procure anything he may require. Among those which can be recommended are George Laurie, Tailor to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, in the Grande Rue, Pera. At the English shops of Hayden and Streeter, G. Bakers, Hadley and R. Williams all descriptions of drapery goods can be had at reasonable prices. Mesdames Costello and Dalton have a well-supplied millinery establishment next the Derviches, in the Téké. At Galata, H. Arnold, A. Stampo, N. Carnano have well-stocked stores of British comestibles and drinkables. Minassian's American store, in the same quarter, has a large variety of articles from the United States. There are several booksellers; and a first-rate Photographic establishment in Pera, is that of Abdullah Frères.

SIGHTS.—The first thing will be to hire a valet-de-place, interpreter, or dragoman. As the Seraglio, the principal mosques and bazaars, are in the city, the traveller must descend from Pera, and thence over the bridge of boats to Stamboul.

On one day, visit the Bazaars and Hippodrome, and ascend the Tower of the Seraskier, or ride on horseback round the Walls. Good horses can be obtained in Pera, or at the extremities of the bridges. Ride to the Mosque of Eyoub, and visit its fine tombs; taking care not to attempt to enter the Mosque, which is closed against Christians. Observe the view of the Golden Horn from the Hill above Eyoub. Near the Seven Towers is the Greek Church of Buyukliee.

On another day a visit may be made to the old Seraglio, the Mint, &c.; to be done by Firman. A party is made up at the hotels once a-week. On visiting St. Sophia, and other places of similar description, the visitor must take off his outer boots and walk in slippers, which he ought to bring with him, or the dragoman will charge him two francs; no Turkish gentleman or decent person enters any house with dirty boots, or without taking off his galoshes or outer shoes. The Firman admits to the Seraglio and the Imperial Mosques.

The Bosphorus or Bosporus—so called when fo swam over in the shape of an heifer—is best seen in an excursion up it in a steamer or caique; a good caique with three pair of oars will hold four persons comfortably, and will row to Buyukdéré in two and a half to three hours. In a larger boat, such as an Island caique, a party of travellers may go into the Black Sea as far as the Cyanian Rocks. Returning, they may land at the Sultan's Valley, (Unkiar Skelessi, which gives name to the Russian Treaty of 1833), on the Asiatic shore, drive up in a carriage, ride on horseback, or make a foot excursion to the summit of the Giant's Mountain, whence there is a splendid view of the Black Sea and Bosphorus. At Therapia and Buyukdéré there are excellent Hotels. At the first named the Hotel d'Angleterre; and at the latter, Laplerre's, where the traveller is recommended to pass a night, returning by steamer (leaving every hour) in the morning.

After an early breakfast, travellers may cross over to Soutari, in a steamer from the bridge, or take a caique with two pair of oars at Tophanah. At the wharf where they land they will find Arabas (carriages) and horses for an excursion through a part of the great Turkish Cemetery to the summit of Bulgarlu, whence is a magnificent view of Constantinople. At one o'clock the Ruffayee (Howling) Dervishes hold a service in their convent, which is very desirable to see. A walk to the Great Barracks of the Sultan Selim affords a view of its vicinity. These Barracks are interesting from their connection with the name of Florence Nightingale, who superintended the Hospital, to which purpose the building was appropriated during the Crimean War. Immediately adjoining the Barracks the English Military Cemetery is situated, where upwards of 8000 of our countrymen are interred. Baron Marochetti's memorial column looks like a great chimney.

On Friday, the Sultan, as Caliph of the Mussulman world, attends Mosque at noonday. Information respecting the Mosque which his Majesty designs visiting, can be procured in the morning of a policeman, or at the hotel. After witnessing the passage of the cortège which accompanies the Sultan, a visit may be made to the neighbourhood of the Heavenly Waters (Geuk Soo) of Asia, where, generally from 1st July to 30th October, there is a large concourse of Mussulman visitors of both sexes.

The Traveller can go by a steamer in the evening to the Prince's Islands, in the Sea of Marmora, delightful spots, frequented in summer by the ton of Pera society. At Halki the best Hotel is the Hotel d'Orient; and at the neighbouring island, Prinkipo, Gleacomis is good although dear. The college at Halki, and the grave of Sir E. Barton, the first English Ambassador, adjacent to it, are both entire. The Monasteries at Prinkipo are also interesting.

SERAGLIO.—On the eastern promontory stands (what remains of the palace, which was destroyed by fire in 1865) the palace and gardens of the Seraglio, which cover one of the seven hills. The Imperial palace was enclosed with lofty walls, and the whole space covered with suites of apartments, mosques, baths, gardens, and cypress groves. So many glittering domes, rearing their lofty heads above the verdant foliage and painted terraces, produce at a distance a very beautiful effect. The principal entrance, at a part which escaped the fire, is on the west, through the Babi-hoomyoon, or Sublime Porte, which is built of marble, and gives the Turkish Government its official designation. Within is the first court, which contains the Mint and the Vizier's divan; opposite is the Babi-i-Salem, or Gate of Health, which leads to the second court, where is the Audience Chamber, in which Foreign Ambassadors were received by the Sultan in person. In this chamber is the Throne, which resembles a large four-post bed. The gate which terminates the second court is called Babi-i-Saadet, or the Gate of Happiness.

THE MOSQUES, — There are fourteen Imperial Mosques; sixty ordinary mosques, varying in size and beauty; and two hundred and more inferior mosques and mesjids; which latter are only distinguished as being places of worship, by having little minarets or towers contiguous to them. Of the mosques, the first place, both for magnificence and elegance of architecture, is due to the Church of Santa Sophia, situated near the principal gate of the Seraglio. It was dedicated, A.D. 360, to "Holy Wisdom," (or Santa Sophia), by Constantius II the son of Constantine the Great; and was rebuilt 532-7, by Justinian. Among the numerous pillars which adorn this mosque, are six of green jasper which once supported the famous Temple of Diana at Ephesus; and eight of porphyry, that had been placed by Aurelian in the Temple of the Sun at Rome, but were removed hither by Constantine. The visitor should ascend the stairs and go up to the gallery, whence the view is exceedingly fine. The immense size of the building,—the stupendous concave of the Dome which is adorned with mosaic work—the magnificence of the columns and varieties of marble—the singular manner in which it is illuminated with globes of crystal and lamps of coloured glass, and ornamented with ostrich eggs, &c., produce a striking effect. You observe the congregation of believers at prayers, with their faces towards Mecca. The Dar el Fanoom (where the Chambers meet) is near St. Sophia.

The most interesting mosques after St. Sophia are—the Ahmedieh, the Mohammedieh, the Sulemanieh, the Bayezidieh, the Osmanieh, and the turbé of Sultan Soliman, and the tomb of Ahmed.

1. The Ahmedieh, on the At Meidan (built 16[illegible] by Achmet or Ahmed I.), has six elegant minarets. Dome supported by four enormous pillars.

2. Mohammedieh is an immense mosque. Has a vast dome, four half cupolas, and two minarets. Interior has three naves, very simple, but grand. Contains a hospital and other establishments.

3. Suleimanieh—near the Old Serai, on the third hill—has four minarets, a great dome, and a number of little domes. Interior has three naves, and two enormous columns of Egyptian granite. Cupola 17 feet higher than that of St. Sophia. The Mihrab and pulpit are beautifully worked. Tomb of Sultan Soliman, splendidly adorned with lustres, porcelain, &c. Schools, libraries, and charitable institutions within the enclosure.

4. Bayezidieh, on the great square of Bajazet. Two minarets. Great gate is of marble, cut like stalactites. One great nave; two side naves.

5. Osmanieh, on the second hill, has two minarets, and contains a large red porphyry sarcophagus, considered the tomb of Constantine.

Every mosque has, in general, a large area in front, surrounded by a lofty colonnade of marble, with gates of wrought brass, and in the centre a fountain of polished marble. Adjoining each is the sepulchral chapel of its founder, where his remains are deposited. Some of these Tombs, in which the sultans, viziers, and great personages repose, are exceedingly good. In looking through the grated windows of these, the coffins, surmounted by shawls and turbans, and slightly elevated from the floor, with little lamps continually burning, and immense wax torches lighted on particular occasions, strike the eye with peculiar effect. The Tomb of Sultan Mahmoud is a beautiful building, entirely composed of white marble, and only recently erected. The room is like a large saloon, well fitted up and carpeted; in the middle is the coffin or catafalque, surrounded by railings of mother-of-pearl, and covered with red velvet richly embroidered in gold. Crowds of women with their yashmacs, and men in various costumes are to be seen at prayers. This is the most handsome tomb in the city.

The Minarets form one of the most pleasing and striking features in the architecture of Constantinople. Near the summit of these slender towers there is a little gallery, from which, at the five appointed times in the four-and-twenty hours, the Muezzin calls the Mahometans to prayer. Some of the grand mosques have two, others four, and one has even six of these minarets.

Fountains.—After the mosques, the public fountains are among the chief ornaments of this remarkable city. Some of these, indeed, with their marble fronts, elaborate Arabesque ornaments, and Chinese-like roofs, are most beautiful objects. Their number exceeds 120. They stand by every mosque—for before a Turk prostrates himself in prayer he must perform his ablutions. The supply is brought from artificial lakes near the forest of Belgrade, about twelve miles from the city; by means of subterranean aqueducts, and souterazi, or hydraulic pyramids, which latter are placed at regular distances, and ingeniously contrived to overcome the inequalities of surface presented by the country.

The Bazaars, or Bezestens, where all the business of Constantinople is transacted, are extensive and numerous, and essentially Oriental. They consist of lofty cloisters or corridors built of stone, and lighted by domes, which are admirably adapted for the climate, and in summer afford a pleasant retreat. Every trade has its particular quarter: and each dealer has a small shop in front, with a room behind for his wares. In one street nothing is to be seen but arms of different kinds; another is filled with jewels, diamonds and precious stones; some are lined with India stuffs, cashmeres, with brocade of silver and gold, &c; while numbers of streets are occupied by shoe makers, furriers, pipe makers, cooks, or confectioners, each being confined to a distinct district. The different trades are also appropriated to different nations, and each has the proper costume of his respective country; as the Turks, with their immense rolled turbans; the Persians with their high sheep-skin conical caps. No spot in the world can boast of such an accumulation of valuable merchandise as the great Bazaars of Constantinople. They are perfect thoroughfares for horses, as well as for foot passengers. Not the least singular attraction are the Turkish women in their ferijee, or folding mantles, peeping through their yashmac, or veil.

Dancing Dervishes.—The Mevlevee (or Dancing Dervishes,) have service in their Convent near the Top-kapu Gate every Wednesday, and at Cassim Pasha every Sunday at 2 o'clock. There are about twenty performers, with high, round, felt caps, and brown mantles. At a given signal they all fall flat on their faces, and rise and walk slowly round and round with their arms folded, bowing and turning slowly several times. They then cast off their mantles and appear in a species of long, full, bell-shaped petticoats, and jackets; their feet bare, and one after the other begin to spin; revolving, dancing or turning, for fifteen minutes with extraordinary velocity.

A Han or Khan is a square surrounded by buildings with galleries all round, a tree or two in the middle, and a fountain or coffee-house in the corner. There are nearly two hundred of these places in Constantinople for the accommodation of merchants arriving by caravans. No charge is made for their use; but the rooms are entirely unfurnished, so that the occupier must bring his mattress, his little carpet, and such humble articles of cookery as he may require.

Roman and other Antiquities.—1 Several are in the Hippodrome or Horse-square, called by the Turks, At Meidan; which faces the Mosque of Sultan Achmet, (not far from that of Sta. Sophia), and is a space about 300 yards by 150 ft., gradually raised 15 ft. above its former level. It contains an Obelisk from Thebes, of rose coloured granite, 110 ft. high, transported hither by Theodosius the Great, A.D. 390-5, and showing traces of bas-reliefs of that date and of Egyptian hieroglyphs 30 centuries old. Here also are the broken Pyramid of Constantine Porphyrogenitus; and the Brass Pillar (a poor looking thing) only 7ft. high, of what was the tripod at the Temple of Delphi, made of metal taken from the Persians at the Battle of Platæa. This tripod consisted of three twisted serpents, till the top was cut down by Mahomet II., at the taking of the city. Opposite the Mosque is an old Plane Tree, on which Sultan Mahmoud hung the Janissaries.

2. The Porphyry Pillar of Constantine the Great, called "Djemberli Tasch," or the Hooped (not the Burnt) Stone, 70 ft. high, 33 ft round.

3. Column of Arcadius and Eudoxia, of which only the pedestal is left.

4. Column of Marcian, called the "Kiss Tasch," or Maiden Stone; placed here by the Empress Pulcheria, the Maiden wife of Marcian.

5. Aqueduct of Valens, or "Bosdoghan Kemeri," a fine Roman work, on arches built about A.D. 370, across the hollow between the third & fourth hills.

6 Boucolean Palace of Theodosius, II.,—some remains only.

7. Cisterns of Philoxene, called "Bin Birdirek" or "1001 columns," a subterranean work near the Hippodrome, supported on about 424 marble pillars. People have met with accidents in exploring it. Another Cistern rests on 336 pillars. The Palace of Belisarius is near the Mosque of Sultan Osman.

Broussa, or Prusa. — Population about 60,000 — HOTELS:—

HOTEL D'OLYMPE, well situated and comfortable.

STORKS, clean, comfortable, and moderate.

Broussa,—the ancient Prusa ad Olympum, in Bithynia, Asia Minor, and the seat of the Turkish Sovereigns before they took Adrianople, — is brought into easy reach of all travellers to the East, by the establishment of a line of steamers from Stamboul, which make the trip in about six hours to Moudania, (its port,) where horses and arabas are always to be had, with which they arrive here the same evening; and Ghemlek in eight hours: from the latter a good road has been constructed to Broussa. It is as celebrated for the beauty of its position, at the foot of Mount Olympus, as it has always been famous for its hot sulphur and chalybeate Baths, which are much resorted to by the natives and residents at Stamboul, but have not yet attracted sufficient attention in England. The invalid will here find three Hotels where every comfort may be had, and especially in that lately erected close to the baths, in a most picturesque locality. The bazaars of Broussa are worth notice. The place is celebrated for its silk; beautiful tissues of this material can be procured at reasonable prices in the bazaar. The traveller is recommended to ascend Mount Olympus, 8 miles distant, the view from the summit being exceedingly beautiful, and amply repaying the fatigue of the journey up. Homer's Olympus is in Thessaly.

Broussa has a post to and from Constantinople twice weekly; it is also connected with the capital by telegraph. Travellers are recommended not to visit the city during the hot season. The wine cellars—natural caves under Mount Olympus—of Mr. Falkheisen (a Swiss) are worth a visit. The delicious flavour of Broussa wine is well known.

The traveller should bring sovereigns with him, as the coin most in repute.

H. B. M.'s VICE-CONSUL—W. Gilbertson, Esq.

Scutari.—It is a mile and a half across the Bosphorus from Galata to Scutari, which is situated on a sloping ground, and has a very picturesque appearance, from the mixture of trees, houses, mosques, and minarets, and is the most Oriental part of Constantinople. It usually serves as a rendezvous and an emporium to the caravans of Asia. The barracks used as the English military hospital during the Crimean war, the scene of Miss Nightingale's memorable labours, in ministering to our sick and wounded soldiers, is situated at Scutari and is well deserving of a visit. Steamers cross the Bosphorus every hour to Scutari and Kadi-Kiou. Scutari contains very extensive burying grounds, which are the handsomest in Turkey. These cemeteries extend for miles on the East and South of the town, towards the sea. Above these is the hill of Bulgariu, from which there is the finest panorama of Constantinople, and over the ridge of hills rolls the Black Sea; Therapia and Buyukdéré on the Bosphorus: the castles of Europe and Asia, the Golden Horn. It is the ancient Chrysopolis, where Constantine defeated his rival, Licinius, A.D. 325.

H. B. M.'s CONSUL.—W. Green, Esq.

Besika Bay, at Eski Stamboul, 20 m. from the mouth of the Dardanelles, 160 m. from Constantinople; near Tenedos, and 8 m. from Bernabashi, the site of Troy, where Dr. Schliemann is making excavations. Mount Ida is seen, 5760 feet high.

THE LEVANT.

(Chiefly in Asia Minor, belonging to Turkey.)

Smyrna.—Stat.—Pop. about 150,000.

HOTELS:—

HOTAL DES DEUX ARGUSTES (MILLE); HERBERT; HOTEL MULLER; HOTEL DE FRANCE.

RESTAURANT.—A good one, opposite Café Paolo.

There are European and Greek CASINOS with Reading, Billiard, and Ball-rooms. Opera-house for Italian opera and comedy; Armenian and some small theatres for occasional Italian and Greek comedy. Café Chantant, on the English Quay.

LIBRARY.—Librarie Internationale.

The second city, in Turkey, and the great port of Asia Minor, with a population including 60,000 Turks, 90,000 Greeks, 10,000 Jews, 8000 Armenians, 10,000 Levantines and Europeans, &c. The Byzantine Castle is on the site of the Acropolis, and has in it many remains; the corner nearest the city is Cyclopean, and the further walls were built by Lysander. The antiquities remaining in Smyrna except the "burnt columns," are scattered. The Frank, Greek, and Armenian quarters are well built. The Turkish and Jewish towns and bazaars are extensive and picturesque; and the city, with its strings of camels and various populations, presents constant scenes of interest. There are English college for boys; Deaconesses Institution for English and other girls; Colleges for the various denominations; English and other hospitals.

English and other Masonic lodges; English Jockey Club, with Spring and Autumn races; Turkish baths. There are many warehouses for Turkey carpets and other local manufactures. Smyrna opium is grown at Kara Hissar, Amasia and Angora up the country. Turkey rhubarb really comes from China, the country of its growth.

Smyrna claims to be the birth-place of Homer. Here Polycarp was martyred A.D. 169. Patmos, where St. John wrote the Revelation, lies in the direction of Rhodes. The district is very rich in archaic remains. Among rock-cut monuments of Assyrian character are the Pseudo-Sesostris, the Niobe, mentioned below, and a colossal head outside the Caravan Bridge. Smyrna is a place for numismatists and coin forgers. The traveller must be on his guard against the latter. There are but few valuable collections; those of Messrs. James Whittall and Alfred J. Lawson being the most interesting.

Smyrna is a steam and telegraph centre for the whole Levant; and, on account of the fruit crops, has numerous steamers to Liverpool and London. (See Alphabetical List and Advertisements.) For the interior, there are two stations, one at the northern extremity of the town for the Aidin Railway; and the other built on the site of the old calico printing establishment, called by the Turks Basmakbané, near the centre of the town, for the Smyrna and Cassaba Railway. From Smyrna, one of the Seven Churches, five others are accessible by rail (as below); the seventh, Laodicea, now called Eske Hissar, is about 50 miles from Philadelphia.

Excursions can be made to the Baths of Diana; the Lake of Tantalus; the Cyclopean cities of Sipylus and Nymphæum; the rock-cut Niobe, near Magnesia; Pseudo Sesostris, near Ninfi or Nymphi (carved figures supposed to be Hittite; the cave and Chair of Homer; the Baths of Agamemnon, (sulphureous); the Sepulchres and remains at Boornabat, Boojah, and Karatash (a bathing-place on the bay). In the summer, the wealthy retire to Boudja, Bournabat, Narlikoi Hadjelar, Bournarbachi, Cordelio, Boldjah, and Sevdikoi, to all of which the railway affords easy access. M. Cousenery's silk filature is a large work.

N.B.—The environs are unsafe for walking, unless armed or with a party.

H.B.M.'s Consul—G. Dennis, Esq.

American Consul.—E. Smithers, Esq.

Consular Chaplain—Rev. J. Dombrain, M.A., who is also incumbent of St. Mary Magdalene, Boornabat, and minister of the British School Chapel in Smyrna.

Religious Services—in English, French, German, etc., at the respective churches and chapels. Smyrna is a principal station of the Church and Jewish missionaries.

Hospital—J. McGraith, Esq., R.N., M.D., F.R.C.S., Consular Surgeon and Surgeon to the English hospital. Drs. Echstoff, Chassand, and Matthias

English Chemists—Mr. Craiths & Mr. F. Pertuis.

Newspapers—In French Greek and Armenian.

Booksellers.—Castelan (Guide books, Maps, & c.) and Werth, German bookseller.

Bankers—Imperial Bank; Mr. R. Van Lennep, (circular notes).

Collector of Antiquities—Mr. F. W. Spiegelthal, Swedish and Norwegian Consulate.

Solicitors—Mr. Roussi, Mr. Correr.

Tailors—Watkins, and Costi Mirale.

Photographers.—Abdullah Frères.

Post Office.—Postmaster,————. Postage to U. Kingdom, 2½d. for ½ oz. Cards 1d. Money Orders, See p. 64.

Telegram to United Kingdom, 10½d. a word.

Conveyances—Boats, carriages, horses, and donkeys, can be hired. Conveyances run to the railway stations of Boornabat and Boudjah, or Boojah, and to the town stations.

Steamers to London, Liverpool, Marseilles, Trieste, Athens, Constantinople, Alexandria, Cyprus, and to most parts of the Mediterranean, Levant, Archipelago, and Black Sea.

Railways—The Ottoman Line (see p. 292) conveys passengers to Boudja, Seidekeuy, Develekeuy (for the Island of Samos), Turbali (with omnibus to Bainder, and post to Endemish), Jelad Caliveh (with post over Saladin to Aidin), Ayasoulouk, for the ruins of Ephesus, Axizieh, and Aidin. The Smyrna and Cassaba Line (see page 293) to Boornabat Cordelio, Menemen (for the ancient cities of Fogia, Pergamos, Avealy, and Edremid), Magnesia (for Thyatira), Cassaba, Sardis, and Alascheir, for Philadelphia.

Aidin.—Stat.—Pop. 50,000, mostly Turks. No hotel.—There is a new Locanda or Inn, kept by a Greek,—very dear. Travellers can get good accommodation by applying to the Railway Agency. There are Turkish khans.

This bustling and picturesque city, 81 miles from Smyrna, near the Mæander, abounds with fine fragments of the ancient city of Tralles, particularly the Uch Gueux, or Three Eyes, on the hill near the house of Dr. La Chapelle. The Austrian Consul and Greek apothecary have small collections of antiques. It is a great cotton centre. An extension of the rail is projected up the Mæander to Seraikeui.

English Con. Agent.—J. Eumorfopulo, Esq.

Conveyances.—Post-horses to Sultan Hissar, Nasli, Demislu, and the interior.

Bainder.—Pop. 15,000.—No hotel.—For accommodation apply to the Railway Agency.

A large Turkish town, 83 miles from Smyrna, reached by railway to Toorbalu, and post-horses.

Boudja, or Boojah.—Stat.—Pop. 4000.—Hotels:—

Manoly's and Alexander's.

A summer town, 5 miles from Smyrna, with a few English residences, English, Catholic, and Greek churches, English lady's school. It is reached by railway, viâ Paradise, omnibus, hired carriages, or donkey. It is cool in summer time, and free from mosquitoes. On the plain are fine drives, and the Grand Stand and course of the Smyrna Jockey club, where the Spring and Autumn races are run. The Sultan's Plate is run for in Autumn. There are good pic-nic places, particularly at Homer's Cave on the Meles, near Great Paradise. There is a branch line from Paradise to Seidikeuy.

CHURCH SERVICE.—Rev. J. T. Wolters

Boornabat.—Stat.—Pop. 13,000.—The small hotel of Petraki, and likewise another.

This is a cool summer retreat, on the Cassaba branch railway, 5 miles from Smyrna, with many good English residences, including the Villas of Mr. Whittall, visited by the late Sultan in 1863, a handsome English church, built by Mr. Whittall, and the English college of Mr. Turrell. There are ancient remains in the mosque and cemeteries. A good turnpike road from Smyrna is planted with trees; and omnibuses, carriages, and donkeys, can be hired.

Cassaba.—Stat.—Pop. 12,000.

A large town on the Smyrna and Alascheir railway, carrying on a considerable trade. It is followed by the Station for Sardis and Philadelphia, two of the SEVEN CHURCHES, 25 miles and 47 miles distant; a third, Laodicea, is 50 miles from Philadelphia.

Cordelio.—Stat.

A pleasure village and bathing place, six miles from Smyrna, said to derive its name from Richard Cœur de Lion.

ENGLISH CON. AGENT.—J. Montesanto.

Endemish, or Odemish.—Pop. 10,000—No hotel. Apply to the Railway Agent.

A Turkish town at the foot of Mount Tmolus, 10 miles from Smyrna, reached by post-horses from Turbali Station, having a few remains of antiquity. The ruins of Hypæpa on the pass to Sardis, are near.

Ephesus, or Ayasoulouk.—Stat.—Pop. 500.

Refreshment Room at the Station, kept by an Englishman; comfortable accommodation; horses can be hired. The ruins are ¼ mile to 1 mile distant.

Special Trains from Smyrna may be hired.

This is the ancient metropolis of Ionia, the birthplace of Diana, the sacred city of Pagans and Christians, and a capital of the Saracenic Sultans. Mr. Falkener's fine work on Ephesus, Mr. Hyde Clarke's guide and plan, the views of Mr. Svoboda and the Admiralty's plan, may be had of Smyrna. The Ruins are spread over a wide district, in which are pointed out the Cyclopean city of the Amazons, the refuge of Latona, and birthplace of Apollo and Diana; the place of metamorphosis of Syrinx into a reed; the lurking place of Pan, the asylum of Apollo on Mount Solmissus, the deathplace of Orion at Ortygia, the Panionium under mount Mycale: the Temple of Diana "of the Ephesians," one of the Seven Wonders of the world, built in Alexander's time, remains of which discovered by Mr. J. Wood, are now in the British museum; the theatres; the so-called prison of St. Paul and other sites connected with the apostle; the tombs of St. John, the Virgin Mary, St. Timothy, and Mary Magdalen; the school of Tyrannus, the baptistery of St. John; the portico of the Agora, where Justin Martyr disputed with Tryphon the Jew; the Cave of the 7 Sleepers; the so-called Mosque of sultan Selim.

The Gymnasia are among the most remarkable remains. The great Mosque is a fine example of Saracenic architecture. Among names connected with Ephesus, not already mentioned, are Bacchus, Homer (by some writers reputed to be born here), Crœsus, Artemisia, queen of Caria, Alcibi Apelles the painter (born here), St. Onesipho St Priscilla, St. Tychicus, St. Trophimus, Ju the Emperor. Tamerlane, and Sultan Soliman. council of Ephesus was held here. The Sultan visited it in 1863 and inaugurated new railway works. Some of the Columns of great Temple of Diana are now in the Mosque St. Sophia, Constantinople. Mr. Wood, in 1 found the remains to correspond with Pli account; the dimensions being 418 ft. by 24 with 100 columns, 56 ft. high. There are a stalactite caves in the hills. About 30 m. d was Miletus, where Mr. R. Pullan found main of a Theatre 324 ft. diameter: and per the Temple of Apollo Branchidæ, 360 ft. by 17 which had a Via Sacra to it, 3 m. long.

Pergamos, now Bergama.—Pop.—

One of the Seven Churches, 20 miles from Menemen Station. In the centre of the city is the ruined Palace of a Roman emperor; the site of the Theatre commands a view of the plain and chain of mountains; and amongst the mosques is one that from its style, is doubtless a church of the early Christians. The Amphitheatre is a fine ruin and has a river running through it. From the Castle the sea is visible.

Philadelphia or Alascheir.—Stat.—Pop. about 12,000.

One of the Seven Churches now called ALLAH SHEHR, or "city of God", 47 miles from Cassaba, beautifully situated at the foot of Mount Imolous. Its old name signifies "Love of brethren." It contains about 3000 houses, with several mosques, bazaars, baths, and khans; a liquorice and a cotton ginning factory; and some hot mineral springs in the neighbourhood. The walls of the ancient city are still standing, as well as some immense ruins of primitive Christian churches. It is the residence of a Greek bishop. The Smyrna railway ends near this interesting city. From here it is 50 miles to Laodicea, one of the Seven Churches, now called Eske Hissar.

Samos.—Pop.—Small tavern.

An island on the Coast of Asia Minor, — hours, by Steamer. It can also be reached in 7 to 10 hours, by way of Deveilkeuy Station (18 miles); thence by horse to Giagorkeui, and so by boat to Vathi; or by railway to Ephesus station (48 miles) thence by post-horses to Scala Nuova, and so by boat either to Vathi or Tigani. Vathi is a good sized town, but the chief objects of interest are at Tigani, where is the Acropolis of Samos, and near it the Temple and birthplace of Juno. Mount Kerki is 4725 feet high.

H.B.M.'s CONSUL.—G. Marc, Esq.

Sardis or Sart.—Stat.—Pop.—

One of the Seven Churches, on the Smyrna railway, 25 miles from Cassaba, formerly the capital of Lydia, the residence of Crœsus, on the gold-bearing Pactolus, the seat of a bishop, and the meeting place of many General Councils. The remains of the theatre, stadium, acropolis, temples, and necropolis (called by the Turks, Bin bir Tepe, or "1001" tombs) attest its former grandeur. The House of Crœsus is in singular preservation; two Ionic columns of the colossal Temple of Cybele are standing; and the ruins of others are near. On the defeat of Crœsus by Cyrus, 545 B.C., it passed to the Persian dynasty; after the battle of Granicus it surrendered to Alexander the Great; in the 11th century it fell into the hands of the Turks; and has since gradually fallen to decay. The Cygœan Lake and tumuli of the kings and people of Lydia are near: that of Alliyattes, the father of Crœsus, remains, as described by Herodotus 2000 years ago.

Sevdikoi.—Pop.—2,000.

Coffee-houses and a small tavern.

It is a summer residence, 10 miles from Smyrna with some English residences. It is reached by railway, horses, and donkeys.

Scala Nuova.—Pop.—10,000.

Scio or Chio.—Pop.—Only poor inns.

An Island in the Archipelago, reached by Austrian and other steamers from Smyrna weekly.

ENGLISH V. CONSUL.—D. Anamissaki.

Thyatira.

One the Seven Churches, now called AKHISSAR, 30 miles from Magnesia, and full of ancient relics, though no site can be traced. The mouths of the wells are formed by the capitals of Corinthian columns. The country is rich, cultivated, and picturesque.

Turbali or Toorbalu.—Stat.—

A fair tavern.

A small village, railway and posting station, 29 miles from Smyrna; much frequented by sporting parties, and also by travellers to Bainder, Eudemish Sardis, and Philadelphia. An extension of the rail is projected across the Kasyteer to Thyra or Tiech, under Mount Tmolus. Near are the ruins of Metropolis, an ancient city so called.

GREECE.

ACCESS.—1. The easiest way for English travellers, is through Paris and Marseilles. The steamers of the Messageries Maritimes start from Marseilles on Saturday at 5 p.m. The passage lasts five days. They put in at Naples, and 40 hours after, reach Cape Matapan; and thence, coasting the Morea to Athens, passing Egina and Salamis. The Boats of Fraissinet & Co. (p. 712), run from Marseilles to Piræus, touching at Naples. 2. From Brindisi, the Austrian Lloyd and the Italian boats run to Corfu (see Steamer List). Thence to Piræus; either round the Morea; or by Greek Steamers, (cheaper and more expeditious) up the Gulf of Lepanto, and over the Isthmus of Corinth. They are tolerably clean and good; and touch at Cephalonia, Zante, Patras. The drive across the Isthmus is charming; the road is guarded by soldiers. As no baggage is allowed in the cabin, the traveller on a flying visit (2 days) should take a handbag. 3. Through Germany or Switzerland to Trieste; thence by the Austrian Lloyd's, in 2 days to Corfu (page 451): Zante, and Patras, to Syra and to the Piræus, reaching it 4 days after. Passports are necessary.

Travelling.—November and December are cold and rainy. A correspondent (Major M.)

writing in 1875, says that he met two quiet Englishmen who had walked everywhere. Their rep was, that "Travellers all over the interior of Greece may, with a slight knowledge of modern Gr be as happy as possible. They will meet with great hospitality and kindness from the people." T will require one or two letters of introduction, to be obtained either in England or Athens. A st should be carried as a protection against dogs; and a pocket revolver (if carefully concealed) mi be useful against a solitary tramp; though, of course, it would be useless against brigands. Respe ing these, the government has lately issued a warning to Travellers. The traveller must rely u the honour of the people. There are few good roads; only one-seventh of the acreage is un cultivation: agriculture and manufactures are neglected. Corn is imported.

Reigning Sovereign —styled King of the Hellenes — Geo. ., born 1845; elected 1863. T son, the Duke of Sparta, was born 1868. Population (1879) 1,680,000; to an Area of 19400 sq. Revenue (1879), 1½ million (doubtful); Debt, 17½ millions. Army (1878), 24,000; Navy (1876), vessels, with 650 men. Commercial Marine (1876). 5440 vessels of 26,000 tons. Imports and Expo from and to England, 1½ million and 1½ millions. Railway, 7 m.; Telegraph (1874), 1800 miles. T revenue and expenditure are both doubtful; the deficit is ½ million yearly. About one-twel of the population look to government for employ.

Piræus, or Porto Leone—Stat.- Pop. (1879) 22,000. Hotels: Europe; and Allied Powers.

CHURCHES.—A new Cathedral in the Byz tine style, but with eccentric details. The cathedral, a small Byzantine building, erect with the remains of Pagan temples, conta the body of the Patriarch Gregorius Kapni ria, in Hermes street; is of the 11th centu and has some curious paintings. St. Theod is the best preserved church. The Russ church is in the Byzantine style.

The King's Palace between Mount Lycab tus, and the Acropolis, is a vast squ plastered building, in a heavy style architecture. Most of the government offi and houses are newly erected buildings. T University, built in 1837 by Mr. Hansen, a D ish architect, is a fine edifice; with a libr of 80,000 vols., and 5000 medals. staircase and grotto of Pan. The Propylœa in Pentelican marble, consists of walls, a portico and a vestibule. The Pinacotheca is thought to have been a picture gallery. Temple of Victory Apteryx, (i.e., without wings). Above all, the Parthenon, built by Pericles B.C. 444–436, much destroyed by an explosion, 1687.

The celebrated bas-reliefs of its Cella are mostly in the British Museum. East front has almost disappeared; the west side remains. Six columns are still standing entire at the Posticum. The Cella has 8 columns on the front, and 17 on the sides.

The Erechtheum, finished under Alcibiades, 407 B.C., is a long rectangle of 66 feet by 36 feet, with an Ionic portico.

II. DISTRICT SOUTH OF THE ACROPOLIS.—The Theatre of Bacchus. East of and under the Acropolis; reconstructed by the Emperor Adrian. Orchestra and Proscenium well preserved. Adrian's triumphal Arch is of white Pentelican marble, and of the Corinthian order. This was in the part of Athens renewed by Adrian, and containing the temple of Olympian Jupiter, begun by Pisistratus: 16 of its 120 cols. remain.

The Panathenaic Stadium is on the other side of the Ilissus. Length 764 feet; width 133 to 270 feet. Here the revived Olympic Games were held 1875.

III. DISTRICT N.W. OF THE ACROPOLIS—contains Tower of the Winds, anciently a kind of observatory; and has still a sundial. West of it, in the place called Πλατεια Πρυτανειου, are remains of what was probably the Prytaneum. W. of Tower of the Winds are the Temple of Minerva Archegetis, the Stoa or Porch of Adrian, and the Ὁδος Πτολεμαιων. Going E., you reach the Temple of Theseus, built 469, with 6 columns on each front, 13 on each flank, all of Pentelican marble. It is 105 ft. by 42 ft.

Areopagus, or Mars' Hill, is a steep rock between the Hill of the Nymphs and the Acropolis. Pnyx is the hill following the Areopagus S.W. Here were held the popular meetings of the Athenians; and here St. Paul preached his famous sermon.

Among other remains at Athens are: the Museum Hill, with ruined walls, cisterns, &c.; and the well-preserved tomb of Philopapos.

WALKS AND EXCURSIONS NEAR ATHENS.—These are especially the following:—1. Pentelicus; 2. Hymettus; 3. Marathon; 4. Eleusis; besides many others, including Cape Sunium.

Pentelicus, 6 or 7 hrs. It can be reached on horseback; or by carriage within 1½ hr. of the top; and is 3610 ft. high, with a noble panorama over Attica, Salamis, Ægina, Mount Parnes, Eubœa, as far as Delphi and the Archipelago.

2. Hymettus.—Six hours up, and back; and less interesting than Pentelicus. Fine view of Attica and the Gulf of Ægina. It is covered with aromatic plants, and is noted for honey.

3. Marathon.—7 hrs. (21¾ m.). By sending on a change of horses to Cephissia you can go there and back in a day. The best road is by Vrana, and past Cephissia or Kiphissia, 9½ m. The plain is 6 mls. by 3. About the middle of it, near the sea, is a tumulus (called Sono), said to be the grave of the 192 Athenians, who fell in battle 490 years B.C.

4. Eleusis, through Daphni, or Daphne, along the Sacred Way—By carriage or horse, 4 hrs. Monastery of Daphni in a charming position, near ruins of a temple of Apollo. Remains of Pelasgic walls, propylæa, &c.

ITINERARIES FROM ATHENS.—These are to Corinth, Delphi, Olympus, Patras, Sparta, Thebes, Syra, and Corfu; though none can be undertaken at present, unless you come to terms with the banditti and their employers (but see top of page 654.) The only safe trip is from ATHENS TO CORFU, (by water).—A steamer leaves the Piræus every Sunday early, for Kalamaki, in the Gulf of Egina, on the E. side of the Isthmus of Corinth, at the mouth of the old canal. Here carriages meet the boat, and drive passengers across the Isthmus in 1 hour. The road is guarded all the way by soldiers.

At New Corinth, on the W. side of the Isthmus is a small Hotel. It takes 1½ hour to ascend the famous "tower-capped Acropolis," on which are ruins of a Temple of Venus, and of Frank, Venetian, and Turkish buildings. The panorama embraces both gulfs, Delphi, Helicon, Parnassus, &c.

> "Stranger, wilt thou follow now,
> And sit with me on Acro-Corinth's brow?"—Byron.

Here Bellerophon caught his winged horse, Pegasus, drinking at the Peirene fountain. Pegasus is seen on all old coins of this decayed city. By Greek boat down the Gulf of Corinth, reaching Patras about midnight; and calling at Zante and Cephalonia. It reaches Corfu, Monday night or Tuesday morning; and makes the return trip from Corfu on Tuesday. See p. 653. For Corfu, see p. 660.

ATHENS TO CORINTH (by land,) past Megara and Kalamaki, in 8 to 10 hours, supposing the road safe. Megara, 4 hrs., has Pelasgic remains, and ruins of walls, columns, &c. From Corinth to Mycenæ, about half a day's journey of five hours; through Nemea, with ruins of a celebrated temple. Mycenæ has unique remains of the heroic ages, including the tomb of Agamemnon, discovered by Dr. Schliemann, 1876. The Gate of the Lions, and the Treasury of Atrides, stand in the great plain of Argos.

Continue through Kharvati (6 hrs. from Corinth), with ruins of the temple of Argive Juno; 1½ hour from which is Tiryns, the birth-place of Hercules, with its Cyclopean walls of enormous blocks, and other remains. Nauplia, in the Gulf of Nauplia, 3 hrs. 20 mins. from Kharvati, has an hotel, with table d'hôte. Carriages may be hired. The steamer which calls from the Piræus, goes all round the Morea. After Athens and Patras, Nauplia is the prettiest town of Greece. No monuments. Capo d'Istria was assassinated in the church of St. Spiridion. Splendid view of the Gulf of Argos or Nauplia.

Two hours from Nauplia is Argos, with 500 inhabitants. Bad khans or inns; travellers lodge in private houses. The Acropolis has a theatre cut in the rock (449 feet in diameter). From Argos you can reach, in 9 hours, Mantinea, with ruins of a theatre, and interesting as the scene of the last victory, and the death, of Epaminondas. His real tomb was on Mount Scopé, which commands a fine view of the plain of Tripolitza. Tripolitza is 2 hrs. 25 mins. from Mantinea, and has several good khans or inns; stands 2163 feet above the sea, and is chiefly a mass of ruins, though new streets are being planned. Leaving Tripolitza, you pass Tegea, with many remains of columns, temples; and, crossing the River Saranda, you come in 3¼ hours to Krya Vrysis, with other ruins; and, at the distance of 8 hrs. 30 mins. from Tripolitza, you reach Kravata. About an hour further, on a hill, with a magnificent panorama of the valley of Eurotas and the plain of Sparta is the khani of Vourlia. From hence the road, passing through a picturesque gorge, crosses the Eurotas by a bridge of one arch, and reaches Sparta (3 hrs. from Kravata), under Mount Taygetus (7900 f.). It has a broad street and fair houses; with ruins of the tomb of Leonidas, the theatre, 450 ft. in diameter, a circus, and the bridge Balyx.

You can reach Patras from Sparta, through Messene, Navarino, &c., 9 to 10 days. It can also be reached by the Austrian Lloyd boats.

Patras (in Italian Patrasso, in Greek Πατραί). —Two hotels near the port; Hotel Britannique has a table d'hôte. It is the best town of the Morea, with good streets and houses; but is unhealthy from fever in summer. Pop. (1871) 19,645) Trade in valonia, oil, and currants, of which 50,000 tons are sent yearly to England from this and other ports. Lat. of Castle 38° 14′ N., long. 21° 47′ E.

H. B. M.'s CONSUL.—T. Wood, Esq.

AMERICAN CON. AGENT—E Hancock, Esq.

Opposite is Missolonghi, where Byron died, April, 1824; in the War of Independence.

PATRAS OR CORINTH TO OLYMPIA.—Great discoveries are now in progress on the site of Olympia on the River Alpheus; where the famous Olympic Games were held in the splendid TEMPLE OF JUPITER. There is a local Museum. The valleys of the Cladeus and Erymanthus are very picturesque. Ægina has a fine khan; remains of temple; and a good modern port. Eight hours from Patras is the convent of Megaspilion, nothing but a vast cavern. In its church is a picture of the Virgin, attributed to St. Luke. Megaspilion is 14 hrs. from Olympia. On the road pass Kalavryta (7½ hrs. from Megaspilion), where you can sleep at the house of the paredros.

Chaplain at Zante, (a great market for currants, facing the mainland), Rev. L. Burne, B.A.

ATHENS TO DELPHI, by Thebes.—Passing Eleusis, you proceed, 6 hours, by rocky mountains, to Mount Œhaeron, with a view of Bœotia. In 3 hrs. you reach Thebes now an insignificant town, with few remains. In 2 hours you reach Platæa noted for the defeat of the Persians under Mardonius, and showing many vestiges of antiquity Pass Leuctra, (a tumulus where Epaminondas beat the Lacedemonians B.C. 371 (1 hour) Thespiæ (1¼ hour); to Coronea (4 hrs.), noted for the victory of Agesilaus over the Thebans, B.C. 394; and having ruins a theatre and a temple of Juno. Two hrs. from Coronæa is Livadia, near a gorge of Mt. Helicon and sulphureous springs, with a grotto, supposed to be the sanctuary of the oracle of Trophonius. In 2 hrs. you reach Chæronea, with remains of the famous marble Lion, placed on the tombs of the Thebans who fell here fighting Philip of Macedon. Other remains, a theatre cut in the rock, and an aqueduct.

Advancing to Parnassus by the valley of Cephisus, in 2 hrs. you reach Davlia, and, passing (4 hrs.) the spot where Œdipus is said to have killed Laius, you come, in 5 hrs., to Delphi (now Kastri), 9 hrs. from Chæronea, with fair accommodation. Remains of the temple of Apollo, bas-reliefs, &c. Visit the fountain of Castalia; ascend Parnassus (10 hours). It is 8,070 feet high, and commands a view over almost the whole of Greece. On the way back to Athens, the traveller may make an excursion to Thermopylæ.

PIRÆUS TO SYRA, by sea,—10 to 12 hours past Cape Sunium, Eubœa, Andros, and Tinos.

Syra, the chief Island of the Cyclades, at the centre where the different routes in the Archipelago converge, 90 hours from Trieste. See list of Steamers, for Austrian Lloyd, and French Messageries Boats. Greek steamers run between the different islands

TELEGRAM to United Kingdom, for 20 words 13s. (Submarine); 22s. (Eastern).

Syra, on the isle of Syros, built in an amphitheatre, is the second town of Greece of importance and growing daily. Pop. (1871 21,000; now about 31,000 One drachma, to land. Near the port, are the steam office, lazaretto, and principal Café, ἡ Ἑλλας. Hotel d'Angleterre; a room, 2 drachmas. If the quarantine be long, the proprietor of the hotel must be asked to send food and a bed to the lazaretto. The modern town called Hermopolis, has two principal streets, of the Merchants and of Kolus; also a theatre, casinos, market-place, the square of Otho, a new Greek cathedral, hospital, and several factories. Syra has a fine view of the Cyclades. Ceos or Zea, to the north-west is Fenelon's Island of his "Télémaque."

THE HOLY LAND.

DIRECT THROUGH BY STEAM FROM BRINDISI.

Travel is rail communication across the Continent, either through France or Germany, to Brindisi, see page 513; and steamers run direct from Brindisi to Alexandria in 75 hours. This is the shortest sea-passage to Egypt. The Continental routes join at Bologna; from which to Brindisi, the distance, is 456 miles. Time 20 h. 25 m.

At Imola is the junction for Ravenna. Other remarkable places en route are: Faenza, Rimini, Ancona, Loretto, and Bari.

Steamers.—The boats of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, carrying the Indian Mails, start regularly every Monday, for Alexandria. The Company's boats from Venice and Ancona are timed to meet the Mail boats here.

Alexandria, Cairo, &c.—See following Section,—"Egypt and Overland Routes." Should the traveller for the Holy Land get on from here to Cairo, he need not return hither, but may take the rail to Suez; thence by the Suez canal to Ismailia, and Port Said and so to Jaffa &c., as described in the next Section, (Cairo to Palestine, page 669.) If he is at Alexandria, the usual means of communication between Egypt and Syria by Austrian, French, and Russian steamers, which go on to Constantinople. The land route by Gaza is seldom followed.

Information on the Holy Land.

How to Visit Palestine.—Time of starting—December, January, and February, are the rainy months, and, as a rule, travelling at that season is attended by too many contingences to be agreeable. Consuls, Missionaries, and others, being resident in Palestine, prefer March and April to any other season. The early rains usually are over by the 10th of March. The "latter rains" are in April. Travellers, therefore, who are here between those wet periods, will usually find delightful weather. They will be free from mosquitoes, bugs, and other nuisances, which appear in swarms later in the season. Nor will they suffer from intense heat. The springs will be full of fresh water, the earth dry for camping, the nights calm and serene. Clean and agreeable weather may be relied upon almost to a certainty.

Most travellers to the East go up the Nile in December or January; and the trip instead of occupying, as formerly, from 60 to 90 days of dull useless life on a muddy river, with a crowd of dirty Arabs for society, has been reduced to twenty days by steamers, and will be still further reduced to ten or twelve days, on the completion of the railroad to Thebes.

From Egypt the traveller to the Holy Land usually embarks with the intention of landing at Jaffa, but if the wind blows from the west or south, he will be carried to Beyrout.

Jaffa has no port, but merely a roadstead, where, if the weather is calm, a landing may be effected; but some seasons not half the steamers are able to land their passengers. The writer met a man who had been carried past three times, and who assured him he was well acquainted with the sea between Alexandria and Beyrout.

Those who wish to go through the country, visiting Nazareth, Galilee, and Samaria, will find Beyrout a better place to start from than Jerusalem. Many of the Dragomans live there; an outfit is more easily obtained there, and at much cheaper rates. All requisites for tent life—all provisions come by sea to Palestine, and Beyrout is the principal port at the head of the Mediterranean; while all supplies purchased at Jerusalem are transported from Jaffa. The mules and horses are chiefly owned in Beyrout. A saving of from 20 to 30 per cent may be made by taking a dragoman at Beyrout instead of making the contract at Alexandria, Jaffa, or Jerusalem. More than this, the interest which travellers take in visiting Bible lands increase as you go south. Starting from Beyrout, you have Tyre and Sidon, the land of the Phœnicians,—older even than Egypt; Tyre was the coloniser of nations—the mother of Rome and Carthage. Nazareth was the childhood home of Jesus. The next point is the Sea of Galilee and surrounding country, where he accomplished most of his life's work. Then you come to a region full of historic interest, where you may trace the great military movements of generals whose campaigns are recorded in the Bible; where the hosts of Babylon, Nineveh, Egypt, Damascus and Israel have met in battle array. Every day's journey brings one to old historic scenes, the interest deepening all the way to Jerusalem, and culminating at Olivet and Gethsemane.

Those travellers who do not intend to journey through the country, will of course land at Jaffa. It must be borne in mind that there are no carriage roads in Palestine, but only rocky ways; travelling is still of a very primitive kind, and much as Abraham travelled 3,800 years ago with horses and donkeys. One gentleman at Jaffa owns a light two-wheeled carriage and a cart, and he can drive out some four or five miles over the plain of Sharon; but apart from these there is not another wheeled vehicle in the country, not even a wheelbarrow. There is a prejudice against the use of vehicles.

When the late Sultan was at Paris during the Exposition of 1867, it is reported that Louis Napoleon said to him, "Why don't you have roads in your country?" adding—"The Empress wishes much to visit Jerusalem."

"There shall be a road in one year from this time, from Jaffa to Jerusalem," was the reply of the Sultan; which at least is the popular account of what was said: at any rate there came an order from the Sublime Porte to construct this road. The people of the country were summoned, and a tolerably wide and smooth road was completed by forced labour 1868. It is probable that those who desire to make a pilgrimage to Jerusalem may do so in a few years, without fatigue, and at small expense. They may even now occasionally reach it in a diligence, find board in the hotel, obtain horses for about four shillings a day, and thus easily visit all the places of interest within a day of the city To go to the Jordan, a tent for one night is needed. If Hebron be visited, a bed, and provisions for supper and breakfast, is all that is needful. There is a government building, just outside the town, where shelter can be found. If visitors do not intend to go throughout the country, they may visit Jerusalem at any season of the year, and will find good accomodation.

Pleasant excursions can be made to Bethlehem, Mizpah, Bethel, and the cave of Adullam, returning at night. A visit to the Jordan and Dead Sea will involve only one night of tent life and can be made at any season.

Before making a contract to go through the country, travellers should think over what they can bear of fatigue, of long days in the saddle, and of two or three weeks of continuous hardships. Ladies especially who intend making this tour would do well to practice beforehand; riding up and down the steepest hills and rockiest declivities in their neighbourhood; though it is less the steepness of hills or the rocks on the road, than the continuous wear and tear of seven to nine hours a-day in the saddle. Robust constitutions and habituated riders can bear it; but a majority of people would have to summon all their power of endurance to go through it without breaking down.

DRAGOMAN.—A dragoman is a contractor who provides an outfit, tents, horses, food, protection, servants, &c., at a specified rate per day, and for a specified number of days. They swarm at Alexandria and Cairo. They lie in wait for travellers at Jaffa and Beyrout, but are most plentiful in Egypt. They are exceedingly anxious to make contracts in Egypt to commence the expedition at Jaffa. The traveller is informed that horses and mules cannot be obtained at Jerusalem or Beyrout, that dragomen in these places will charge twice or thrice as much, as they—assuming that travellers are ignorant of all things relating to such matters; as of the time required, of the cost. They will gravely inform him that the journey cannot possibly be made short of thirty five to forty days, and at a rate not less than from thirty to forty shillings a-day for each person, if the party number six persons.

If a traveller cares at all for his comfort, his convenience and his purse, let him make no contract except at Jerusalem or Beyrout. It is best to make a contract for fifteen or twenty days, with a clause which will enable you to extend the time to any number of days that may be desired.

Dragomans reap their harvest during the travellers' season, and some of them obtain great prices for their services and outfits. One of the best dragoman in Syria conducted a party of eight through the country this year, at a guinea a-day each person; another dragoman obtained two guineas each person for a party of five.

It may seem a great price to pay, the sum of one guinea a-day; but you have hotel fare: dragomen, with as much variety as is to be obtained there. Again, it requires a small army to take charge of some half-dozen people—at least seven men and twenty-two horses and mules. In making a contract with the dragoman, it will not be amiss to insert a specification, that the outfit, horses, saddles, &c., shall be perfectly satisfactory, and then, before starting on a journey, test the animals provided.

The Alexandria steamers call first at Jaffa, the ancient Joppa, situated on a conically shaped promontory, washed on three sides by the sea, and rising 150 feet above it.

BRITISH CONSULAR AGENT—H. Amzalak, Esq.
AMERICAN CONSULAR AGENT—E. Hardeck, Esq.

The port is small, and, even if cleared, could only hold 20 vessels of 300 tons. In winter or early spring you cannot count on being able to land or embark here because of the surf. At present ships anchor for the most part in the roadstead, a league distant and insecure. Jaffa, seen at some remoteness, presents a picturesque appearance with its domes, its minarets, and its palms, rising like an amphitheatre from the sea. Nothing can be finer, especially than the luxuriant growth of its gardens, its orange trees, bearing immense golden fruit, and its hedges of nopals. The town, unusual in the East, is an assemblage of clean houses, poor bazaars, and dirty tortuous lanes. It lives, in a great measure, on the passage of pilgrims to Jerusalem. The Latin convent is a vast structure of bizarre architecture, answering the purpose of a vast hostelry, to accommodate the pilgrims and their steeds. Fine view of the town and bay from the convent terrace.

Jaffa has not much to attract, but its historical associations are of high interest. It is said to have been built by a son of Noah; the ark is reported to have been constructed here; Jonas embarked from this port on his memorable journey; the cedars of Lebanon, sent to Solomon for the temple, by Hiram, king of Tyre, were landed here; and St. Peter, who lodged here with one Simon the Tanner, raised to life the widow Tabitha, and taught the faith to Cornelius the centurion.

Jaffa also witnessed much fighting in the time of the Crusades. It was taken by Richard Cœur de Lion, and again by St. Louis; and, in its hospitals, Bonaparte is said to have poisoned the plague-stricken whom he could not take with him. (A story denied by Thiers.)

From Jaffa up to Jerusalem, passing by Ramleh and Abou Gosh, is commonly travelled on horseback, as there is no road; but a railway is in progress. To Ramleh, three hours, over the plain of Sharon, once so renowned for fertility and now a wilderness; for Isaiah said:

"Shafon has become as a desert." All of a sudden from Ramleh is the Tower of the Forty Martyrs an edifice of doubtful origin, supposed to be a church erected by the Empress Helena.

Ramleh is, for the most part, a heap of ruins, having been taken and sacked several times by Crusaders and Mussulmans; yet Edrisi calls it, with Jerusalem, one of the most important towns of Palestine. Here again the words of Isaiah apply: "your land is desert, your cities are consumed by fire, strangers eat up your country before your face." Tradition represents Ramleh as the ancient Arimathea. This has been denied, but not disproved, by Dr. Robinson. In the midst of its heap of ruins, rises the vast palatial Latin Convent, which has not enjoyed so high a reputation for hospitality as many in the Holy Land.

Leaving Ramleh you reach some mountain passes, and pass a ruined village, Latroun, said to be the birthplace of the good thief of Calvary. Still continuing among rock ravines, you arrive at Kuryet et Enab, a village called by the Christians, Jeremiah, said to be on the site of Anathoth, where the prophet Jeremiah was born. The only interesting object which it has to shew is a fine ruined Church of Minorites, of the date of the Crusades. The prophecies of Jeremiah have been verified in the case of this place, if it be Anathoth; for it has been lately the headquarters of Aban Goah, the greatest robber-chief of Palestine, who levied black mail on all travellers to Jerusalem by this route. This worthy had at his command 6000 men, and dwelt in a house like a castle, forming a counterpart to the baronial residences of the Middle Ages.

In the midst of a wild and desolate tract is the little valley of Terebinthe, forming an oasis of orange and of fig trees in the surrounding desolation. Here you cross the little brook, said to mark the scene of David's duel with Goliath: soon after you see the Castle of the Maccabees, and then you come to a ridge, and the guide cries out "Jerusalem." Rising in the midst of a wild hilly country the grey walls, towers, and domes of the Holy City, stand out clear against the sky, with an aspect appropriate to the desolation around. Yet its edifices present an imposing appearance when viewed from a distance. The special characteristic is the pale tint cast over the whole scenery of the place. Ramparts, towers, mosques, and terraces, all are of a faded white, with no relief, not even in the ground which offers the same colouring; no stir, no noise, all is as still as the tomb. The only living things are an occasional Bedouin in his monumental costume, or a woman drawing water at the well or a pilgrim telling his beads; so that the words of Jeremiah come up forcibly to the mind: "How doth the city sit desolate, solitary, that was full of people! how is she become a widow!".

JERUSALEM can be reached by Vienna, and Constantinople in less than 14 days. From Marseilles by steamer to Alexandria and Jaffa, in less than 10 days. TELEGRAM to United Kingdom, for 20 words, 17s. 4d. (Submarine); 7s. 8d. (Eastern).

As to accommodation for the pilgrim, one of the best and most hospitable places is the Casa Nuova a dependance of the Franciscan Convent. It has handsome airy rooms, with a terrace. The Greek Christians have several convents; and the Armenians the richest monastery in the East. There are two large Hotels where board can be obtained at cheap rates; also the Russian convent and Prussian Hospice.

H. B. M.'s CONSUL—N. T. Moore, Esq.

AMERICAN CONSUL—F. De Hass, Esq.

ENGLISH HOSPITAL—Physician, Dr. Chaplin.

Population about 28,000(?); increased by 10,000 or one at Holy Week. In the time of Titus, it was said to be one million. About one third are Mussulmans; the rest are Jews, and Christians, mostly of the Greek rite. There are 20 convents and Churches in the city. The Jews occupy the lower part of the town, between the ancient Temple and part of Mount Zion enclosed within the ramparts. The Greek Christians are for the most part Arabs, under a patriarch. The Armenians have a splendid church, ornamented with mosaics, tapestry, and bronzes. They are also under a Patriarch. The Catholics live for the most part near the Latin Convent; which has about 40 or 50 monks, chiefly Spaniards or Italians. The Guardian Procureur and Vicar, the heads of the establishment, govern the order in Palestine, Syria, and Egypt. The Protestants have a Bishop, (Right Rev. Dr. Barclay), with a staff of clergy, a Church, hospital and house of industry. Lat. 31° 4′ N., long. 35° 13′ E.; 2535 ft. above the Mediterranean, 3825 ft. above the Dead Sea; mean temp. 48° (Jan.) to 78° (July).

It would be futile to attempt even a compendious sketch of the history of Zion in these pages. Its early times are familiar to us in the nursery, from the days of Joshua and the Jebusites to the episode of its siege under Titus. The City of "Vision of Peace," as its name denotes, is said to have been founded before the time of Abraham. It is called the most ancient of cities in the Icelandic sagas, and the "earth's navel" by the Greek monks. The reign of David and Solomon; the sieges of Egyptian, Assyrian, and Babylonian hosts; the Greek conquest; the heroism of the Maccabees; the events of the Roman dominion; our Saviour's appearance; the siege of Titus; the Crusades, and its capture by Godfrey of Bouillon; Richard Cœur de Lion, and Saladin; these, and all subsequent pages are unrolled before us; till we come to prophecy and the day announced when the last great battle shall be fought in the vale of Jehosaphat.

The streets are only half paved, and the houses have the look of fortresses; towards the street they present nothing but a blank wall, and they are surmounted in many cases by a dome. The bazaars are poor and badly supplied. The only trade of the city is crosses and beads for pilgrims.

The most important points to visit are—1 The Via Dolorosa. 2 The Holy Sepulchre. 3. The Mosque of Omar on Mount Moriah, the site of the Temple of Solomon. 4. The source of Siloe. 5. The Valley of Jehosaphat. 6. Mount of Olives 7. The Grotto of Gethsemane. 8. The Mosque on Mount Zion, containing the tomb of David.

Passing down the Via Dolorosa, six legendary Stations are pointed out. (1.) Where Christ is said to have pronounced the words "Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me." (2.) Where the Virgin is said to have fainted on meeting her son. (3.) At a truncated column where Jesus, falling under the Cross, they called on Simon of Cyrene to help him. (4.) The house of Lazarus, then that of Dives. (5.) Then a poor building said to be on the site of that from which the pious woman, Saint Veronica, a name invented for that purpose, issued to wipe the sweat and blood from the face of the Saviour. (6.) The Gate of Judgment, formerly marking the limits of the town and the Calvary itself, now enclosed within the Church of the Holy Sepulchre.

Critics have wrangled and cavilled about the last site, but it is certain that the great events of the Passion have taken place nearly on the spot assigned to them. No wars or revolutions have been able to plane away Moriah, and Calvary, or their tenacious traditions.

2. The Church of the Holy Sepulchre does not present anything very remarkable in its exterior or interior. Fires and accidents have destroyed most traces of the splendid Church of Constantine and of the Crusades. The cupola is the only part about it that has an imposing appearance. Much scandal results from the bigotry of rival Christians in these precincts. The Greeks are accused of many encroachments of late years, and to them belongs the Chapel of the Calvary and the choir.

The Church contains the following chapels:—1. That of the Flagellation, with a pillar where our Saviour is said to have been scourged. 2. The Chapel of the Prison. 3 That supposed to be the spot where the soldiers cast lots for Christ's tunic. 4. The spot where the Empress Helena prayed while seeking the Cross. From thence 19 steps lead up to Golgotha, Calvary is 110 steps from the Holy Sepulchre. It presents a flattened summit, 47 feet long and wide, with 2 chapels, separated by an arcade. In one, a mosaic represents the place where tradition asserts that Christ was nailed to the cross; in the other is a marble slab or table pierced in such wise that you can see the holes where the 3 crosses were planted, and the split in the rock. This chapel belongs to the Greek rite. Descending from this chapel near a marble table surrounded with a balustrade, above which are many lamps, you are on the spot where our Saviour's body is said to have been embalmed after the descent from the Cross. Close at hand is the Holy Sepulchre. Under a gallery supported by 16 pillars and surmounted by a dome of which the form recalls that of the Pantheon at Rome is a white marble monument, 20 feet long, 6 wide, and 15 high, surrounded by an elegant cupola. This monument surrounds the Saviour's tomb. You ascend it by a few steps, and reach a chapel in which you behold a marble block 1½ ft. square, pointing out the spot where it is thought the Angel addressed the holy woman: "He is not here: He is risen."

Passing under a little curtain you enter the sanctuary, only large enough to contain 4 persons, having on the right the Altar of the Holy Sepulchre, with gold and silver lamps suspended above and perpetually burning. The walls are covered with greyish marble, and the ceiling is all blackened by smoke.

This venerable spot is generally filled with at least 20 pilgrims, prostrate fallen to earth, kissing the ground. The monks lead the visitors to these shrines with lighted tapers and special devotions. The different Christian rites celebrate in turn masses at the Holy Sepulchre. They are guarded and watched by Turks, who have sometimes to interfere to prevent serious collisions which have occasionally occurred at great festivals like Easter, with consequences of the most fatal kind. The Christians are strictly forbidden to enter the Mosque of Omar.

The Vale of Jehoshaphat is a dismal, dark hollow near the Mount of Offence, and a Church of the Virgin. It is watered by the Kedron, and has in its arid flanks a multitude of tombs, including those of Absalom and Zacharias. The Grotto of the Agony is still pointed out, with the spot where Judas betrayed his Master.

Gethsemane is reached by a few steps, and consists of an embrasure about 15 feet in diameter. This grotto is held in great veneration, and on the spot is a Church said to have been erected by the mother of Constantine, containing the tombs of St. Joachim, St. Ann and St. Joseph; though there is no sufficient evidence to authenticate this tradition.

Eight very ancient olives by the Grotto of the Agony have such venerable characteristics, that it is not improbable they are coeval with the time of Our Saviour. Ascending to the Mount of Olives, you pass several spots to which tradition has assigned memorable events, including the church said to mark the site of the Ascension. The view over the two mountains, Zion and Moriah, and the whole of Jerusalem from the Mount of Olives, is very striking.

Excursions.—The whole district around Jerusalem presents excursions to spots hallowed by the most venerable associations. We select in particular—1, Bethlehem. 2, The Jordan. 3, The Dead Sea.

The Jordan requires 2 days, if you prolong your journey to the Dead Sea.

Bethlehem is a charming excursion, and offers a contrast to Jerusalem; as the country you pass on the road is undulating, and though only partly cultivated, is not a desert. Every spot on the road is full of legends of the Mother and the Child. About 3¾ miles from Jerusalem is the convent of Mar Elias, with a place connected with Jesebel. Further in is the Tower of Simeon. Passing the Tomb of Rachel and the ruins of Rama, you reach Bethlehem rising like an amphitheatre on the slope of a hill. The Latin convent is like a great fortress. The church of Santa Maria di Betlemme, formerly so splendid, is now bare and unadorned, except by 40 fine old columns of the Corinthian order. The most interesting spot is the underground grottoes, with a mausoleum to the Innocents massacred by Herod. The rock is of a porous character and honeycombed in all directions: hence those who have been most sceptical have acknowledged the exactness of the Biblical description. The Grotto of the Nativity has been enlarged, and its walls disfigured by marble slabs. A circle of jasper and agate marks the spot where the infant Jesus first saw the light. The circle has the inscription:—Hic de Virgine Maria Jesus Christus natus est. This chapel belongs to the Greeks; that of the altar of the Magi to the Latins. Many sepulchres of saints are seen around, including St. Jerome, one of the oldest Fathers of the church. Bethlehem has received all kinds of gifts at the hands of kings and princes, including Baldwin I., who in 1110 established a bishopric there. Population 3000, mostly Christians. A Church Mission here.

CHURCH SERVICE.—Rev. S. Müller.

An expedition to the Jordan and Dead Sea requires more preparation, especially as the tribes of that district look upon visitors as fair game. The usual plan has been to apply to a consular agent, and to obtain an escort of a certain number of men (about 15 for 400 fr.). To obtain this a bargain must be struck.

The road to the Jordan takes you past Bethany, where a grotto is shown as the Tomb of Lazarus and what is called the house of Martha and Mary. The distance of the present village is exactly that of the ancient (15 stadia) from Jerusalem; and the Arabs, who have a retentive memory, call it El Azir.

The next point is a place called the Well of the Source of the Apostles. Advancing you reach a bare, arid, rocky country, channelled by winter torrents, covered with blocks of marble, and the horizon closed in by the mountains of Moab, with their purple and sharply defined outline.

Not long after you reach the vast plain of Jericho containing some water and verdure. Passing the mountain of the Forty Days' Fast of Our Saviour, you advance through a peaceful pastoral scene towards the Jordan.

To those who can stand a little roughing, this is a charming place for a bivouac or an encampment. You can thus obtain a complete taste of pastoral life; the same among Arabs as in the days of Abraham. The whole district of Jericho is of admirable fertility, full of balmy gardens and massive trees. Jericho is known in the Bible as the City of Palms. It was noted formerly for the balm tree noticed by Pliny for its sweet perfume; also for hennah, for olive and carob trees. Those trees are now replaced by the zakkoum, resembling the plum-tree, and shrubs such as the dorn, or the morell, &c. A pious legend represents that the roses of Jericho sprang up in the desert wherever the Virgin planted her foot.

Riha, or Jericho, resembles an Egyptian village. It is one of the poorest of villages, marked by a single palm-tree. Two hours after the valley of the Sultana fountain, the Jordan is reached, flowing among willows, varying in depth and width. The depth varies according to the season, being three feet in July, but scarcely fordable in March. In some parts the width is 140 feet, in others 60, in others 40. Near at hand are the spots where Our Saviour was baptized by St John, where Joshua led the twelve tribes into the Holy Land, and where Elijah was taken up to heaven in a chariot of fire. Opposite is Mount Nebo, where Moses after viewing the Holy Land, was buried by God. From hence to the Dead Sea is a scene of perfect desolation. Not a blade of grass, not a breath over the leaden waters of the asphalte lake, sleeping in deadly calm, like a mass of molten lead, under a scorching, glaring sun.

The Dead Sea has a length of twenty leagues (sixty miles), and its width varies from four to five leagues (twelve to fifteen miles). The taste of the water of the lake, which has been analyzed by many scientific men, is more bitter than that of saltpetre. The black stones picked up on the beach burn like phosphorus, and smell like bitumen. It is nearly 1200 feet lower than level of the Mediterranean, and is cased in by mountains 2000 to 2500 ft. high. What has been said about the absence of all animal and vegetable life on its banks, and in its waters, is perfectly correct.

The road back to Jerusalem is over a wilderness of sand and rock. The whole district is like an ocean of aridity, cut by troughs and precipitous ravines, where your horse slips at every step. Many of the hills are honeycombed by grottoes, used as retreats and refuges by early Christian anchorites.

The quickest way to reach the northern parts of Palestine, is to return from Jerusalem to Jaffa, and thence to take steamer to Acre.

From Jerusalem to Nazareth, by Acre.

The Alexandria and Constantinople steamers call at Jaffa, and take you to Acre in a few hours. There is good accommodation at the convent. Lat. of fort 32° 55′ N., long. 35° 5′ E.

Acre, the ancient Ptolemais, is interesting from its history, extending from Elijah to the Crusades, to Bonaparte, to Sir Sydney Smith, and Sir Charles Napier. The town is very dilapidated and has little to attract notice. There are a few remains of Christian churches and of the great hospice of the chevaliers, in Crusade times. Mount Carmel is every thing at Acre. It is twenty-two leagues in circumference, and 1750 ft. high, commanding a splendid view of the seaand of the plain of Esdraelon. The slopes are covered with crops of corn, with maize, and with forests of oak and olive. The road to the convent is very steep, but the fathers offer a most liberal hospitality. The mountain is honeycombed with grottoes, and hallowed with countless traditions. One grotto is consecrated as that of Elijah,another as that of St. Louis. Acre gives name to the Dacre or D'Acre family, whose first progenitor was at the Crusades.

BRITISH CONSULAR AGENT.– M. Finzi, Esq.

To reach Nazareth from Acre you cross a broad plain, then a range of hills,and afterwards another plain,that of Zabulon,an arid district,with a few scattered tamarisks and acacias, passing the site of Diocæsarea, the strongest town of Galilee. At length, amidst sandy hills, you descry the terraced roofs and domes of Nazareth. Hospitality is offered to the pilgrim at the Greek and Latin convents. At hand is the Church of the Annunciation, where they point out the site of the holy house, said afterwards to have been transported to Loretto. In a grotto under the choir are two columns, marking the spot wh ch tradition assigns to the angelic salutation of Gabriel. On the stone is, Verbum caro hic factum est.

Other sights at Nazareth are the Mensa Christi, supposed to be the table of the last supper, the Mount of Precipitation, and Mount Tabor, the scene of the Transfiguration. The town has a picturesque position on an outlier of Anti-Lebanon. Population 3,000. Houses solidly constructed of stone. An E glish Church here, with five Missionary clergy. From the neighbouring hills the eye commands Hermon, Tabor, Endor, Nain, Emmaus, Capernaum, Cana, and the lake of Tiberias. From Nazareth you reach Caiffa in 6 hours, passing a chain of narrow defiles Caiffa is a little town, with one of the best harbours on the coast, receiving vessels that cannot put in or anchor at Acre. Caiffa stands near the ruins of the ancient city of that name, at the north side of the Gulf of Acre and near the foot of Mount Carmel. Hence by sea to Beyrout.

Beyrout.—Pop. 70,000.

BANK.—Ottoman Bank.
TELEGRAM to United Kingdom, 14s. for 20 words.

The chief port of Syria, and the port of Damascus, to which a coach runs on a good road, made by the French, through the Lebanon mountains. Lat. of Cape Beyrout 33° 50′ N., long. 35° 24′ E. Mean temp. 53° (Jan.) to 81° (July). Trade in silk, wine, oil, and gums. Here there are a Syrian Protestant College, also an American Mission Church, British Syrian Schools, an Orphanage and Hospital under the Deaconesses of Kaiserwerth, and other excellent institutions.

From Beyrout, Damascus may be reached by diligence in fourteen hours. The halfway-house is in the valley between Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon; and the keeper of the diligence station has horses and will accompany travellers to Baalbec, a six hours' ride. On the return journey you reach the station at 11 a.m., get to Baalbec the same night, view the ruins the next day, and on the third return to Beyrout.

Damascus.—Pop. 150,000 – HOTEL:—

A most ancient city, in a beautiful spot, watered by the "Abana and Pharpar," on a plain of the Anti-Lebanon, with mosques, khans, a cathedral, bazaars, &c.; with a Church of England, Irish Presbyterian and American Missions, and British Syrian Schools.

H. B. M.'s VICE-CONSUL – T. S. JAGO, Esq.
AMERICAN C. AGENT—N. Meshaka, Esq.
CHURCH SERVICE —Rev. H. C. Reichardt.

Starting from Beyrout along the sea-shore, the places of historic interest may be reached in the following order; the place last named each day, being the camping-ground for the night.

1. Sidon; 2. Sarepta, Tyre; 3 St. Jean d'Acre; 4. Caiffa, Carmel; 5. Nazareth; 6. Cana, Tiberias; 7 Magdala, Capernaum, Bethsaida, by boat, tents remaining at Tiberias; 8. Mount Tabor; 9 Enaor, Nain, Jezreel, Gilboa, the battle fields of Barak, Gideon and Saul, camping at Zenni; 10. Dotham, Samaria; 11. Shiloh, Bethel; 12. Ramah, Gibeah, Gibeon, Mixpah, Jerusalem. The expedition to the Jordan, Dead Sea, and Hebron, has already been spoken of. Each day will require from six to eight hours in the saddle, not fast riding for that is next to an impossibility.

There is no land where visitors are so enthusiastic as in Palestine; none where there are such disappointments. Some shed tears of joy in beholding Jerusalem; while others turn away in disgust from its crumbling walls, its heaps of rubbish, its filthy streets.

At the hotel table in Beyrout, you may hear your right hand neighbour say – "I can't understand how any one can visit Jerusalem without giving up pretty much all his belief in the Bible. That is the place where Christianity was taught, and what do we see?—a set of lazy monks fighting like cats and dogs over a place they call the Holy Sepulchre. They point out the spot where Mary stood, where Jesus stood, and a dozen other places, all absurdities. I can't imagine any one going there and not coming to the conclusion that a good deal of what we have supposed to be truth in the Bible is not to be believed."

Another will reply—"On the contrary, having been through the country, my convictions of the truth of the Bible have been deepened. There are wonderful points of contact between prophecy and history, exact fulfilments of prophetic words. I have seen places just as the Bible describes them, and men doing just what the old prophets said they would do—cultivating grapes on the hill of Samaria, and spreading their nets on the foundations of Tyre."

Travellers in Palestine are multiplying every year. The English are numerous, but our American cousins are as four to one; occasionally a Prussian or a Frenchman is seen, sometimes an Italian; but the hotel-keepers at Jerusalem, Damascus, and Beyrout, look for the arrival of English-speaking travellers just as we look for the cuckoo and swallow in spring. As the facilities and means for travelling increase, the number of travellers will also increase: for the world has but one Palestine. There is but one Jerusalem, one sea of Galilee, one Nazareth; and, as long as the religion of Jesus endures, there will be pilgrims to a land consecrated by the unfailing memorials of His life and death. Thousands will come, and other thousands will dream of coming, and lay plans to come in the future.

EGYPT AND OVERLAND ROUTES.

OVERLAND GUIDE TO INDIA, &c.—See BRADSHAW'S RAILWAY AND THROUGH ROUTES and OVERLAND GUIDE TO INDIA, TURKEY, EGYPT, CHINA, JAPAN, AUSTRALIA, and NEW ZEALAND, published annually, Price Five Shillings. It contains, among other matter, a Gazetteer of the Civil and Military Stations in India.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES OF INDIA.

By the Act of 1871, the following was constituted an unit of measures of capacity for the whole of British India. Ser = 1.76196 British Imperial pint or 1 litre.

BENGAL.—LENGTH.—GUZ = 1 yard; COSS (of 4000 GUZ) = 2 3-11ths English miles. YOJAN (of 4 COSS) = 9 8-11ths miles. SURFACE.—Beegah (of 20 Cottahs, each of 20 Gundas) 1600 square yards, or about ⅓ of an English acre. WEIGHTS.—TOLA = 180 Troy grains; MAUND (of 40 Seers, each of 16 Chittaks, each of 5 Tolas) = 82 9-7th lbs. avoidupois English. Hence 250 Tolas = 9 lbs. avoird.; 35 Seers = 72 lbs. avoird.; 40 Maunds = 36 cwt.

MADRAS.—LENGTH.—The English foot and yard are almost always used. KOLE and GUZ = 33 inches English; MOOLAM (of 24 Unguloms) varies from 16 to 21 English inches; BAUM= about 6½ English feet; NÄLLI-VALLI = about 1½ English miles; KADAM (of 7 Nälli-valli) = about 10 English miles. SURFACE—CAWNIE (of 24 Grounds or 100 Coollies) = 1·28 acre English. WEIGHTS—Candy (of 20 Maunds, each of 8 Viss, each of 5 Cutcha Seers, each of 8 Pollums, each of 8 Tolas) = 498 7-10ths lbs., avoid.; TOLA = 180 Troy grains; POLLUM = 1·28 lb. avoid. In commerce VISS = 3½ lbs.; MAUND = 25 lbs.; and CANDY = 500 lbs. English.

BOMBAY.—LENGTH.—GUZ (of 24 Tussoos) = 27 inches English; HÄTH (of 16 Tussoos) = 18 inches. SURFACE—Beegah (of 20 pund, each of 20 Kuttles) = 8-9ths of an English acre (3027 sq. yds.); Chahur (of 120 Beegah) = 97½ English acres. WEIGHTS—The Bengal weights are being introduced, but there are still the following local weights: Candy (of 20 Maunds) = 560 lbs. avoird.; MAUND (of 40 Seers = 28 lbs. avoird.; SEER (of 72 Tanks or 80 Pice) = 11 1-6th oz. avoird.; TANK (of 4 Mashas) = 2½ drs. avoird. The Candy varies in different districts from 560 lbs. to 3065 lbs. The Candy of cotton (28 Maunds) = 7 cwt. English.

Indian Money.—In 1835 a uniform system for all the Presidencies was established; it is as follows: 12 pies = 1 anna = 1½d.; 16 annas = 1 rupee = 2s. In recent years the fall in the price of Silver has made the exchange value of the rupees little over 1s. 9½d. Silver is the only legal tender, but a gold standard is advocated; at present the gold coins are merely tokens representing a certain sum in silver money. GOLD COINS.—Gold mohur (15 rupees) = £1 10s.; 10 rupee piece = £1; 5 rupee piece = 10s. SILVER COINS.—Rupee; half-rupee & quarter-rupee, double-anna: worth respectively 2s., 1s., 6d., 3d. Annas, each worth 1½d., were minted in 1835, but are now seldom met with; a double-rupee = 4s was authorised by the government, but never issued. A lac is 100,000 rupees, and is worth £10,000; a crore is 100 lacs, and is worth 1 million sterling.—See "The Merchants' Handbook of Money, Weights, and Measures," by W. A. BROWNE LL.D. London, Stanford.

1. ROUTE via SOUTHAMPTON, and MALTA.

By means of the steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, carrying the Indian Mails weekly, see Bradshaw's "Overland Guide to India," for full particulars.

2. ROUTE via MARSEILLES.

The railways have so considerably facilitated the performance of the journey from London to Marseilles, as to render it easy of accomplishment in a few hours. Thence travellers can proceed to Malta, Alexandria, and Constantinople, or to any of the intermediate ports, either rapidly per direct packets, or more leisurely via Italy, thereby visiting en route the most remarkable towns of that country —such as Genoa, Florence, Rome, Naples, &c.; all of which will be found described in this GUIDE under the head of Italy, and in the Routes laid down in "Bradshaw's Overland Guide to India."

Coupés are attached to 1st class trains on the Mediterranée lines, and are charged from 2fr. 50c. to 15fr. per place (according to distance) in excess of the 1st class fare. Coupé beds cost four times the ordinary coupé fares.

The steam-ships of the "Administration des Services Maritimes des Messageries Nationales," Rue Nôtre-Dame-des-Victoires, convey the French mails between Marseilles and the principal ports of the Mediterranean Sea. They average from 250 to 600 horse-power. For particulars in reference to Times and Fares, see alphabetical list of Steamers, also for notice of the other different lines, viz., the Italian, Levant, Greek, Egypt and Syrian, between Constantinople and Alexandria, and the various lines they correspond with.

Passengers wishing to visit Genoa, Leghorn, Florence, Rome, Naples, and Messina, en route for Malta, or any destination beyond it, can embark in the packets of the line of Italy, leaving Marseilles every Thursday. They are privileged to stop at any of the intermediate stations, proceeding to their destination by subsequent packets, within a delay of four months. On re-embarking, they are only entitled to such berths as are vacant when due notice of the departure is given at the company's office. The passage-money is always to be paid in advance, and is in no case returned.

Passengers must strictly adhere to the printed regulations on board. They cannot have the exclusive occupation of a state-room, unless engaging all the berths therein. The tariff of luggage is given in pages of the GUIDE already referred to; and the following is the charge for extra luggage on board the packets, viz.:—10 frs. per 70 kilos. between Marseilles and Malta, and 25 frs. per 70 kilos. to any destination beyond Malta. Goods and merchandise are not admitted as luggage. CARRIAGES are charged as follows:—

Small size (2 wheels) ditto. ditto.

In addition to the instructions given in reference to Passports, under the column of "General Instructions," at pp. xlviii to l., the following tariff of charges will be found useful to the traveller:—French police visé, gratis; British, 2 frs. 30 c.; Italian, 4 frs.; Greek, 7 fr. 50 c.; Russian, 6 frs.; Spanish, 5 frs. 50 c.; Dutch, 5 frs.; Belgian, 4 frs. 50 c.; German 4 frs.; Austrian, 3 frs. 90 c.; Swiss, 2 frs. 50 c.; Turkish, 2 frs. 50 c.; American, 10 frs. 50 c.; Danish, 5 frs.

NOTICE TO HOMEWARD TRAVELLERS RETURNING FROM INDIA.—The Steam communication between Kurrachee, Bushire, and Bussora, corresponding with the small steamers on the Tigris and the Euphrates, will convey the traveller to the different Overland Routes given in Bradshaw's "Overland Guide to India." The packets of the Marine Service of the "Messageries Nationales," on their return voyage from Alexandria, are accompanied by a Surgeon.

3. ROUTE via TRIESTE.

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS, &c.—BAGGAGE.—A recent regulation enables passengers for India, viâ Trieste, who are encumbered with heavy baggage, to ship it at Southampton by one of the P. and O. steamers leaving that port for Alexandria, but this must be done a fortnight in advance. By adopting this plan much trouble and annoyance will be saved and the Traveller need only take with him such portion of his baggage as he may require until his landing in India; and the less he takes the better. Passengers returning from India should adopt a similar course, and leave the cumbersome portion of their baggage at Alexandria for shipment to Southampton. Much inconvenience, arising from delay, &c., will be avoided by parties forwarding keys of packages subject to duty, with the address of the owner, and the list and value of the contents, to 127, Leadenhall-street, London; or to Hickie, Borman, and Co., Oriental-place, Southampton. Personal baggage, when declared for transit at Ostend, can be forwarded to Trieste free of Custom-House examination. The same course is adopted in reference to baggage from Trieste, which need not be examined until arrival in London. It may be well to state that luggage declared for transit cannot be used until its arrival at its destination. Venice is a few hours from Trieste. The P. and O. Company, now run boats from Venice and Ancona to Brindisi, in connection with the Mails to Alexandria.

Passengers, on their arrival at Trieste from Alexandria, can have the extra quantity forwarded to England, &c., by giving the necessary instructions at Trieste. Two pounds per cwt. is the tariff to England, exclusive of Custom-House charges.

Passengers must not take sealed letters into Austria, such being contrary to the postal regulations of that country. Persons going to Trieste, viâ Ostend and Vienna, are recommended to obtain a Foreign Office passport visèd first by the Austrian Ambassador, and afterwards by the Belgian Consul, if viâ Ostend. If there be different members of a family travelling together, their names can all be included in the one passport. (See p. xlviii. to l.)

MONEY.—Sovereigns, are the best to take from England. No paper money or Foreign coin, should be taken beyond the Austrian frontiers, as it will be refused.

8. Travellers anxious to enjoy the magnificent scenery between Vienna and Trieste. should proceed by the day train from Vienna to Gratz; and then proceed by day train to Adelsberg, to see the extensive grotto close to the station.

ROUTES HOMEWARDS.

1. Brindisi to Foggia Naples, Rome, Florence, Bologna, Milan; or, Brindisi to Bologna, Milan, Magenta, Novara, and Arona by rail; Arona to Brieg and Martigny by diligence over the Simplon; Martigny to Bouveret by rail; Bouveret to Geneva by steamer or rail; or, Florence, Spezia Geneva, Nice, Marseilles Paris, and London; or. by International Train, via Bologna, Turin. Mont Cenis, Chambéry, Mâcon, Dijon, Paris.

2 Milan to Camerlata, by rail in about two hours; thence to Chiasso by dil. in ½ hour. From Chiasso to Lugano by rail in one hour: Lugano to Bellinzona by dil. in 3½ hours; Bellinzona to Biasca by rail in ½ hour; Biasca to Fluelen by dil. in 13½ hours; Fluelen to Lucerne per steamer in 2½ hours (see St. Gothard route, pp. 240 and 241); Lucerne to Bâle, via Olten pp. (239, 240); Bâle via Strassburg and Avricourt to Paris (see pp. 76 and 65).

3. Trieste, Vienna, Prague, Dresden, (to Berlin,) Halle, and Cassel, by rail. Cassel to Frankfort, Mannheim, Nancy, and Paris—or Cassel to Hamm, Düsseldorf, and Aix-la-Chapelle, by rail—thence to London by rail and steamer. N.B.—Cab Fares from Charing Cross or other Stations, may be got from Bradshaw's 6d. Guide, or from the Inspector at the Station.

From Brindisi, parties anxious to visit the Ionian Islands, Greece, Constantinople, Asia Minor, and Egypt, can do so at a comparatively small outlay. Travellers from Greece and the Ionian Islands are admitted to free pratique. Vessels from the Levant and Greece are accompanied by health officers, and the quarantine is performed on the voyage, so that passengers can now proceed on shore immediately on arrival at Brindisi provided the vessel has a clean bill of health. Tickets are available on all the steamer lines for two months.

Travellers by Trieste or Brindisi should provide themselves with passports before starting; and if there is quarantine at Alexandria, should insist on being landed at the railway station, and going right through to Suez, and embarking at once. A visiting card is enough for the English in Egypt.

For Austrian Lloyd's Steamers to Alexandria, &c., see the Alphabetical List of Steamers. Passengers embarking on board, or landing from the Austrian Lloyd's steamers, who require a boat to themselves must pay 2s.; several passengers in one boat, pay each 8d.; families, 4s.; and luggage —viz., trunks, boxes, mattrasses, and portmanteaus, for each package, 2d.; hat-cases, carpet-bags, &c., are free.

Port Said, at the Mediterranean end of the Suez Canal, to which the Southampton steamers of the P. & O. Co., the French Messageries, & others, proceed, is about 140 miles further east. See p. 668.

The Overland Railway between Alexandria, Zagazig, Ismailia, and Suez, is now open by the direct route, avoiding Cairo; about 224 miles. Alexandria to Cairo is 130 miles; Cairo to Suez, 155 miles. It is the sole property of the government. Time between Alexandria & Suez is about 12 hours. For Fares and Departures, see page 294.

The engineers and drivers with the overland passengers are all English under agreement between the Viceroy and the Peninsular and Oriental Co. Most of the others are Arabs. The road to Cairo was laid by Robert Stephenson, on iron sleepers, and is considered much smoother than any in Europe.

Previous to arrival, passengers on board the P. & O. Company's boats make up parties for the railway carriages across Egypt. The lists are handed to the purser, who communicates with the railway authorities; and, on reaching the station, passengers find carriages told off for them according to the lists made up. They should take refreshments, especially where there are children, with them on the railways. The transit sometimes lasts 10 to 12 hours, with only one stoppage long enough for refreshments, often in the middle of night, or during a sandstorm, when it is impossible to leave the carriage.

Passengers should take as few packages or articles with them on their route as possible, as they are solely responsible for such, which should be kept under their own personal charge; but parties who intend stopping at Cairo are requested to give notice of their intention to the agents at Suez and Cairo, and deliver to both a list of their packages, that the necessary assistance may be given for the separation of their luggage. On landing from any steamer, or embarking therein, First Class Passengers pay 1s., and Children and servants 6d. Parties are to embark only from the transit wharf.

Omnibuses are provided at the expense of the transit administration to and from the landing places and the hotel, and the hotel and railway at Alexandria. These conveyances will leave the hotels half an hour before the appointed time of starting. The donkeys are fine spirited animals.

STEAMERS—Passengers from India proceeding to Europe by the Austrian Lloyd's steamers must separate their luggage from that of the booked-through passengers on its arrival at Alexandria, otherwise it will go on to Southampton.

The departure of the Austrian Lloyd's direct steamers from Alexandria for Trieste altogether depends on the arrivals of the mail packets at Suez. They generally leave for Trieste in a few hours after the arrival of the mails and passengers at Alexandria. Steamers to Cyprus; to Syria and the Levant, Constantinople and the Black Sea. By the Russian steamers the fare from Egypt to Constantinople, touching at twelve places on the Syrian coast and in the Levant, is £16, the voyage occupying about 13 days. There are also Austrian and French boats, both of which have fixed times for sailing, while the Russian are uncertain.

English or Dutch subjects proceeding from India, China, or Java, viâ Trieste, to England or Holland, should obtain a passport from their respective Governments, and obtain the visés of the Austrian Consul either at Bombay, Madras, Calcutta, Ceylon, China, Singapore, Batavia, or as the case may be.

Alexandria, the ancient capital of Lower Egypt, is situated on the Mediterranean, between the Lake Mareotis and the Isle of Pharos. It is enclosed by walls of Saracenic structure, supposed to have been built by one of the successors of Saladin, in the 13th century. The original city was built by Alexander the Great soon after the fall of Tyre, about 333 B.C., and it realised the hopes of its founder, as, not long after its erection, it became the emporium, not only for merchandise, but also for all the arts and sciences of Greece. Strabo tells us that ancient Alexandria was 30 stadia in length from east to west, and 7 or 8 stadia even where narrowest. The circumference was 9 miles. Lake Marotis bathed its walls on the south, and the Mediterranean on the north. It was also intersected by straight parallel streets lengthways, and a free passage was left to the northern wind, which alone conveys coolness and salubrity into Egypt. At the gate near the sea, a street of 2,000 ft. began, and terminated at the gate of Canopus. This street was decorated with magnificent houses, temples, and buildings. Along its extensive range the eye was never tired of gazing on its marble, the porphyry and obelisks which at some future day were destined to embellish Rome and Constantinople. The great street, the handsomest in the world, was intersected by another of the same breadth, which formed a square of 14 m. in circumference at their junction. From the middle of this great place the two gates were to be seen at coup d'œil, as also vessels arriving under full sail from the north and south.

The Pa'ace, which projected beyond the promontory of Lochras, occupied more than a quarter of the city. Each of the Ptolomies added to its magnificence. It contained within its enclosure the Museum, an Asylum for learned men, groves, and buildings worthy of royal majesty, and a Temple in which was deposited the body of Alexander in a gold coffin. It was brought hither from Babylon after his death. B.C. 323. This beautiful monument was violated by the infamous Seleucus Cibyotactus, who carried off the gold coffin, putting a glass one in its place. The Sarcophagus which contained it is one said to be now in the British Museum. Alexandria also extended along the northern bank of the lake, and in its eastern side embraced the Gymnasium, with its portico of more than 600 ft. long, supported by several rows of marble pillars. Without the Canopus gate there was a spacious circus for chariot races, whilst beyond that the suburb of Nicopolis stretched along the sea shore, and seemed a second Alexandria. A superb Amphitheatre was built there, with a race-ground for the celebration of the Quinquenalia. Such is the description left us of Alexandria, by the ancients but, above all, by Strabo.

The architect employed by Alexander was the celebrated Dinocratus, who acquired such great reputation by building the Temple of Diana at Ephesus. Ptolemy Soter, one of Alexander's captains, was appointed Governor of Egypt soon after the death of the Macedonian monarch, assumed the title of King, and made Alexandria the royal residence, B.C 304. He and Ptolomy Philadelphus added much to the embellishment and grandeur of Alexandria. The celebrated watch-tower or Pharos when finished, was considered one of the wonders of the world. The tower was a large square structure of white marble, on the top of which fires were kept constantly burning for the guidance of sailors. The building cost 800 talents. A curious stratagem was resorted to by the architect to perpetuate his name in connection with it. Being ordered to engrave upon it the inscription—"King Ptolemy, to the Gods the Saviours, for the benefit of Sailors"—instead of the king's name he substituted his own, and then, filling up the hollow of the marble with mortar, wrote upon it the above-mentioned inscription. In process of time, the mortar having fallen off, the following inscription appeared:—"Sostratus, the Cnidian, the son of Dexiphanus, to the Gods the Saviour of Sailors."

The Temple of Serapeum had within its verge the celebrated Alexandrian Library, containing 700,000 volumes. In collecting books for this library, the following plan was adopted, viz., to seize all those which were brought into Egypt by Greeks, or other foreigners. The books were transcribed by persons appointed for that purpose. The copies were then handed back to the proprietors, and the original laid up in the library. The works of Sophocles, Euripides, and Æschylus, were borrowed from the Athenians by Ptolemy Energetus, who returned them the copies transcribed in as beautiful a manner as possible, presenting them at the same time with £30,000 for the exchange.

This city, like all others of note in the early ages, was often the scene of terrible massacres. About 141 B.C. it was all but destroyed by Ptolemy Physcon. All the learned men fled to Greece, Asia Minor, and to the Islands of the Archipelago, where they revived learning, and the arts. From this period the fortunes of Alexandria were dimmed by feuds and scenes of carnage, until taken A.D. 640, by Amrou, who, astonished at the richness and grandeur of the city, wrote to the Caliph:—"I have taken the City of the West. It is of immense extent; I cannot describe to you how many houses it contains. There are 4,000 palaces, 4,000 baths, 12,000 dealers in fresh oil, 40,000 Jews who pay tribute, and 400 theatres, or places of amusement." The chief thing which contributed to raise Alexandria to the pitch of extraordinary splendour which it enjoyed for so long a period, was its being the centre of commerce between the Eastern and Western world. And, though the revolutions which occurred in the government of Egypt, after it fell into the hands of the Mahometans frequently affected this city to very great extent, yet the excellence of its port, and the innumerable conveniences resulting from the East India trade to the different Governors of Egypt, made it an important centre of commerce. But it greatly declined after 1497, when a passage was discovered round the Cape of Good Hope by the Portuguese.

Among the events of its later history are the invasion of Egypt by Bonaparte, and Nelson's battle of the Nile, in 1798, the victory and death of Sir R. Abercrombie, 1801, and the reign of Mehemet Ali; its modern reviver, who recognised its admirable position, and saw what might be made of the place. For 20 years his iron will was directed to make once more a great commercial emporium. He cut a canal at a terrible loss of life, which brought all the commerce of Egypt to the doors of Alexandria. The Mediterranean basins were cleared out, and the defences of the place greatly strengthened. The Arsenal, planned by Mr. Cerizy, in 1829, was completed 1833, and a fleet was soon after created as if by magic. The neighbourhood of the town, which was simply the desert, has been refreshed with water conduits, and covered with gardens.

Great improvements have taken place in the interior of the town. The Turkish quarter has been drained and made healthy, and the Frank quarter, lately an unsightly heap of rubbish, is now quite an ornament to the town. It has a long street, offering large, handsome shops, a square of regular shape, flanked with handsome houses; many of the most conspicuous being occupied by the great European consuls. This Frank quarter has quite a European character, including printing offices, reading-rooms, Paris tailors and fashions, Austrian ironmongery, and the luxurious habits of the rich merchants of the West.

ALEXANDRIA MODERN.—The present city stands on a peninsula, situated between the two ports; and although a few years ago it presented little more than half-ruined houses and plies of rubbish, with the remains of a few magnificent edifices; still, at the present time it is gradually assuming the appearance of a large populous city, many of its streets are wide, clean, and lined with rows of handsome houses. The commerce of Alexandria is still most extensive, as all the exports from and imports to Egypt pass through. There are several eminent Greek as well as British mercantile houses established there, with several wealthy Jewish merchants. The growth of cotton has added considerable importance to Alexandria. It has two Ports viz.:—the old and the new; one contains a good harbour, lately completed. About 4-5ths of the exports and 2-5ths of the imports are with England. The coast is now well lighted. Sand soon clogs the anchorage here, hence in stormy weather vessels are subject to bilge: the bottom being rocky, the cable soon breaks, so that one vessel dashes against another, and many are lost. A fatal instance of this occurred some years ago, when forty-two vessels were dashed to pieces on the Mole, in a gale of wind from the north-west.

The country about Alexandria is completely destitute of water, excepting that which is brought from the Nile by a Canal of twelve leagues, every year, at the time of the inundation. Vaults and reservoirs are dug under the ancient city to receive the supply which must last until the next year. Some parts of the Old Wall are yet standing, and are flanked with large towers about 200 paces distant one from the other; below are magnificent casements, which serve as galleries to walk in. The lower part of the towers contains a large square hall, the roof of which rests on thick columns of Theban stone; and above this are several rooms, over which are platforms more than 20 paces square. The reservoirs are vaulted with much art; and though 2000 years have rolled by since their construction, they are still perfect. Only a few porphyry pillars and the front portico of Cæsar's Palace remain; but they appear very beautiful. The Palace of Cleopatra was built upon the walls facing the port, having a gallery on the outside supported by several fine columns. Cleopatra's Baths are three caves so called in this neighbourhood. Cleopatra's Needles was the name given to two obelisks, about 66 ft. long, brought from Heliopolis; one erect and one on the ground. The one erect remains standing here; the other having been offered as a present to England by Mehemet Ali, was at last taken to London at the cost of Mr. Erasmus Wilson, in 1878, and now figures on the Thames Embankment. It was towed through the Mediterranean on a plan devised by Mr. Dixon, the engineer, and happily just escaped shipwreck in the Bay of Biscay.

Near the Rosetta Gate are five columns of marble, on the place formerly occupied by the porticos of the Gymnasium. The barbarism of the Turks has since destroyed the remainder of the colonnade. But the chief object of attention is Pompey's Pillar, situated about a quarter of a league from the southern gate, and said to have made part of the library: it is built of red granite: the capital, which is Corinthian with palm leaves, and not indented, is nine feet high; the shaft and upper member of the base are of one piece, of nearly ninety feet long and nine feet in diameter. The base is a square of about fifteen feet on each side. This block of marble, sixty feet in circumference, rests on two layers of stones bound together with lead, but which has not prevented the Arabs from forcing out several stones to seek for imaginary treasure. The entire column, 114 feet high, is beautifully polished, but shivered a little at one side. Seen at a distance it overtops the town, and serves as a signal for ships. In modern times it was ascended by an English skipper, who scaled it by means of a kite and a rope and emptied a bowl of punch on the top. It was afterwards ascended in the same way by the French, 1798, and by the late Admiral Smyth. Dr. Madden mentions an English lady, Miss Talbot, who breakfasted and wrote a letter on the top. Much research and fruitless study have been expended in attempting to discover in whose honour the pillar was erected. The Catacombs are also worth a visit. They begin at the extremity of the old city and extend some distance along the coast, forming the Necropolis, or City of the Dead. The excavation is from 30 to 40 feet wide, 200 feet long, and 25 feet deep, and is terminated by gentle declivities at each end. One of these openings can be easily entered. Within there are no mummies; but the places which they occupied, and the order in which they were ranged, is still to be seen.

SUEZ CANAL.

This great work was first projected by Baron Lesseps, who held a diplomatic post in the country, in 1854, when he first opened the scheme to the late Viceroy, Mehemet Said. A firman having been obtained from the Sultan, and a concession granted by the Pacha, 1856, the works were commenced in 1859, by "La Compagnie Universelle du Canal Maritime de Suez," constituted in France, where the principal part of the capital was subscribed in 800 franc shares. Total cost of the Canal 17½ millions sterling. On 25th November 1875 the Khédive sold his shares (176,602 out of 400,000 ordinary) to the English Government for 4 millions.

It was opened in state, 17th November, 1869, by a procession of English and foreign steamers, in presence of the Khédive, the Empress Eugénie, Emperor of Austria, the Crown Prince of Prussia, and other personages. On the 27th, the "Brazilian" went through, a ship of 1,809 tons, 260 feet long, 30 feet broad drawing 17½ to 24 feet of water. From that time passages have been made almost daily, chiefly by British vessels, as recorded in the Isthme de Suez, French newspaper. The distance this way from England to India is 6,560 miles against 11,600 round the Cape.

The allowed rate for steamers is 5 to 6 knots an hour. It will not do for paddle wheel boats or long ships; and the sand storms to which it is liable, are among the weak points demanding constant attention. Fifteen sidings, called gares in French, are provided for meeting ships. A telegraph wire runs through from Port Said to Suez, following the rail and Sweet Water Canal along the second half, between Ismailia and Suez. The Red Sea tide, which rises five to six feet at Suez is felt up to the Bitter Lakes; and the Mediterranean tide to Kantara.

Ships of 3,000 to 4,000 tons and upwards go through in twenty to thirty hours. In 1874, the receipts were £1,056 030; and the tonnage was 1264 ships of 2,423,760 tons. In 1875, the receipts were £1,229,206; and the tonnage was 1494 ships of 2,940,710 tons. One ship was the Hankow, drawing 24ft. 7in.; another was the Seraph, the Prince of Wales's ship. In 1878 as many as 1843 vessels passed through; the receipts were 32 million francs, and expenses 17 millions. A new tariff is in force. Four-fifths of the tonnage are English.

The Isthmus, at its narrowest part, where traversed by the Canal, is 72 miles wide, by a straight line from Pelusium in the Mediterranean, to Suez in the Red Sea. The level of the two seas is nearly the same, the Red Sea being only six inches higher at a mean level than the Mediterranean.

The Canal, according to the Admiralty survey, made in 1870, is 86 geographical miles long (about 100 English miles) from Port Said Light to the lights at Suez, and consists of about one-fourth canal, artificially made, while the rest runs through natural lakes lying in the hollows, chiefly the Bitter Lakes and the Lake Timsah, which, though shallow, are sufficiently deep to be turned to account. The canal-cutting is to be, 327 feet wide at the surface of the water, (only 100 to 120 feet at present), 72 wide at the bottom, and 26 or more feet deep. Where the cuttings are hard and costly, the surface width is reduced to 196 feet. About one-third of the whole is embanked, and partly cased with stone, the rest being at or below sea level. It is protected by a Suez Canal Force appointed by the Khedive. There are light infantry stations along the banks, with two gun-boats, besides steam-launches and row-boats, to look after the passing ships; and a mounted patrol, divided into six parties, is constantly on the alert to watch the telegraph wires and prevent damage to the banks, or to the pipes which bring supplies of fresh water.

The Canal begins in the Mediterranean at

A modern town, 18 miles west of Pelusium, 140 miles from Alexandria, and 12 hours from Jaffa, in Palestine; named after the late Viceroy, and laid out in regular streets, on a platform made by stuff excavated from the canal. It has a quay, basin of 137 acres, and shipping dock, 440 feet long, outside which is the roadstead of 550 acres. This lies between two breakwaters, or moles, running out from the land; the western one 7,000 feet long, the eastern 5,000 ft. The western one slopes towards the eastern: so much so, that while their shore ends are 4,600 feet apart, the sea ends are only 2,300 feet. They are 17 feet wide at the top, and are composed of blocks of artificial concrete of sand, mud, clay, lime (in proportion of 1 to 4½ of sand), and salt water. The port is to have a uniform depth of 30 feet, by means of steam dredges, consuming about 1,600 tons of coal per week. A lighthouse, with its electric light, is 180 feet high.

46—Tussoum.

54—Light, on north side of Great Bitter Lake (Lake Ameer); Chebrewet Peak, in the Géneffé Hills, to the south-west.

62—Light, at south end of Great Bitter Lake.

65—Kabret el Atchoulie (two or three houses), at north end of Little Bitter Lake; near ruins of a Persepolitain monument. Geneffe station and hills five to six miles distant.

81—Madama. Pontoon bridge, and a ruined monument on a hill, with remains of the old canal.

86—Suez, near the harbour lights, and the late Pacha's dry dock.

A bust of Waghorn was set up at Suez by the Canal Company, 1872. For Suez, see page 672.

It is reported that the Canal has sensibly improved the climate in its neighbourhood, so that tropical plants are beginning to grow where there was nothing but sterility before.

Alexandria to Cairo.—The Rail passes Boulac or Boulak, the port to Cairo, 1 mile distant. There are several factories, an engineer school, Ismail Pasha's palace, and the Museum of Egyptian Antiquities, under Mariette Bey, a guide to which is published.

Cairo is the head-quarters for tourists in Egypt, as being the point of departure for the Nile as well as for the Desert journey. The traveller will provide himself with a boat and all the necessaries for his voyage better at Cairo than in Alexandria, besides saving the hire and expenses of a boat for at least half a month, the time employed between Alexandria and Cairo, with scarcely a single object or interest on that part of the voyage. Wines and provisions for the Nile or the Desert will be as well provided in Cairo as in London. There is an Italian warehouse and biscuit bakery kept by Mr. Ablitt, where the English traveller will find as great a variety of condiments as he can reasonably desire.

Cairo being the emporium for the Mediterranean, the Red Sea, India, and the Desert; its bazaars are rich in the produce of Europe, Asia and Africa. Steam and caravans supply them with gold and silk tissues of Damascus, the treasures of Bombay and India, the ivory, ostrich plumes, and slaves of Abyssinia, Darfour, Nubia &c. The Cairo baths are like the well-known Turkish baths and are thought very useful as a remedial agent. At hand is the Frank Bazaar presenting every imaginable convenience in clothing, &c., for overland travellers.

Cairo, the capital of Egypt, is situated in a plain at the foot of a hill, in lat. 30° 2′ N., long. 31° 15′ E. Mean temp. 58° (Jan.) to 86° (July).

It is entered by a pretty good road, and has a very imposing appearance. Jawhar, a Moggrebin general, founded it in the middle of the 10th century, and named it "Alkahira," or the victorious. It soon became the residence of the Caliphs, and, consequently, the capital of the country. It contains 240 principal streets, 46 public squares, 11 bazaars, 140 schools, 300 public cisterns, 1,166 coffee houses, 65 public baths, and 400 mosques. English hotels and lodging houses are established at Cairo. English medical men are also practising here. There is an European Hospital, which deserves notice; as well as Miss Whately's School for 500 girls, and others for the education of native children. Cairo is supplied with gas and water works, and new wide streets and roads are in progress. It is divided into the Old and New cities.

The New city is about 2½ m. from the Old one on the same side of the river. Citadel, rising above the lofty buildings, appears to issue forth from a grove of the richest foliage, and presents a most imposing appearance. The city should be viewed from it. The streets are narrow and unpaved, and the houses are gloomy. Each street has a gate, which is closed at nightfall; there are about 70 gates in all. A canal, called Khalis, flows along the city from one end to the other, with houses on both sides. In its progress it forms very many small lakes, called Berks, the princapal of which lies in the great square near the castle. On its banks are built the most beautiful houses in the city, but, being dependent for its supply of water on the inundation of the Nile, it is dry for several months in the year, and covered with beautiful verdure. In the water season the barges and barks of the aristocracy may be seen constantly gliding up and down on its surface, especially in the evenings, when curious fireworks and a variety of music enliven the scene. Stone walls and handsome battlements, with very fine towers at every hundred paces, surround the modern city of Cairo, which is badly defended. The citadel, or fortified Palace, erected by Saladin in the 12th century, was the only place of defence in the city, and yet the Turks let it fall into ruin, until it was thoroughly repaired, not long since, by the Pacha. Within the precincts are a cannon foundry, a printing press, a fine mosque, the mint, Joseph's Well (mentioned below), and the gate memorable for the slaughter of the Mamelukes. Its principal apartment was a magnificent hall, environed with twelve columns of granite, of prodigious height and thickness, brought from the ruins of Alexandria. These sustained an open dome, under which Saladin distributed justice to his subjects. A magnificent view of the city, and above 30 miles along the Nile, including the ruins of Old Cairo, the suburbs of Boulac, and Djiah, site of Memphis, great Pyramids, Obelisk of Heliopolis, ruins of Matareyh, Pyramids of Sakara, and the "Eternal Nile," is obtained from this palace. The Khedive does not now reside there, but at Choubra Palace, outside. A Military College, and other institutions, have been founded lately, with the view and for the purpose of introducing European arts and improvements.

There are about 400 Mosques, some of which have six minarets, and are adorned with beautiful granite columns, brought from Heliopolis and Memphis. About 20 deserve notice as works of art. The largest mosque is that of El Ashar, standing in the centre of the city, and regarded as a University for all Islam. The next in size is that of Sultan Hassan, in the Roumeyleh square, the finest structure in modern Egypt, and extremely light and elegant. It is built in the form of a parallelogram, and has a deep frieze running round all the wall, adorned with Gothic and Arabesque sculpture. Some of the others which are most remarkable are the Mouaied, Kalaoun, and Kalbai mosques. In the desert behind the citadel is an extensive Necropolis, in which there are many splendid tombs, including a magnificent one built by the Pacha for his family, adorned with five spacious domes. There are several Khans and Caravanseries. These are in general several stories high, and are always full of people and merchandise. Cairo being the centre of the trade with the interior of Africa, and having caravans departing at intervals from it for Fezzan Darfar, and other quarters.

Joseph's Well, situated in the fortified palace, said to have been made, 700 years ago, by Saladin; whose name was Yusuf, or Joseph. The Egyptians attribute every thing to this remarkable character. The well is cut in a rock, and is 280 feet deep. The water is drawn to the top by means of oxen, placed on platforms at proper distances, which turn about the machine that raises it.

Old Cairo.—Here is the Mosque of Amrou, the oldest and most venerated in Cairo, having a square gallery, supported by 200 marble columns. There is very little else to interest or amuse, except the Granaries of Joseph, which, as subject of special notice in the pages of Holy Writ, must deeply interest the Christian traveller. In it we also find a pretty church, used by the Christians and Copts, the latter being the original inhabitants of Egypt. At Old Cairo there are two distinct and separate Cemeteries for Roman Catholics and Protestants, both are in a very quiet situation, and very nicely kept. In the latter are several monuments to Indian officers, who have found a last resting-place here on their way home.

The apartment, called the Nileometer, built over against Old Cairo and above the river is worth notice. It admits the water and a column, with lines at a distance of every inch, marks every two feet as far as thirty in its periodical rising.

Sights in the Neighbourhood.—These are Choubra Palace, the Gardens of Rhoda Island, and the Nileometer, the Tombs of the Caliphs, the Cemetery of the Mamelukes, Burkhardt's Grave, the Petrified Forest, Toura Quarries, the sites of Memphis and Heliopolis, and the Pyramids

Should the traveller prolong his stay at Cairo for some days, and visit the Pyramids, he is recommended to take with him a guide and a supply of provisions and candles. In returning, he can visit the Isle of Rhoda and the Nileometer; Sakhara and the site of Memphis will require another day. The other objects worth seeing are the Mosques. The Boulak Museum under Mariette Bey, contains the finest collection of Egyptian objects to be seen anywhere, and is rich in Jewellery. Choubra, or Shoubra Palace (one hour's distance), where the Khedive resides, is a magnificent structure, with a marble kiosk or pavilion, 200 feet by 200 feet, adorned with mirrors, divans, etc. in the Oriental style. The stud is near the Palace. The Cemetery of the Mamelukes is the finest burial place in Egypt: it is not far from the city, and on the way of the Desert: the tombs present various forms, some of them being magnificent, having domes supported by finely carved transparent marble columns. At the distance of a mile, in another direction, in a bare sandy valley, are the Tombs of the Caliphs; they are beautiful structures, being of the light and elegant style of the Saracenic architecture, and have some exquisitely worked domes and minarets. On the edge of the Desert (which he was attempting to explore) is Burkhardt's grave, under a small tombstone scarcely discernible.

Memphis, it will be remembered, was taken and sacked by Cambyses, the Persian king; it was afterwards visited by Alexander the Great, previous to the foundation of Alexandria. The final ruin of Memphis was accomplished by the Arabs, who used up its materials in building Old Cairo in 638.

Heliopolis (3 hours' ride), or the City of the Sun—the oldest, perhaps, in this land of antiquities—was a sort of sacerdotal and university town, where Herodotus sought the wisest men in Egypt. Here the illustrious Platois said to have graduated. Strabo says that they pointed out the house where he resided then. It was here also that lived Potiphar who bought Joseph the patriarch. It consisted for the most part of temples and colleges. Nothing, however, of these now remain but a few isolated mounds, and one solitary Obelisk said to have been erected by the Pharoah mentioned in the history of Joseph. They show, at the village of Matareyh, a spot where the Virgin, St. Joseph and the infant Jesus stopped; including a source under a sycamore (half dried up and withered). In which the holy mother is said to have washed her Divine infant's linen. The very Musulmans view the spot with the greatest respect.

A league from the Tombs of the Caliphs, on the old Suez caravan road, is a hill covered with the relics of a Petrified Forest, palms, olives, sycamores, &c. This phenomenon deserves notice

To reach the Pyramids, 10 m. west of Cairo, you drive along a new well made road, shaded with trees all the way. It crosses the Nile by a bridge 600 ft. long, on six spans, which replaces the former bridge of boats. The road passes the decayed town of Fostat, the granaries of Joseph, seven Towers supposed to be connected with the patriarch and the years of famine, near the Rhoda island on the Nile, with the Metyas or Nilometer of Sultan Ommiad Suleyman.

A magic charm surrounds the Pyramids when seen from Cairo. As you draw near they look smaller, which diminution results perhaps from optical effect. Arrived at their base they once more astound you by their proportions, and you remain full of admiration at those immense blocks poised in the air higher than the cross of Strassburg cathedral. The great Pyramid of Cheops employed 100,000 men the space of twenty years to erect it as a tomb, about 30 centuries ago. Herodotus attempts to give a description of the manner in which its stones 2 to 3 feet thick and 6 to 7 long were raised and smoothed. It is 746 feet square at the bottom, 3/4 feet square at the top, 460 feet high, or 610 feet along the slope, and covers 11 acres. It was once smooth faced, but is now rough and uneven, presenting 208 steps, 1 to 4 feet high, by which it is ascended. Active persons can scale it in a few minutes. The view from the summit includes the Nile, the minarets of Cairo, the plain where the French defeated the Mamelukes, the site of Memphis, the great African desert, and a multitude of tombs stretched all around, including Cheophrenes' Pyramid explored by Belzoni; and a third Pyramid. About quarter of a mile from the nearest Pyramid is the Sphinx, a stone lion, 102 feet long, with a woman's face, now heavily buried in sand, so that the head only, which is about 100 ft. round, and part of the neck are visible. The face is 18 ft. long, and was at one time 270 ft. above the sand.

Cairo to Palestine. A new route little known has been quite recently pointed out leading from Cairo to Palestine. For the benefit of those who may desire to take this route, it will be proper to add that it is the most direct communication to Syria, and enables the traveller not only to see the works of the Suez Canal but saves the ride back to Alexandria, and a long voyage by sea. There is now a regular line of passenger boats, which go by night in about 12 hours to Ismailia. At Ismailia as at Suez there is a comfortable hotel where passengers can remain over night, and take steamer next day for Port Said. By the regular communications it only occupies two days' time from Suez to Port Said, and at this place hotels are established for the convenience of persons awaiting steamer for Jaffa. There is never much delay in finding steamers at this point, as it is a regular stopping place for the steamers of the principal lines. The time occupied in traversing the distance between Port Said and Jaffa is about fifteen hours. Referring to the passage from Suez to Ismailia, boats can be chartered for the trip at higher rates than the usual fare, to enable the traveller to see the country.

Suez.—Stat—Pop. (1871) 18,625

English and French houses, offices, and warehouses have been erected in every direction, and the bazaars are assuming a respectable appearance. This is owing to the works for the Suez Canal, and to the Fresh Water Canal, as well as the increasing traffic of the Peninsular and Oriental Company overland. The air is wonderfully pure and clear. Lat. 29° 58′ N., long. 32° 38′ E. High water at moon's full and change 2 h.; rise 6 ft. See page 668 for Suez Canal.

The city, joined by a causeway with the Island of Salsette and the mainland, came to the English by the marriage of Charles II. with Catharine of Portugal, and was made over to the E. I. Company in 1668, at which time it became the seat of government of all their possessions on the west side of Hindostan, which was previously at Surat. In conjunction with the adjacent islands of Colaba, Salsette, Butcher's Island, Elephanta and Carujah it makes a commodious and well sheltered harbour; and contains a capacious fortress, dockyard, and marine arsenal. Princes Dock, 30 acres, was opened 1880. The best and finest merchant ships were formerly built here of teak, cut in the neighbourhood, which was more durable than the best oak; but of late years the ship-building trade of Bombay has almost disappeared. The country in the vicinity is well wooded; good water is now obtained from the Vehar Lake, the supply being supplemented by the neighbouring Lake of Tulsi; cocoa nuts abound: and the markets, of which the Arthur Crawford Market, erected 1869, is the principal, are well supplied with meat, fish, and fruit.

The town and suburbs of Bombay, continuously built over, are 6 miles in length from Colaba Light House to Malabar Point. The new public buildings, the Secretariat, Post Office, etc., are of very imposing appearance. The new High Court is a magnificent building, facing the Back Bay, and in a line with the Secretariat. There are two gates towards the sea, which have commodious wharfs and cranes built out from each, with a landing-place for passengers. Bombay Castle—a regular quadrangle, of hard and durable stone, having the advantage, in one of the bastions, of a large reservoir of water—is situated between these gates. The old town was fortified by the Portuguese on Vauban's first system; but for the sake of ventilation, the ramparts were razed by Sir B. Frere's government in 1864. The harbour is completely commanded by a range of batteries. Many large and beautifully-built houses are centered in the space formerly known as Bombay Green, but now Elphinstone Circle.

The Protestant Cathedral, a large composite edifice, with a handsome chancel, has been restored and enlarged. There are also Protestant Churches at Colaba and Byculla. The Catholic Cathedral is a large building at Girgaum; there are besides several Catholic Churches, and a Presbyterian Church.

The native merchants' houses of business are situated in the Bazaar. Its commerce is now enormous, exceeding that of Calcutta and Madras. It carries on a valuable trade with the countries situated in the Arabian and Persian gulfs, the western coast of India, its eastern parts, and the islands in the eastern ocean; and an immense opium and wool trade with China from which Government derives a large revenue. It enjoys a considerable trade with Europe, and different parts of America. The inhabitants are composed of persons from almost every Asiatic nation.

Bombay is the head quarters of the Indian Navy; which after having been abolished, has been again revived. The Bombay army consists of about 20,000 Sepoys, and five thousand or more British soldiers, scattered over the Presidency, from Jacobabad to Belgaum. The Bombay High Court of Judicature consists of a Chief Justice, and five Puisne Justices selected from the District Bench and the English Bar. Original jurisdiction, civil and criminal, is exercised throughout the Presidency by District and Session Judges of whom there are twelve. Subordinate to them there are local Courts and District Magistrates. The climate of Bombay is healthy, and not very hot from June to March. The Government of Bombay is vested in a Governor (1879, Sir R. Temple, Bart., G.C.S.I., C.I.E.), and three Members of Council, the Commander-in-Chief and two Members of the Covenanted Civil Service. Government houses at Malabar Point and Parell.

The travelling distance from Bombay to Calcutta is 1,300 miles; to Delhi, 965; to Hyderabad, 480; to Madras, 770; to Poonah, 90; to Seringapatam, 420; and to Surat, 177 miles.

Ceylon.—An island of the Indian ocean, lying off the S.W. coast of India, from which it is separated by the Gulf of Manaar and Palk's Strait; supposed to be the Taprobane referred to by Strabo. Little was known of Ceylon, until it was visited by the Portuguese after rounding the Cape of Good Hope. The Dutch expelled the Portuguese, and possessed themselves of the coast for ten or twenty miles from the sea, and the whole of the north part. In 1815 the British took possession, and, after deposing the king, annexed the island to the British dominions.

Galle.—A sea-port and coaling station of the P. & O. Company, where steamers to and from Australia, China, Calcutta, and Madras, touch en route. Lat, 6° 1' N. long. 8° 14' E. High water at full and change 2h.; rise 2 feet.

The approach to the island on the outward voyage is exquisitely pleasing. In no part of the world is a more luxuriant vegetation to be found. There is a charming drive of six miles to Wakwelle; from the bungalow of which a very good idea of the scenery and farming may be had. The valley is devoted to the cultivation of padda, while the hills are covered with cinnamon, nutmeg, coffee, and the Ceylon tree par excellence, or cocoa nut.

At Galle you may see the Cingalese with his comb, flowing hair, and combay or white petticoat; the Tamil in turban and breech-cloth; and the Moorman, like the Cingalese, but clean shaved, with conical basket hat and long-pointed shoes. For the Veddahs, the real men of the woods, a long jungle trip must be undertaken. Quantities of sham precious stones are offered for sale by the Moormen; with ivory, ebony, porcupine quill, and other work. The pearl fisheries in the Gulf of Manaar have ceased to yield a revenue to government.

A fortnight may be well spent in Ceylon. To Colombo by coach in ten hours for 45s., halfway for tiffin, when raw oysters are to be avoided: it is mostly through groves of cocoa nuts and the cinnamon gardens, first planted by the Portuguese. A breakwater and harbour are in progress. Mean temp. 80°. From Colombo, by rail to Kandy, the capital of the old kings of Kandy, 2000 ft. above sea level, partly up an incline of extreme beauty. Here is the Temple containing the sacred tooth of Buddha; with the Botanical Gardens, and the fine specimens of talipat palm. It grows straight and tall, as large as the mast of a ship; a single leaf will cover fifteen men: when dried they fold up like a fan: every soldier carries one to serve for a tent. Kandy to Nuwera Eliya, 47 miles, through the best coffee districts in the island, and up the steep and grand Pass of Rangbodde 16 miles long. Nuwera Eliya is the Island Sanitarium, 6000 ft. above sea. Pedr tallagalla, the highest point in the island is 8300 feet above sea. Adam's Peak is 7280 feet.

Madras, the seat of a Presidency, on the Coromandel coast, lat. 13° 4' N., long. 8° 9' 16" E. Pop. 398000. Rail to Bombay, &c.

Calcutta, is the capital of Bengal, the seat of the Indian Government, and residence of the Governor-General of the British dominions in the East Indies. Pop. 795000. Lat. of Fort William 22° 34' N., long. 88° 17' E. Mean temp. 70° (Jan) to 86° (July.) High Water at noon's full and change 2 h. 30m. It is situated upon the river Hoogly, which forms the western channel of the Ganges, and is one of the principal of its numerous branches navigable for large vessels. The name is derived from Kalè, a goddess, and Cuttah, a temple, dedicated to the goddess Caly, which stood between the villages of Chultametty and Goburdpore, where the agents of the English East India Co.'s Service, in 1680, obtained permission of the Emperor Aurungzebe to establish a trading factory, which, in consequence of the disturbed state of the Province of Bengal, they were allowed to fortify in 1690. The city is about 100 miles from the mouth of the river, the navigation of which past Diamond Harbour, through thickly wooded scenery, is somewhat difficult, from the constantly shifting sandbanks.

The town and suburbs extend about six miles up along the left bank of the river. An immense square is in the middle, which, together with the adjacent buildings, forms what is properly called the Town of Calcutta. The intermediate space is the Esplanade. The Citadel of Fort William is the most regular fortress in India, but would require 10,000 men with 600 pieces of cannon to defend it. It was erected by Lord Clive, in 1757, immediately after the battle of Plassey. Government House, a Greek pile, the largest and most beautiful edifice in the town, was built by the Marquis of Wellesley on the west of the Esplanade. Here the Viceroy lives, and the Government business is transacted. The other public buildings are the Town House, Court of Justice, Hospital, and Jail, (all of which are within the Esplanade); a Cathedral, English, Portuguese, Greek, and Armenian churches, together with several small Hindoo pagodas, Mahommedan mosques, Sikh temple, &c.

Algiers is a port with a capacious and sheltered pier Harbour on the west side of a fine Bay, backed by hills, and not much inferior to the Bay of Naples. It was bombarded by Exmouth, 1816; and captured by the French, 1830. M. Grévy is Governor General. It has become of late years a great resort of the English, on account of the lovely climate, which, from October to March, is as warm as an English summer, and equal, if not superior to that of Egypt. Winter is not known; and snow is seen only on the distant mountains. Mean temp. 58° (Jan.) to 76° (July).

It consist of two towns, tier above tier; that is, the old Moorish town, of dazzling white houses, on the hill overlooking the beautiful Bay; and the new French town below, comprising many fine houses and regular streets, boulevards, quais, and squares built by the French. A statue of the Duke of Orleans, stands in Place du Gouvernement.

The Old Town has curious native streets, some not more than four feet wide, and fearfully steep. It is dirty but picturesque, abounding in specimens of Moorish architecture, shops and bazaars; and surmounted by the old Kasbah at the top.

Algiers is justly pronounced to be the best, or almost the best, place in the world for invalids, and especially consumptive or delicate ones, to winter in. The heat not too great; one degree of frost is the most ever known. December, January, April and May are delightful; February and arch are usually variable and wet. Carobs, oriental plane, and eucalyptus, are the trees chiefly seen in the streets. The fish market is worth a visit early in the morning; all kinds of Mediterranean fish, some of them of most brilliant colours, are to be had. Grapes are good, about 2d. per lb.; but not to be bought in winter; pomegranates only early in the season; dates, bananas and oranges are good and plentiful all the winter season. The hills are covered with fruit trees of every kind. Vegetation is extremely luxuriant. The roads are excellent.

There are plenty of pretty walks, rides, and drives in the immediate neighbourhood. Carriages and horses may be hired at reasonable rates. The beautiful suburbs of St. Eugène and Mustapha Superieur are dotted with villas, which may be rented, furnished or unfurnished, at 300 to 1000 francs per month, according to their size and distance from the high road.

Every plateau has a Moorish house on it white and simple, in the midst of scenery such as we read of in fairy tales. The very rocks are trellissed with creepers. There are several well-cultivated farms round Algiers; but native agriculture is in a state of infancy. Two pieces of wood nailed at right angles, with a third piece nailed across them, make a plough. The land is merely scraped, and the seed sown broad-cast.

OBJECTS OF NOTICE.—The Gov. General's Palace—permission to see which is readily granted. The Mosques, the oldest being Djama Kebir, of the 10th century. Take off your shoes at the doors.

The Cathedral, formerly a Mosque: with the Archbishop's Palace, in an old Moorish house. Several Orphanages, in charge of nuns. Museum and Library, in Rue Lothopage, containing many Roman stones and sarcophagi &c., from neighbouring sites, with illuminated Korans from the 14th century. Jardin d' Essai, or botanical garden, where specimens of the date and fan palms, bread fruit, and plantain may be seen, besides oranges and citrons. The Kasbah Barrack, an old Arab fort, at the top of the city, near the Palace of the last Dey; who here boxed the French Consul's ears, and so brought in the French. They landed at Cape Sidi Ferruch, near the Trappist convent. Arab Cemetery of Abd-er-Rhaman, with its mosque and tombs. Jewish burial places and tombs. Grotto, called the Negresses' Sacrifice, near the Seven Fountains Spring. Maison Carrée, or Prison, about 6 miles from the town, where there is good snipe and quail shooting.

Wild boar and gazelles may be found up the country; but if sand and rice sandy in "the Desert."

Among the people notice the Moors or Town Arabs, as distinguished from the wandering Arabs; and the aboriginal Berbers or Kabyles, who were not conquered by the Arabs.

EXCURSIONS.—To the Roman antiquities of Cherchell, ancient Cæsarea, the Mauritanian capital, destroyed by the Vandals. To Hammam Berda (21 m.) one of the valuable hot mineral baths or hammams which abound here. The H. Meskutine or ancient Aquæ Tibilitanæ, is in a fine spot, (50 m. from Constantine). In going up to the interior, the traveller passes from the Sahel or sea shore, through the Tell, or plains, to the Atlas mountains, or highlands beyond which is the Sahara or Desert.

CONVEYANCES.—Steamers from Algiers to Marseilles, Oran, and to Nemours, where Abd-el-Kader gave up to the French; from Algiers to Philippeville and Bona, the ancient Hippo, where St. Augustine was Bishop. Railway from Algiers to Blidah, Affreville (for Miliana) 5 m.; the Roman Maliana and a Sanitarium, on a beautiful spot in the hills, 2,400 feet high), Orleansville, and Oran (see p. 298). From Philippeville to Constantine (page 295), the Numidian Cirta. Blidah (Hotels, Géronde and d'Orient) is the head-quarters of the French cavalry; the horses are particularly good; about 120 Arab and Syrian horses may be seen in their stalls. Near Oran (H. de la Paix, first class family hotel, Place Kleber, the centre of the town. See Adv.) are extensive mines at Musselmoun, belonging to an English Co., under Mr. Hewitt. Mers-el-Kebir, the Roman Portus Divinus, is near a warm sulphur spring, good for skin & rheumatic diseases. Tlemcen (anct. Agadir) is 80 miles from Oran, along a wild road, past a salt lake. It has good mosques, and the tomb of the patron saint, Sidi-el Halou.

CYPRUS.

Cyprus, the latest acquisition made by England, called Kupros by the Greeks, Kibris by the Turks, Cipro by the Italians, Cypern by the Germans, Chypre by the French, is a famous and important island in the Levant, and the largest island in the Mediterranean after Sicily and Sardinia; 40 to 60 sea miles from the nearest mainland of Asia Minor and Syria, and 240 miles from the Suez Canal; in lat. 35° (the parallel of Malta and Algiers) and long. 32° to 35° east. It is about 125 English miles long, by 50 miles broad at the most, but narrowing to only 5 to 10 miles at the north-east horn, called Carpas, which is 23 miles long to Cape S. Andrea, and points to the Gulf of Scanderoon on the mainland. Area, 4,200 square miles—about the size of Inverness-shire. Pop. estimated at 180,000 to 220,000; of whom two-thirds are Christians, the rest Turks, hitherto the paramount race. By the Anglo-Turkish Convention of 4 June, 1878, it is to be occupied and administered by England for the Sultan, on certain terms, as long as Russia retains possession of Armenia; and is placed under the direction of the Foreign Office. By an agreement of 14 August, the Queen can make laws for the government of the Island, and for regulating commerce and consular affairs. There is a garrison of 1,000 English soldiers, for whom huts and barracks are built. Telegraph wires are laid from Nicosia, the capital, to Larnaca, thence by cable to Alexandria; to Limasol; and to Cape St. Andrea, thence by cable to Latakieh (in Syria). It was held by the early and later Greeks for ages; and thence the names are Greek at bottom, Italianised here and there, with a few Turkish additions. Turkish and Romaic Greek are the chief spoken tongues, with the Italian lingua-franca of the Levant on the coast; but English is declared to be the official language.

GOVERNOR AND COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF—His Excellency Major-Gen. R. Biddulph, C.B., R.A., Administrator and High Commissioner, assisted by a Council of seven members. Residence at the head-quarters, near Nicosia, the capital, 25 miles from Larnaca, the chief port, and 15 miles from Kyrenia. There are Civil Commissioners (styled Kaimacams by the people) and Assistant Commissioners at Larnaca, Limasol, Paphos, Famagousta, and Kyrenia.

CHIEF SECRETARY TO GOVERNMENT—Lieut.-Col. F. Warren. CHIEF OF POLICE—Major Bowlby. COMMANDING R. ENG.—Lieut.-Col. Dumaresq. CHIEF MEDICAL OFFICER—Dr. Adcock. JUDICIAL COMB. OF HIGH COURT—Sir Henry L. Phillips, C.M.G. AUDITOR AND ACCT. GEN.—J. O'Neill, Esq. STIPENDIARY MAGISTRATE—W. Willis, Esq. CUSTOMS—Mr. Corby. POST-MASTER—Mr. French. Letters weekly to England; 2½*d.* per ½-oz.; Cards and Newspapers (under 4-oz.) 1d; Books, ½d for 2-oz. Money Orders, see p. xlvii. TELEGRAPH OFFICE, at Nicosia; telegram to United Kingdom, 1s. 0½d. per word. CHAPLAIN TO FORCES—Rev. R. Rust.

British subjects will be governed by their own laws; and the natives will be governed by theirs, subject to such modifications as may be found advisable. The Cypriotes and Turks live very well together; the Cypriotes having enjoyed perfect religious freedom under Turkish rule. The native courts, administrative and judicial, are composed of mixed Turkish and Christian boards; in some cases elected by the people. A chief judge, or Hakim, presides over the central court, Nicosia. All Mussulman religious matters are regulated by a Mohammedan tribunal. The Cypriotes are a hard-working race, poor, but hospitable, dirty and uneducated. Brigandage is unknown.

The excess of the revenue, calculated on an average of five years, is to be handed over to the Sultan. Its various sources, the state of the public lands, public buildings, roads, bridges, etc., are to be reported on. The police force of 500 Zaptiehs is to be reorganised. Roads, bridges, harbours were ordered by the former Turkish rulers, but were never made; in fact, little was ever done except to draw money (20 million piastres) for the home government. A Roman road was made from Salamis (near Famagousta) to Paphos, about 100 miles long; but at present the only road, so called, is that from Larnaca to Nicosia; others are rough mule tracks. Roads and telegraph lines are being laid out by the Engineer corps; and a survey of the island is in progress. A line of railway is projected from Larnaca to Famagousta. When proper means of communication are opened, marshes drained, trees planted, and harbours and docks made by its new rulers, great material improvements will be certain to follow. Sir S. Baker advises the establishment of a Botanical Garden, and the planting of valonia, chestnut, mulberry, and walnut. About 20,000 eucalyptus trees have been planted in the marshes; they grow twelve or fifteen feet a year; are good as a febrifuge, and are not liked by locusts. There is a poisonous snake called "kouli."

The coast is indented by six bays—Famagousta, on the east side; Larnaca, south-east; Akroteri (or Limasol) and Episcopi, on the south; Chrysokou and Morphou, on the west. There is no sheltered harbour; the best anchorages are in the roadsteads at Larnaca, Limasol, and Famagousta, (near the ancient port of Salamis), all open to the eastward. Lights are shown at Larnaca, Cape Kiti (near the ancient Citium), and Cape Gata, in the Akroteri peninsula. Except in Famagousta and Morphou bays, the hills are everywhere conspicuous, and come down to the coast, sometimes very steeply, all round the island. Length of coast line 335 sea miles (390 English); of which the south side is 195 sea miles. (Admiralty Chart, by Capt. Graves, R.N.)

With respect to the interior, it is marked by two mountain ranges, north and south-west, separated by a level plain. The south-west or Olympus range, the main one, of round and swelling mountains, filling up one half of the area, about 70 miles by 20 to 25 miles, extends from the double-peaked Cape Arnauti or St. Epiphanius to Stavro Vouni, near Larnaca; and consists of igneous or plutonic rocks, bordered by stratified rocks of a gypsum, chalky, and sandstone character. The highest points are Oros Throödos (oros is mountain), the most elevated in the island, 6,590 ft. above sea and pine covered; Adelphi (two headed), 5,380 ft.; Machera, 4,730 ft.; Kicchou or Kiko (an old well endowed pilgrim church dedicated to the Virgin), 3,805 ft.; and Stavro Vouni (or Holy Cross), 2,300 ft., a table-topped hill, near Larnaca, with its church of St. Helena, at a fine point of view. The north or Kyrenia (Kerinia) range, about 20 miles by 10 to 15 miles, hugs the coast, from Cape Kormachiti, through Kyrenia, to Cape St. Andrea, at the end of the Carpas horn; and consists of rugged tertiary chalk and limestone rocks coming abruptly down to the sea. Highest points—Two peaks near the ancient Lapithus, 3,340 ft. and 3,315 ft.; Mount St. Elias, 2,810 ft.; and St. Hilarion (or Cupid) Castle, near Kyrenia; Buffavento Castle, 3,240 ft; Pentadaktylon, 2,480 ft., near Hagia Marina (ancient Kythræa or Kytherea), a charming spot among woods and streams · Kantara Castle, 2,080 ft. (a fine point of view); and Hagios Andronikos, 1,395 ft. The last two are in the Carpas peninsula. These hills are cool and healthy.

Between the mountain ranges is the middle region (meso-oros) or Plain of Messaoria and Morphou, 70 m. by 20 m., extending from the Bay of Morphou, past Nicosia, at the centre, to Famagousta Bay. It is nearly level, not much above the sea, and somewhat unhealthy; with a rich marly sandy soil, good for cotton land, and watered by the rivers Morphou, and Pidias, Pediada, or Pedeno, which rise in the Olympus range. The Pidias, the largest river in Cyprus, is 25 miles long down to Famagousta Bay, but dries up in summer like the other island streams, ending in swamps. Remains of subterranean drains of former days are found in the Plain. From St. Hilarion Castle, above mentioned, there is a fine view southward, over the Plain, with the Olympus range beyond.

A complete account of the Geology of the Island is given (with a large map) in a Memoire presented to the French Geological Society, 1859, by Dr. A. Gaudry; who was commissioned to report upon it by the French Minister of the day; and who wrote a report upon its Agriculture, 1855. No mining works are now carried on; but Dr. Gaudry found scoriæ and traces of old workings at several spots round the base of Olympus where the plutonic and sedimentary rocks come into contact; especially at Lithrodonta (ancient Tamassus), at Lisso, at Dginhoussa (where there is a gallery working), at Poli-tou-Khrysokou, at Lefcara, at Corno, and at Phinicarga, (near ancient Amathus.) Of copper, the Æs Cyprium and the Greek Cyprios, taking name from the Island, he found very few remains. It was extracted from chalcite ore, and used for vases, money, pins, and other purposes. Of gold, silver, lead, zinc, which old writers speak of, he saw no signs. Traces of iron were found in the scoriæ, with oxide of manganese, and peroxide or black manganese. Jasper, agate, opal, emeralds and diamonds are also mentioned by former writers. Cyprus umber makes a good ochre. There were potteries for the terra-cotta vases found in the tombs. Middling stone for building is abundant; but there is no true marble. Excavations like those at Rome, Paris, etc., are found near Poumo and Hagios Georgios (pronounced "Ghorghios"); which takes name from St. George, the favourite Saint of the Island.

Some old Cyprus coins bore a lion, as symbolical. It is said of the great heat. From May to October there is almost constant blue sky and no rain; July to September is hot and moist, attended with diarrhœa. October to March is rainy, with wind in January and February. April and May, when settled weather comes, are best for travelling (Mr. Ex-Consul Long). Average rainfall on the coast, 14 inches; in 1869, only 5¼ in. fell. In 1859-60-61 there was continual drought. The nights are cool, with a heavy dew; the days are tempered by a sea breeze. Fever and ague prevail in the undrained parts; but irrigation and planting, by which means the Venetians kept back malaria, will tend to correct these evils. The scirocco or south wind brought locusts formerly; but Von Löher, a late traveller, says there are none now. Cyprus promises to be a retreat for Egyptian residents in hot weather. It is naturally very fertile, as shown by the large population it maintained in Roman and Venetian times—"one million" it is said, during the latter period. A primitive style of agriculture, and a bad system of taxation are two great drawbacks. Only one-fifth or less of cultivable land is under tillage; the rest being left to thistles. Oxen are used for the plough. The northern parts are held by small owners; some estates rise to 3,000 acres. Ordinary price of land £3 an acre; but cotton land, on which a good sort is raised from American seed, is worth £10. Wages (round Athienau) are 5 piastres and food, for men; 3 for women. Money lenders charge 12 to 20 per cent. Land is measured by the skali of 60 paces square; one and one-third skali=one acre. Plenty of wheat barley, oats, are grown on the Messaria plain, but are badly threshed. Half a million gallons of Cyprus wine are still exported: it has a tarry flavour. The wine plants in Madeira were sent from Cyprus: and Pliny says the staircase of the Temple of Ephesus was made of Cyprus vine-wood. There are flourishing vineyards on the hills above Limasol. Other products are madder, opium, oranges and lemons, and pomegrantes (from Limasol), hemp, a little tobacco, olive oil, raisins, silk, and good carobs or locust beans (called also St. John's bread), which are exported to Austria and Russia. The "bucheramo cipriano," a fabric used by women, is referred to (Mr. Sala says) by Boccaccio. Sugar, once grown here, is now an article of import.

In summer the Island is covered with flowers; and green valleys and gardens of fruit abound. There are, it is said, "1000" different sorts of plants. Tropical plants grow well. Among timber trees are pine, olive, mulberry, and cypress (cupressus sempervirens), a tall slow growing native evergreen, famous for its hard wood, of which boxes and coffins were made:—

> In ivory coffers have I stuffed my crowns,
> In cypress chests my arras, counterpanes.—Shakespeare.

It takes name from the Island, and is said to be the "gopher wood," of which the Ark was built. Much of the wood on the Troödos heights and elsewhere, has been cleared away. There are 750,000 sheep and goats, beside cattle, small horses, donkeys and mules, and camels. Other animals are the fox, wild boar, mouffion or wild sheep, hare, patridge, bustard, quail, woodcock, snipe and wild duck, with the beccafico and ortolan. Revenue is drawn from tithes (or dimes); virghi or taxes on houses and land, trades and professions; a sheep and goat tax, duties on wine and stamps, customs, and salt from the lakes, at Larnaca and Limasol. The reserved rights of the Porte and the Sultan have been bought for £5,000 a year. The Island arms as they appear on Queen Elizabeth's tomb at Westminster are "barry of ten arg. and az.; over all a Lion rampant gu., crowned or."

Larnaca or Larnaka (from larnax, a coffer), sometimes called Scala, head of a district, chief port of the island, and the best place for large ships, on a winding bay of sand and shingle; 25 m from Nicosia, 230 sea m. from Alexandria, 250 from the Canal; in lat. 34° 55′ N.; long. 33° 38′ E. It is a dirty oriental town, in two parts, one called Marina, along shore, the other inland; made up of crooked narrow streets of sun-dried brick houses, backed by naked white hills. Stavro Vouni Convent is seen on a conspicuous hill to the west.

Population 10,000(?), lately increased by a rush from Alexandria, Syria, Malta, England, etc.; but many adventurers have left. Several Companies are already formed for various objects; one for an Hotel and Club.

COMMISSIONER.—C. D. Cobham, Esq.

SUPERINTENDENT OF PORT.—Capt. Bond. R. N.

POLICE MAGISTRATE AND SANITARY OFFICER.—Dr. Heidenstam.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE (Soc. P. G.)—Rev. J. Spencer, M.A., Chaplain, and at Nicosia.

BOATS to the shore, ¼ to ½ mile; tariff 1s. each way. With a rough sea the tariff is suspended.

BANKS.—Agency of Imperial Ottoman Bank; Anglo-Egyptian Bank.

MERCHANTS AND AGENTS.—Messrs. H. King and Co. No resident English Medical man.

MONEY.—English sovereigns, napoleons, rupees, Greek drachmas, Italian lire, Turkish pounds, etc. Turkish £=18s. 4d. Medjidie=3s. 6d. Copper piastre=1½d. Market value of £1 sterling is 175 piastres; but Government accepts it at 120 piastres; the copper piastre not being recognised for purposes of account. Paper currency worth about 55 per cent, but it varies. English coins of 1, ½, and ¼ piastre have been issued.

TELEGRAPH to Nicosia, Limasol, Alexandria, etc; telegram to United Kingdom 1s. 0½d. a word, or 1s. 6d. via Alexandria. Postage, etc., see p. 676. NEWSPAPER—the "Cyprus," in English and Romaic, weekly, with daily supplement.

STEAMERS.—Austrian Lloyd Comp. leave Trieste every Friday at noon, and arrive at Alexandria on Wednesday at 5 p.m.; leave Alexandria Friday for enoon and arrive (via Jaffa and Beyrout) at Larnaca Tuesday afternoon (9 days and 1½ days stoppage at Alexandria). Every alternate steamer from Alexandria goes direct to Larnaca, instead of via Syrian Coast, and the journey is then shortened by 2 days. French Messageries, from Marseilles, via Alexandria every alternate Thursday, at noon. Bell's Steamers weekly from Alexandria, in connection with the Indian Mail.

CONSULS.—Several resident here, but their functions are suspended pro tem. General di Cesnola, former American Consul, is author of "Cyprus, Ancient and Modern," one of the latest antiquarian accounts of the Island.

Everything has to be created here; rents and land, have greatly increased, and labour has doubled. It is hot and feverish about mid-summer; mosquitoes are troublesome; and flies and other insects abound. But the people are healthy in spite of dirt and neglect; and the place is sufficiently safe for strangers, if they take proper care of themselves, and attend to a simple diet. One good antidote to marsh fever is 1 to 2 grains of quinine in a mouthful of spring water; or Warburg's Tincture. A south-westerly breeze, called "imbatto," blows from 9 to 4 along this coast; succeeded by a land breeze at night.

There are few vehicles; and scarcely any roads but tracks for baggage animals. It has Greek churches, (at St. Lazarus are some English graves), a Cathedral, and College; Turkish mosques and minarets; a square Fort near the Custom House quay; Lazaretto for quarantine; Lighthouse; and is supplied with water from two or three old aqueducts. Ten arches of one are seen across a valley near the town. The few native shops, cafés, and bazaar of which it boasted till lately, are now supplemented by hotels, stores, etc.; a pier, market, and abattoir have been built, roads have been widened, and trees planted, under the new rule; gas and water works are in progress. Fish, vegetables, tomatoes, melons, and other fruit, are abundant. A fat sheep 11 or 12s.

TRADE.—In 1878, from 13th Sept. to 3rd Nov., 133 vessels were entered at the Custom House; and customs receipts for the three months following the English occupation, exceeded by 50 per cent the entire receipts of the previous year. In 1876 about 460 vessels entered and cleared; two-thirds of which were Austrian Lloyd Steamers. The trade in and out amounted to £360,000, of which the British was only one tenth. Exports exceeded imports by £200,000; and the articles exported (representing the produce of the Island) were cotton (a good sort, for France and Austria), madder, lamb and kid skins, sheep and goat skins, ox and cow hides, rags, linseed, sumach, timber, wine (for Egypt and Austria), locust beans, or St. John's bread (England, etc.), and silk and cocoons (to France). Imports—Cotton goods (from England, France, and Austria), tanned leather (Austria and Greece), tobacco (Greece and Egypt).

Behind Hagia Anna, the strata decline in such a way as to be good for the construction of artesian wells. A full list of the fossils belonging to the neighbourhood is given by Dr. Gaudry. The soil on the country behind is impoverished by having so much taken out and nothing put into it; but good drainage and careful cultivation may be expected to bring back the old fertility. One project is to cut a Dock between the sea and the salt lake, 2 miles inland. Amber and copperas are found near Larnaca.

There are two roads to Nicosia; a former mule track, viâ Athienau, and a camel track, viâ Dali, the ancient Idalium—where there is a sanatarium for the troops; with a hill station in progress at Matthiadi, 6 miles distant. The Athienau road, 25 miles long, now improved, strikes over naked white and brown hills, where vines, beans, thyme, furze, are occasionally seen. A small diligence drawn by mules and ponies, runs daily between Larnaca and Nicosia.

Nicosia, the Greek Leucosia (pronounced Levkosia or Levtosia), is the capital and seat of government, and of the Greek metropolitan, who has three bishops under him. Population 16,000. It is a walled town near the river Pidias, on the wide Messaoria plain, about 5 m. from the hills, 25 m. from Larnaca. COMMISSIONER—Colonel White. Sophokles Street (sokkos in Turkish, dromos in Greek), is 15 ft. wide. The Head-quarters Camp is outside, near the Paraskevi Convent; which stands on a hill full of fossil oysters.

The town consists of narrow, irregular, closely packed lanes, with broken pavements matted over for shelter against the heat, and supplied with rills of water from a conduit which goes round the walls and is fed by a branch from the Pidias. The houses are built of sun-dried bricks; there are few gardens. It is surrounded by ramparted walls, on which 40 old cannon are mounted, and in which are four gates. Guy de Lusignan, first king of Cyprus, a French crusader to whom Richard Cœur de Lion gave the island, 1191, fixed his seat here; and at one time it had "200 churches," some now turned into mosques. It was taken from the Venetians by the Turks, 1571, after a siege of 45 days.

Notice St. Sophia's Church, a massive but imperfect Gothic cathedral, now a mosque; where the Lusignan Kings are buried. (A gentleman living at St. Petersburg, styling himself "Prince of Cyprus, Jerusalem, and Armenia," claims to represent the family.) St. Dominic. St. Nicholas "of the English," an old round Church, late a granary, now restored for English use—Chaplain, Rev J. Spencer (as above.) It contians many tombstones of knights and ladies, with French inscriptions from 1322. Greek and Roman Catholic churches. The Konak or Governor's Palace, a large Gothic pile built by the Venetians, with a projecting porch; part is used as a prison. A dirty Bazaar; Khan or lodging place for travellers.

From Nicosia it is 15 or 16 m. over the hills, past Cato Dicomo to Kyrenia, a small port in a beautiful part, facing Karamania, with a massive square fort in its harbour. COMMISSIONER.—Captain Scott-Stevenson. There is good sport in Karamania.

Accomodation may be got at the Convents Distances from Larnaka by land, in English miles: 1. To the old Venetian port of Famagousta 24 m., which has room for a dozen ironclads in deep water; then past Salamis (where St. Barnabas was martyred) to Hai Theodore, 48 m.; Hai Simeon, 60 m.; end of Carpas peninsula, 90 m. Cape Grego, south of Famagousta, comes out in square scarped cliffs. 2. Past the site of Kiti, along the south coast to the site of Amathus, and Limasol, 42 m. ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE (C.C.C. Soc.)—Rev. H. Finlay, M.D., Chap This is the second port in the Island, where Richard Cœur de Lion married Berengaria, and which he gave to the Knights of St. John, whose naval station for protect on of pilgrims was here. Commanderial wine, raki, salt, and carobs, are exported. Baffo or Paphos, 84 m.; a beautiful spot with a temple originally Tyrian, at Hieros Kipos (the Sacred Grove), dedicated to Venus, the sea-born Aphrodite and Cyprian goddess, whose Adonis was son of a King of Cyprus. Here St. Paul converted Sergius Paulus, the Roman proconsul; and Elymas, the sorcerer, was struck with blindness. A Sanatarium and summer retreat are projected in the hills and pine-woods above. There are well-marked strata at Poumo Point, in Chrysokou Bay, round the west corner of the Island; not far from Karavastesi, the ancient Soli (founded by Solon), at the bottom of Morphou Bay.

Kiti, the ancient Citium (where Zeno the Stoic was born), or Kittim, supposed to represent one of the biblical "Isles of Chittim," is a port or site near Larnaca, where Gen. di Cesnola found the remains of two Phœnician and Greek Temples, and 2000 tombs (from 400 B.C.), with many statuettes of a rough character, Assyrian, Egyptian, Greek, now at New York. One coin was a relic of Sarron, 720 B.C At Dali, or Daly (ancient Idalium where Venus was worshipped), on the camel track to Nicosia, he found 8,000 tombs with thousands of vases and glass objects; and here Mr. Lang discovered a valuable bi-lingual inscription, now in the British Museum. At Kourion, near Amathus or Palæo Limosso (Old Limasol) large discoveries were made, 1866–76. At Golgos, new Athienau, are remains of two temples. Many terra-cottas, from 500 B.C., were found at Nicosia, on the site of the ancient town.

Distances from Larnaca, by sea, in sea miles (average 10 m. an hour). To Alexandria, 300 m.; Suez Canal, 250 m.; Jaffa or Joppa, the port for Jerusalem, 180 m.; Tyre and Sidon, 120 m.; Beyrout, under Lebanon, 110 m.; Mouth of the Orontes, 120 m.; Iskanderoon or Alexandretta, in the Bay of Issus, where Alexander defeated Darius, 150 m.; Mersina, across the Strait of Karamania, 120 m., near Tarsus, the birthplace of St. Paul, on the Kalo Cydnus, where Fred. Barbarossa was drowned; Crete, 390 m.; Rhodes, 300 m; Smyrna, 510 m.; Athens, 540 m.; Malta, 960 m. From Iskanderoon to Antioch up the Orontes, thence to Aleppo, and Balis, on the Euphrates, at the frontier of Mesopotamia, 150 m.

To suit the tides, it may be sometimes necessary for the boat to leave earlier than the advertised time; it is therefore necessary for Passengers to be on board the Steamers at least 15 minutes before the advertised Sailing to ensure their not being left behind.

First, Second, and Third Class Passengers will be conveyed from London to Paris, and vice versa, by the Trains and Steamers forming the Night Service.

All the London and Newhaven Special Trains call at Clapham Junction, Croydon, Red Hill Junction, and Lewes.

Holly, and the Mouth of France.—Passengers are booked through from London, and vice versa, by the route.

Through Fares—Single Journey Tickets—From London to Italy Available for Seventeen Days—Via Mont Cenis Tunnel & Modane.

These well-known magnificent Steamers, built in water-tight compartments are amongst the strongest, largest, fastest on the Atlantic, thereby reducing the passage to a minimum and giving especial comfort to passengers.

The Saloons, which are specially well lighted, ventilated, fitted with revolving arm-chairs, and luxuriously furnished are amidships, occupying the whole width of the ship. The principal State-rooms are amidships, forward of engines, where least noise and motion is felt; and all are fitted with late improvements, double berths, electric bells &c. Ladies' and Gentlemen's Sitting-rooms, pianos, libraries, barber's shops, bath-rooms, &c., provided.

The Steerage accommodation cannot be excelled. Passengers of this class will find their comfort and privacy particularly studied, and the provisioning unsurpassed.

Experience Surgeons and Stewardesses carried.

Saloon passage 15, 18, and 21 guineas, according to accommodation. Return Tickets at reduced rates.

Steerage passage to New York, Boston Philadelphia, or Baltimore, 6 guineas.

These Steamers have through booking arrangements for goods and passengers with the Erie Railway Company from New York to all points in the West South, North Western States, and Dominion of Canada.

Passengers forwarded, via San Francisco, to Australia, New Zealand, India, China, and Japan at lowest through rates.

For further particulars apply to JOHN G. DALE, 31 & 33 Broadway New York; ALFRED H. JOHNSON, 9 Boulevard Haussmann Paris; ELVIES and ALLEN, 99, Cannon Street, London E.C.; A. W. SUMMER TOUR TO THE NORTH CAPE.

Bergen-Nordland Steam Ship Company.

The magnificent scenery of the Norwegian coast between Christiania and the North Cape, may now be visited with the utmost comfort, by means of the weekly summer voyages of the Bergen-Nordland Company's Steamers, which sail from Christiania every Saturday, from Bergen every Wednesday, and from Drontheim every Saturday. These vessels offer in all respects a most agreeable home. The Saloons are cheerful and roomy, each being furnished with a Piano; the Cabins are airy and comfortable; the Cuisine excellent; the Captains and Officers all speak English; and the route from Stavanger north, lies for the most part inside a fringe of protecting islands, so that the water is almost always smooth. The North Cape is reached on the 13th day from Christiania, on the 9th from Bergen, and on the 6th from Drontheim. The route taken leads through the grand scenery of the Lofoten Islands, and ample time is given to visit the attractions of Bergen and Drontheim, and the interesting Lapp encampment in the neighbourhood of Tromsö. The arrival at the North Cape is timed so that the tourist may see the Midnight Sun shining on the Polar Sea.

Fares to the North Cape from Christiania, £7 7s. 9d.; from Bergen, £5 6s. 8d.; and from Drontheim, £4 0s. 0d. Return Tickets one and a half fare. Provisions 5/7 per day. Time-tables and descriptive programmes may be procured from Messrs. Thomas Cook and Sons, Ludgate Circus, London; Messrs. Thomas Wilson, Sons, and Co., Hull; and from Messrs. J. Currie and Co., Leith, also from the Managers of the Company, Messrs. Gundersen and Schöning, Bergen, Norway.

Sail during the Season for Islay, Oban, Fort William, Inverness, Staffa, Iona, Glencoe, Loch Awe, Tobermory, Portree, Strome Ferry, Gairloch, Ullapool, Loch Inver, and Stornoway; affording Tourists an opportunity of visiting the magnificent scenery of Glencoe, the Coolin Hills, Loch Coruisk, Loch Scavaig, Loch Maree and the famed Islands of Staffa and Iona.

These vessels afford in their passage a view of the beautiful scenery of the Clyde, with all its watering places, the Island and Kyles of Bute, Island of Arran, Mountains of Cowal, Knapdale, and Kintyre, Loch Fyne, Crinan, with the Islands of Jura, Scarba, Islay, Mull, and many others of the Western Sea; the whirlpool of Corryvrechan, the Mountains of Lorn, of Morven, of Appin, of Kingairloch, and Ben Nevis; Inverlochy, the Lands of Lochiel, the scene of the wanderings of Prince Charles and near to where the Clans raised his Standard in '45, Lochaber, the Caledonian Canal, Loch Lochy, Loch Oich, Loch Ness, with the Glens and Mountains on either side, and the celebrated Falls of Foyers. From Ardrishag to Ford, the route passes through the picturesque valley of Kilmartin and by Kilmartin Castle, Carnassarie Castle, Bull's Pass, Dog's Head Loch, and Ederline Loch. The attractions on Loch Awe are numerous. There are 24 Islands, many of them richly wooded, and crowned by the ruins of four Castles and two monasteries. At the foot of the Lake is the romantic Pass of Brander, where MacDougall of Lorne encountered the Bruce, and where Ben Cruachan rises about 4,000 feet from the Awe. Books descriptive of the Route may be had on board the Steamers.

Boulogne-Sur-Mer, Nos. 62, 83, 91, 93, 103, and 105, Grande Rue; 1, Rue du College, and 4, Rue Desille.

GEORGE HOWE, English Restaurateur, in consequence of the increasing support he continues to receive from Families visiting Boulogne, begs to state for the information of those who have not yet done so, that the arrangement, which after about 30 years experience, he has found most agreeable, is to furnish a sitting and as many bed rooms as may be required, Bed, Table Linen and washing thereof, knives, forks, spoons, glass and china—with attendance, kitchen fire and Board of his servants. The Family Dinner to consist of Soup or Fish, Joint and Poultry, or a made Dish with Vegetables, Tart, or Budding.

G. H. has in his employ first-rate Cooks. Dinner is always served in the sitting room at the hour desired, there is no Table d'Hôte, every thing is provided fresh each day, under the personal inspection of G. H., and of the best quality. The servants (chiefly English) are civil and well ordered, and as much at the control of the occupiers as if they were their own, and in each house, is one especially appointed for extra requirements. The Dinner is the only meal G. H. undertakes to provide. The usual agreement is by the week, and no notice is necessary before leaving, payment to the day of so leaving, only, is required to be included in the Bill.

As the terms must always be matter of arrangement, by sending particulars of what number of persons the party consists including children, and if the latter, whether a separate dinner is required for them, how many beds and rooms, &c. Information would at once be forwarded as to prices

There are no Extras whatever except for wines or fires for sitting room, and which can be supplied by G. H. or not. All postages pre-paid. [161

LACE MANUFACTORY.
DES MARES & WALKER,
15, RUE DE LA CHANCELLERIE, 15, BRUSSELS.
Near the Cathedral of Saint Gudule.

THIS MANUFACTORY, one of the most ancient in Brussels, celebrated for the Sale of Articles of the finest quality and texture. Mr. DES MARES, having all his Lace made by his own work-people upon the premises, as also in the neighbourhood of Brussels, where he has founded several Schools, is able to offer his goods at very low prices, (marked in plain figures) defying all competition, both as to richness of design and fineness of work. Visitors should be particular in not mistaking this establishment, or confounding it with other houses in the neighbourhood, and not to be misled by Guides or Commissionaires. The Trade Mark of the Firm is on a front window of the house, with the engraving of "a woman making Lace." "T. DES MARES," is written on the door of the house. Visitors are invited to inspect the work-rooms, where every description of Lace making is in process. Medals at several Exhibitions, also at the Exhibition of London, 1874, and the Great Universal Exhibition of Paris, 1878. Exhibitor at the coming Exhibition of Brussels May, 1880.

Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

The "TIMES," August 13, 1877.—"From our Correspondent with the Russian Army,—Okoum July 25.—The want of Sanitary arrangements in the Russian Camp was dreadful. I, myself, acquired a reputation as a doctor, owing to my being provided with a small bottle of Chlorodyne, with which I effected miraculous cures."

The "STANDARD."—"Shumla, August 12.—The climate in Shumla, and, in fact, in all towns in this country, seems fever laden. Quinine and Chlorodyne are consequently at a premium."

CHLORODYNE

is the best remedy known for COUGHS, CONSUMPTION BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA.

effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases known as DIPHTHERIA, FEVER, CROUP, AGUE.

acts like a charm in DIARRHŒA, and is the only specific in CHOLERA and DYSENTERY.

effectually cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, HYSTERIA. PALPITATION and SPASMS.

is the only palliative in NEURALGIA, RHEUMATISM, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, MENINGITIS, &c.

The Right Hon. EARL RUSSELL has graciously favoured J. T. DAVENPORT with the following:—

"EARL RUSSELL communicated to the College of Physicians that he received a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, December 1, 1864.

From Dr. B. J. Boulton & Co., Horncastle.

We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent direct Sedative and Anti-spasmodic. It seems to allay pain and irritation in whatever organ, and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other Sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after-effects.

CAUTION.—The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne render it of vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which bears the words, "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne."

Vice-Chancellor WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor o CHLORODYNE, ; that the whole story of the defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue.

Lord Chancellor Selborne and Lord Justice James stated that the defendant had made liberate misrepresentation of the decision of Vice-Chancellor Wood.

Chemists throughout the land confirm this decision that Dr. J. C. BROWNE was the Inventor of Chlorodyne.

Sold in Bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists.
